DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFFS OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

VALUE OF GOOD STATIONERY.

THE stationery which a business house uses in its correspondence will always be one of the first and most important criterions by which the world will judge that firm's standing. First impressions are lasting and in many cases the first impression that a correspondent gets of a firm's business methods is the stationery on which the correspondence is carried on. Cheap printing, or worse yet, poor writing paper without any printing at all, can hardly produce a favorable impression of careful, up-to-date methods. On the other hand, neat and cleanly printed stationery cannot help but give an impression of financial soundness, which evidences of seemingly lower standards in other lines cannot efface.

Many small retail merchants complain of the difficulty they find in procuring credit from large manufacturers. "We always pay our bills promptly, our credit rating is good, but there seems to be something else that is wrong which makes it so hard for us to get credit." This "something" which makes it so difficult for these merchants to get the desired credit is the carelessness shown in the get-up of their correspondence stationery.

In many instances, the appearance of the letters which merchants write to the manufacturers is so slip-shop and careless that the credit man rightly takes it for granted that that merchant is not running his business on lines which will enable him to take care of himself in competition with twentieth century methods, and therefore he is doubly watchful before he will take this merchant as an acceptable risk.

Nor is this effect of cheap stationery confined alone to dealings with the large manufacturers, but to the dealings with small customers, in the merchant's own city. If they receive letters and statements written on poor stationery they will have a correspondingly poor opinion of the merchant's methods and they will regulate their dealings with him according to this standard.

If, however, a merchant's stationery is neat, clean and attractive, it will at once produce a favorable impression both on the manufacturer and on the customer. The credit man will find it harder to refuse credit, and the small customer, impressed by the business-like appearance of letters and statements, will pay his bills more promptly and place greater confidence in any statement which a merchant may make in his letter.

Good business-like stationery is not expensive. In fact, it costs but little, if anything, more than cheap printing. Go to a good, reliable printer, and see to it that he gives you good service. An investment here will pay big dividends, but economy in stationery is a penny saved and dollars thrown away.

THE TELEPHONE.

ONE outward expression of the business is the girl who answers the telephone. What would you think if I told you that a prospective customer called you up the other day and that the nasty, harsh-voiced, ill-tempered treatment he received over the wire gave him a most disagreeable impression of your concern.

He got neither the telephone connection, the information, nor the consideration he expected—and you did not get the business. By such a slender thread sometimes hangs an order.

Or would you believe that a certain buyer intended to divide his order between your house and a competitor; that jewel of a girl answered the 'phone; her well-modulated voice, her respectful interest in his behalf, put hin in a pleasant and receptive frame of mind.

She said: "Mr. Blank is not in his office at the moment, but I shall send for him at once."

By being at the 'phone in person you got the entire order. Perhaps you recall the incident.

PRICING STOCKS.

THE inability to fix prices properly in one of the most prolific sources of failure in business." This remark was made by the manager of a large department store. In speaking of the various problems that confront the retailer, he said: "A great deal has been written on the subject of advertising, buying, and store management; but writers in trade journals have had very little to say about pricing goods. My experience has taught me that no branch of merchandising is more important or requires more careful study than does the pricing of the stock. Pricing goods is an art which requires much experience and rare judgment.

"In a great many stores it is the custom to fix prices on what is practically a horizontal basis of percentage. The merchant estimates the running expenses of the store at, say 15 per cent, to this he adds his profits which we will also call 15 per cent. This makes a total of 30 per cent which is added to the cost price on every thing in the store. Of course there are a few exceptions, but the merchant may be said to have but one percentage of profit on his entire stock. It saves trouble, perhaps, to mark goods in this way, but it is extremely poor business policy.

"There are many things to be taken into consideration in figuring prices. Competition is, perhaps, the strongest factor; but the nature of the goods and the demand for them are also important. Then, too, the style and popularity of goods give the price-maker an opportunity to display his judgment. For instance, in a lot of suits costing practically the same amount, some will, on account of the style, sell easily for a third more than others. The same is true of dress goods, silks, or in fact, almost any other class of merchandise. There are always some customers who are willing to pay a little more for style and the merchant who does not take advantage of this fact is not alive to his own interests. By marking up the more salable goods he is enabled to reduce the selling price on goods that are less desirable.

"Again, in pricing goods, the merchant will often find it a good advertising policy to mark certain articles down to a very narrow margin of profit. This gives a store the best possible kind of advertising, but it also cuts down the average of profit and every merchant is in business for profit; so, if some goods are marked down, others must be marked up to maintain the average.

"To sum the matter up, I would say that in making prices the merchant should use his judgment rather than a fixed scale. It is necessary to hold himself as nearly as possible to an average of profit but in different articles he should vary widely from the given percentage."

WATCHING THE ACCOUNTS.

ETERNAL vigilance is necessary in extending credit, not only to new accounts, but to many old ones as well. There is a constant tendency on the part of the purchaser to overbuy and to increase the standing balance. Payments are less than purchases, and if not guarded against the excess is soon out of all proportion.

A safeguard must be provided before the balance becomes too great. How then shall we check the rash buyer and stir up the slow payers?

Business must be done and we cannot draw the lines too tight without affecting sales.

We have developed a plan for regulating credits which is quite satisfactory.

On opening an account, we use Dun and Bradstreet as a preliminary basis. Both of these agencies, as well as the report of the salesman, are used to prepare a private mercantile rating.

This consists of a card system of the ordinary kind, ruled up to permit a full history of the customer.

No. 1.—Form of blank to show excess of amount purchased as against amounts paid. It is sent to the credit man by the bookkeeper.

Items are added from time to time, and eventually this private report arrangement contains more valuable information than could be obtained otherwise.

Form No. 1 is a statement furnished by the bookkeeper at intervals. As will be seen by the figures, the payments have been a little less than the purchases; and while there is no cause for suspicions, yet the alarm has been sounded and this particular account must be kept under constant attention.

Form No. 2 might be termed a restless watchdog that will not be pacified until proper action is taken.

This card (No. 2) is put into service, as already stated, as soon as an account becomes in any way under disapproval.

A cabinet arranged according to the days of the month is provided, and after sending out form letter "D," the card is moved ahead a sufficient number of days to permit a reply.

The "stock" requests for payments are sent out at intervals and the tone of each gradually becomes more imperative.

Salesmen and repeated "duns" proving ineffective, the account passes into the attorney's hands.

By guarding the account in this way, the losses are kept within reasonable limits.—Business World.

FAULTS AT THE START.

MAX FRANKENSTEIN writes: "After six years of observation in several of the largest establishments in New York, I find the great fault with most boys to be their fear of hard work or their bashfulness to do hard work; no matter which of the foregoing is the cause, they are all looking for 9-3 jobs—cinches, in plain words. They are filled with the idea that they know it all, and can, therefore, command large salaries.

"Fortunate indeed is the young man, who, on leaving school, secures a position that nets him $5 per.

"When we consider a little it is easy to see why large salaries are impossible.

"First, the young man must learn his business (this takes time); then he must learn to work properly (more time required); packing goods while looking out of the window is not attention to the work in hand, and it takes time to work steady without fooling. So until the young man learns his business and learns to work he is a loss to the firm. Hence the small salary.

"Even if you start on a small salary (most of us started that way), don't wear that I-don't-care expression, but put your shoulder to the wheel."

CAPTAINS OF INDUSTRY OF TO-MORROW.

IN the Atlantic Monthly for March, Mr. Henry A. Stimpson in his article on "The Small Business as a School of Manhood," asks the question : Inasmuch as the small business house is being replaced more and more by the great corporations and the trusts, and inasmuch as the great commercial leaders of to-day were trained in this small business, what effect will come to the business world from the fact that the young men of to-day have not the opportunity of this training ?

The problem is this : These few great corporations and trusts need men of remarkable superior ability and talent and wide experience to direct them. A man who has been a clerk all his life has gotten not only into the routine methods of a clerk, but his character has been more or less weakened by a lack of immediate responsibility, so that he is not fit for such a position by the time he reaches his fortieth year. The very methods of the trust have made it impossible for a man to gain such experience and develop his ability in a business of his own. Where, then, are those few great men to be found ?

The other day I asked the auditor of a great trust : "What is the method upon which your new business is being organized—to make a machine so perfect that no knave can take advantage of it, or to develop individual character to such an extent that the machinery will be relatively secondary ?" He looked at me for a moment, and then, with a curious smile, said : "The latter is what I should be glad to do, but my directors have different ideas. We are trying to make a machine which will be as absolutely perfect as possible." "Then," I said, "you will be beaten, for a man is always cleverer than a machine." "Yes," he said, "I fear so." He has himself since resigned and gone back into private business.

The great corporation is unquestionably the necessity of the hour. It will continue to take on constantly new forms of development. It is already playing and will continue to play a tremendous part in the progress of civilization. But its limitations are none the less real. The evils that are inevitably connected with it must be clearly realized if they are to be offset. Among them all none is so serious as this radical one of the effect upon the character of many of the employes, who, under former conditions, would have been either managing their own business or ambitious for the opportunity of doing so. The life, in a multitude of homes where the salary takes the place of business earnings, is doubtless calmer and steadier, and also in many cases ampler, in that the income is larger. A certain stability is hoped for in a society where anxiety over business conditions is exchanged for the contentment of an assured stipend. And the steadying and quieting of the temper, no longer made irritable by the daily anxiety, is unquestionably a notable social contribution.

WHY SHE DID NOT SUIT.

SENATOR DEPEW was discussing with a railroad president the difficulty of obtaining competent office help. "Not long ago," said the railroad man, "I engaged a stenographer who was highly recommended for efficiency and accuracy, but I found she wouldn't do at all."

"What was the trouble ?"

"Why, she wrote all my letters exactly the way I dictated them."

Professional Training for Business

THE higher institutions of learning in the United States and Canada are extending their teaching to the training of men for the world of affairs. Law, medicine, theology, engineering and teaching have the rank of professions, and the necessity for expert training for these careers is no longer questioned. Business as such has until recently been allowed to shift for itself. Here was one field, so it was said, in which a university education could be of no practical value. This was no place for theory. Business must be learned in the thick of the struggle. The four years devoted to a college education could not be spared from the apprenticeship essential to business success.

A Change of Attitude.

is now taking place on the part of the colleges, and the business world has met the college half-way. Business has become vast and complex. For the large problems now confronting it large men are needed. The success of the great corporation to-day depends primarily upon the possibility of securing not capital, but brains. Weakness in management cannot be tolerated. The price of inefficiency is failure. The business community has been compelled in self-defence to turn for aid to the institutions which have served other professions so faithfully.

Not all the universities have accepted the new task willingly, and even in those which have are many men who look with concern upon this attempt to "commercialize" collegiate instruction and to divert it from scholarly and liberal pursuits. It is asserted that institutions of learning are now to be employed in teaching men to drive sharper bargains and to magnify the importance of mere money-getting. But this is to misinterpret the spirit of the movement. Its purpose, beyond the obvious one of providing a sound business training, is, by means of the disciplined mind and the matured judgment, to develop a greater sense of social responsibility, a more generous and sympathetic view of commercial welfare, a spirit of self-sacrifice at present so foreign to the world of affairs. If it is replied that there can be no such thing as sentiment in business and that each man must look out for himself, this answer must be regarded as a severe arraignment of the existing order and a most effective argument for sounder and broader business training. A system of business education has no defence that fails to raise the level of industrial negotiation.

Business Can Be Taught.

The institutions that have undertaken this task insist that business can be taught. The multitude of details, varying with each industry and with the individuality of its director, must obviously be acquired in the industry itself, but the underlying principles that establish the relationship between an industry and the business world in general are proper subjects of instruction. Educational institutions can train for business so soon as businesses have evolved a body of principles capable of systematization and of scientific analysis. In this task of systematization, or even in the discovery of the principles themselves, very little of direct aid can be looked for from the business men who are unaccustomed to the consideration of their businesses from the pedagogical standpoint. This is the problem for the schools.

The Organization of the Work.

differs somewhat in the different institutions, but these variations can all be included under two general plans :

First, courses of study offered as a part of the university curriculum, open as electives to students, with a certain degree of sequence and unity in the work, assured through faculty supervision; and,

Second, distinct schools in which definite requirements are made for the completion of an organized course, with or without recognition at the end by a specific degree other than the customary academic degree.

The form of organization is not necessarily of importance, yet the character of the work done will eventually be shaped largely thereby. A well-organized "school" gives compactness to the work, renders possible an arbitrariness in requirements often necessary to insure all-round training, permits heavier demands and a more rapid pace, allows of a discipline that banishes the irresponsibility of academic life, thereby facilitating entrance upon the rigors of business, and develops an esprit de corps among the students that is a spur to effort. On the other hand, courses of training for business offered as electives in the general curriculum, granting maturity of mind and power of selection, have the advantage of being capable of introduction into the general course without disturbing the university's organization or increasing its machinery. It follows that the "schools" will, as time goes on, become more narrowly technical and will train their students for specific careers, whereas the university course will attempt only to offer such training as will give a broad underlying foundation for business in general. The colleges and universities have yet, however, made no such sharp distinction. The work is in brief as follows :

Nature of Studies Required.

Most of the schools require a certain amount of general college work as a prerequisite. This distinguishes them sharply from the so-called "commercial college," in which the instruction consists largely of clerical accomplishments, such as stenography, penmanship, and bookkeeping, and in which no preparation is necessary except in the most elementary branches. They usually expect two years of preliminary work, consisting of the regular college courses in mathematics, the sciences, languages, history, and economics. During this preliminary period the student is introduced, in some institutions, to the elementary phases of his later work. It is the general opinion, however, that this period of preparation should be undisturbed by the invasion of commercial work, for such work introduced thus early has a tendency to absorb a young man's attention before his mind has been disciplined to handle it to advantage, and deprives him of his only opportunity to secure anything that approaches a general education.

Commercial Courses.

Coming now to the commercial courses themselves, certain work is regarded by most of the institutions as essential for all students, regardless of the business for which they are preparing themselves. This includes :

1. Business law, which involves a brief consideration of contracts, sales, bills and notes, carriers, agency, and corporations, the object being not to train the student to be an expert in law, but to equip him for the better administration of his business; not to make it possible for him to dispense with the services of a lawyer, but rather to enable him to know when to seek legal advice.

2. Corporation finance, including a knowledge of securities, their methods of handling, the financing of large enterprises, and the workings of the money market.

3. Modern language—German, French, and Spanish—which is of growing importance, as there are very few businesses of any extent to-day that are not engaged in international negotiation.

4. Domestic and foreign trade, including commercial geography or the distribution and handling of commercial products; the technique of industry, covering sources of raw material, processes of manufacture, and markets; transportation, both domestic and foreign, with the methods and facilities employed.

5. Modern advanced accounting and auditing. In addition, the sciences, especially chemistry, physics, and mineralogy, are prescribed for some businesses, particularly in the field of manufacturing, and in some schools elementary courses in engineering are offered.

With these courses as a basis, a number of institutions are offering training for specific careers. Thus far they have quite generally confined themselves to banking and private finance, transportation and insurance. Training for journalism is announced in one or two instances, but this has not become general, for it is recognized that the best preparation for this career is to be found in a thorough equipment in English, history, economics, and the problems of present-day industry rather than in instruction in the art of journalistic work.

From the standpoint of the business community to-day a degree is of no importance. From the student's standpoint it is a much-desired recognition of work done. If business is to become eventually a profession in the best sense, it is desirable that a degree should be created as significant as that now conferred upon engineers. The customary academic degrees are not adequate.

College Man in Favor.

The attitude of the business community toward the college man trained for business is becoming constantly more favorable, as it is toward college men in general. Formerly the prejudice against them was strong, and it was in part justifiable. Many a young man just out of college, with exaggerated ideas of his attainments and capacity, was unwilling to gain his experience in humble positions. An unfortunate experience with one individual was often sufficient to prejudice a business man against the college graduates as a class. This prejudice seems to be disappearing before the more rational attitude of the college graduate and the greater appreciation of his real worth by his employer. It is becoming common for many large concerns, such as the electric companies and the life insurance companies, to send representatives to the colleges every Spring to select the most desirable men from the graduating classes. These companies frankly admit the superiority of the college-trained man. A prominent American railroad president perhaps expresses the view of the majority of broad-minded business men when he says: "In selecting help we should give preference to a college-educated man, all other things being equal, and we have no prejudice against them. As a general thing, we find college-bred men capable of reaching a higher standard in the service in shorter time than those who lack the mental training that goes with education, provided they are willing to take hold in a subordinate place and work as others are willing to work who have not had their advantages."

Demand for College Trained Man.

The superiority of the college-trained man in business once admitted, the demand for men specially trained for this work follows as a matter of course. Such objections as come from the business community come from what may be regarded as special sources. Men who have built up successful businesses through personal invention and skill resent the suggestion that any school can teach a young man their methods. The obvious reply is that no school would attempt to do so. For business of this character (and they are mainly manufacturing businesses) only the broad underlying principles affecting the industry would be the subject of instruction. Detailed study has confined itself thus far to those businesses which are either quasi-public in their nature or whose organization is a matter of such general knowledge that they have become affected with a public interest.

That the demand for specially trained men has already begun is shown by letters from the directors of some of the schools. One writes:

"I could have placed a dozen graduates this year if I had had them. I have been asked to supply three or four graduates for administrative work in one of the great electrical companies, and a similar request has come from at least one of the larger insurance companies. One or two railroad men have undertaken to provide places in auditing, accounting, and similar departments for students through the Summer, in order to test them so that any man specially fitted for the work might find a permanent place with them. One of the largest auditing companies has asked me for men whom I could not supply. The point is that the business men are interested enough to give the students opportunities to get acquainted with the practical side and to try them."

How the Student Looks at It.

The attitude of the students themselves toward this new form of education is not the least gratifying phase of the movement. Attracted by the opportunities opening everywhere for the exercise of power and responsibility, college men are inclining more and more toward business as a career. Statistics have frequently been compiled which show this tendency. Of this year's graduating class in a leading university, numbering 313, 112 will go into business, 85 into law, 24 into medicine, 25 into teaching, 9 into the ministry, and 26 will do special work, in many cases of a business character. It should be noted further than many who pursue law studies have business as their aim and should be classed with business men. It is through the legal profession that our business life is receiving many of its strongest recruits. There seems to be no good reason for doubting that business will in time follow law and medicine and rise to the dignity of a real profession.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH AUSTRALIA.

That Canadian manufacturers are rapidly coming to the front in Australia under the stimulus of a prospective preferential tariff is evidenced by the number of agents and travellers now showing samples in Melbourne and Adelaide, and the number of orders being forwarded to Canada. The Canadian Government agent in Australia points out that importers there are disposed to give Canadian goods the preference over foreign goods, everything else being equal.

One Canadian traveller reports that owing to the preferential tariff in New Zealand he was able to deliver goods there duty paid at 11 per cent. less than foreign goods of a similar class.

Agriculture in the Northwest

THE Canadian Northwest is today the attractive point for a greater number of desirable settlers than any other country on the face of the globe, with its magnificent area of grain and grazing lands admittedly the most productive on the North American continent. These have attracted no less than 700,000 settlers during the past seven years, 150,000 having come during 1902 and 1903, and the tide of immigration is sweeping on with unprecedented rapidity. It is difficult to realize the vastness of this magnificent agricultural country and its unlimited resources, which are only mildly described by saying it extends from Lake Superior on the east to the Rocky Mountains on the West, a stretch of nearly 1,200 miles, and from the 49th parallel on the south northward nearly 500 miles, containing 385,000,000 acres. It is literally a land of promise to the farmer, with its many millions of acres adapted to wheat growing, and only a relatively small portion turned by the plough as yet.

A Ten-mile View of a Prairie and Wooded District in the Northwest.

Manitoba.

In 1870 the agricultural production of Manitoba, with its area of 41,169,098 acres, found no place in the records. In 1881 it was credited with producing 1,000,000 bushels of wheat on an acreage of 51,300, and 1,270,268 bushels of oats. In 1902 the acreage of Manitoba was 3,189,015, 2,039,940 of which was in wheat, producing a yield of 53,000,000 bushels. The acreage under crop in 1903 was 3,757,173, with 2,442,873 acres in wheat, and the production of wheat 40,116,878 bushels; 855,431 acres of oat crop yielded 33,035,754 bushels; 326,587 acres yielded 8,707,252 bushels of barley, and 21,198 acres, 4,757,000 bushels of potatoes, a total of nearly 100,000,000 bushels. Cultivated grasses yield about two tons per acre, and native grasses a ton and a-half.

An authority on the Canadian West recently said:

> The rich soil and favorable climatic conditions of Manitoba are as a bank account, upon which present farmers in the province are not yet drawing more than a portion of the interest accruing from year to year. Only when 20,000,000 acres of their heritage are actually cropped will they realize what the account to their credit is; 4,000,000 acres are now under cultivation. These lands can still be purchased at from $5 to $40 an acre. Resident farmers, whose lands are valued today at from $15 to $40 an acre, are realizing a revenue from the same equal to seven per cent. on an investment of more than double this value.

The average Manitoba wheat yield per acre in 1903 was 16.42 bushels. The following table gives some idea of the producing capacity per acre of Manitoba land, as compared with that of the wheat-raising belt in the United States:

During the year 1902, 50.7 per cent. of all the wheat officially inspected at Winnipeg graded No. 1 hard, and 30.6 per cent. No. 1 northern, making eighty-one per cent. of the total receipts fall within the two highest market grades. During the same time only one per cent. of the receipts at Minnesota were hard, and twenty-two per cent. No. 1 northern; only twenty-three per cent. of the total receipts represented the two highest gradings.

That there has also been a satisfactory growth in the dairying industry of Manitoba is shown by the fact that the dairy produce for 1902 was valued at $747,604. This industry is likely to assume phenomenal proportions in the near future. During the Winter of 1902-03, 13,986 head of cattle were fattened, while the number of milch cows in the province was 126,846.

Grain and Root Crops in the Northwest.

Assiniboia.

This district, to the west of Manitoba, containing 34,000,000 acres, is in part a continuation to the westward of the grain-growing areas of Manitoba. In Eastern and part of Western Assiniboia excellent crops of wheat, coarse grains and vegetables are produced, and the climate answers all requirements, for the production of No. 1 hard wheat, for which Western Canada is noted the world over. This district, in conjunction with the Province of Manitoba, will one day be one of the greatest wheat-producing sections of the American continent, and for the following reasons: 1—It has a soil particularly rich in the food of the wheat-plant. 2—It has a climate that brings the plant to maturity with great rapidiy. 3.—On account of its northern latitude it receives more sunshine during the period of growth than the country to the south. 4.—Absence of rust due to dryness of climate. 5.—Absence of insect foes.

The possibilities of Assiniboia in wheat growing are shown by the averages of tests made at the experimental farm in 1902, when eleven varieties of the most suitable wheat, sown on April 19, were cut in 130 days, and yielded 4,314 pounds of straw and forty-three bushels and two pounds of grain per acre. The cultivation of flax is carried on in Western Assiniboia to a large extent and a number of farmers are reported to have paid the entire cost of their farms from the yield of the first flax crop. By far the most important industry in Western Assiniboia, however, is that of ranching. The wide stretches of prairie afford excellent grazing for sheep and cattle, and indirectly splendid returns to the stockman, who gets from $40 to $50 for steers which cost him only the interest on the original investment of stocking the ranch, and his share in the cost of the annual round-up. Dairy farming has also become exceedingly popular in this section of Western Assiniboia, where the natural grazing advantages enable one to keep a large number of cattle, which need no feed except for short intervals during exceptionally stormy weather in the Winter months.

Saskatchewan.

Saskatchewan, lying north of Assiniboia, is the largest of the four provisional districts carved out of the Territories by the Dominion Parliament in 1882. Its area is 106,700 miles, and may be described as well suited by climate and soil for the raising of wheat, cattle and sheep. The crops consist of wheat, oats, barley and potatoes, while turnips and all kinds of vegetables are raised successfully. The normal yield of wheat (Red Fyfe) is about thirty bushels to the acre in favorable seasons, and of oats about sixty bushels. The country is also remarkably well adapted for stock raising, and large shipments are made annually. Almost any portion of this district answers all the requirements for dairy farming which is already being carried on extensively.

Alberta.

The district of Alberta contains 106,100 square miles, and comprises within its limits two divisions showing marked distinctions in topographical and climatic conditions. The southern is an open rolling country, devoid of timber, except along the streams and in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, and is essentially a ranching and dairying country, offering unequalled opportunities for effort in those directions. Cattle, horses and sheep graze outside during the whole year, and hay is easily and cheaply secured for weak stock. With good management the profits to stockmen are large, $40 and $50 per head being paid for steers during 1903. Large bands of young stock are annually brought in from Eastern Canada and some of the Western United States, to be fattened on the ranges, the profits being sufficiently large to amply pay for reshipment, after fattening, to European and other eastern markets. Mixed farming is successfully carried on somewhat generally.

Dairying is carried on with great success, the country being pre-eminently fitted for it. To a wide range of the best wild pasture are added an abundant water supply and shading and sheltering groves of trees. During the Summer season the averages are for each cow four and one-half gallons of milk per day, and six and one-half pounds of butter per week.

In Southern Alberta irrigation is largely resorted to in producing grain and fodder crops; by this means returns of the most satisfactory character have been obtained. The many streams flowing down from the mountains afford bountiful supplies of water for this purpose, and at the present time some three hundred miles of ditches and canals have been constructed to carry water for irrigation. These streams also afford an unfailing supply for stock and for dairy operations.

During the past two or three years great success has followed the growing of Winter wheat. This has been particularly the case in Southern Alberta, in the neighborhood of the foothills, north of Calgary, and around Lethbridge, Macleod, and Claresholm. Reports at hand show a yield of forty-five bushels to the acre. Fall wheat is also being successfully produced in several sections of Alberta.

The great fertile valley of Northern Alberta is suited to grain raising, mixed farming, ranching and dairying, all of which are profitably carried on. In ordinarily good seasons the regular yield is sixty to seventy-five bushels of oats, averaging forty pounds to the bushel, while barley will yield sixty bushels, wheat over forty, while potatoes of from two to three pounds' weight are not a rarity. There is also a varied and nutritive pasture during a long season in Summer, an abundant supply of hay procurable for Winter feeding, and an abundant and universally distributed water supply which makes stock raising profitable in the extreme.

The following tables represent comparatively the area of acreage and yield of the principal cereal crops in the Northwest Territories:

Wheat.

Year.	Acres.	Bushels.	Yield per acre.
1898.....	307,580	5,542,478	18.01
1902.....	625.758	13,956,850	22.30

Oats.

Year.	Acres.	Bushels.	Yield per acre.
1898.....	105,077	3,040,307	28.93
1902.....	310,367	10,661,295	34.35
1903.....	214,409	7,600,000	35 51

Barley.

Year.	Acres.	Bushels.	Yield per acre.
1898	17,092	449,512	26 19
1902.....	36.445	870,417	23.88

The total acreage of barley, wheat and oats for 1903 totalled 903,211 acres, and the production therefrom 20,509,000 bushels.

A recent estimate has been made of the quantity of grain Manitoba and the three Southern Territories may be expected to yield. The census returns of 1901 show that these regions had 3,600,000 acres under crop. The number of acres under crop in 1903 was 4,687,583, an increase of over thirty per cent. Assuming that the area of Manitoba and the three territories is 228,000,000 acres, and that, of this, 45,000,000 are available for wheat, oats and barley, the calculation will result in showing that in twelve years the whole 45,000,000 acres will be taken up, while the output at the present average per acre will be:

	Acres.	Yield bushels
Wheat	29,700,000	750,000,000
Oats	11,250,000	528,000,000
Barley.....	4,050,000	141,750,000

From the rate at which population is pouring into these regions it is safe to say that the 45,000,000 acres will be under the plough and yielding a harvest long before the expiration of the term of years mentioned.

By that time double the number of acres will be ready for the farmer, and still there will be 138,000,000 acres to be brought under the plough.

MR. ALEXANDER MacLEAN.

MR. ALEXANDER MacLEAN, of Ottawa, who has been appointed Canadian Trade Commissioner to Japan, has had a wide and varied experience. His parents, who were natives of Inverness-shire, Scotland, came to Canada in 1832, and took up a farm in South Dumfries, Brant County, where the subject of this sketch was born two years later. Having followed the usual occupations on the farm and attended the public school and later the grammer school in Paris, he became a school teacher at 20 years of age, which occupation he followed for a year. After serving an apprenticeship in a general store at Ayr, he went to Stratford, where he engaged in the lumber business.

In 1861 he made another change and established the Mitchell Reformer, which he conducted until 1865, when he assumed editorial responsibility for the Cornwall Freeholder, the home organ of the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald. There he remained until 1872, when he was appointed Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Globe, a position which he filled to the entire satisfaction of Mr. Brown and of the Reform party generally during the exciting time of the Pacific scandal. In 1874 he retired from the Globe staff and joined John C. Roger in the purchase of the Ottawa Times, which they conducted for two years in the Reform interest and then sold to the late A. M. Burgess, afterwards deputy minister of the interior. In the meantime the firm of MacLean, Roger & Co., had secured the contract for the parliamentary and departmental printing of the Dominion Government, which was renewed on several occasions until the Government established the printing bureau in 1888. In conjunction with Mr. Roger and others, Mr. MacLean established the Canadian Granite Co., and later the Ottawa Granolithic Paving Co., of both of which he was president. In 1894 and 1895 he was also managing director of the Montreal Herald. Mr. MacLean has always taken deep interest in public and municipal matters. For four years, 1887 to 1894, he acted as alderman in Ottawa, and during the latter year, as chairman of the Street Railway Committee, he took a prominent part in the negotiations leading to the construction of the Ottawa Electric Railway. He has been president of St. Andrew's Society, of the Ottawa Art School, and of the Central Canada Exhibition Association. In politics he has always been a Liberal, and for a term he held the office of president of the Ottawa Reform Association. He belongs to the Masonic Order, being a past master of the Cornwall lodge, which he joined in 1868.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

FLOUR TRADE IN JAPAN.

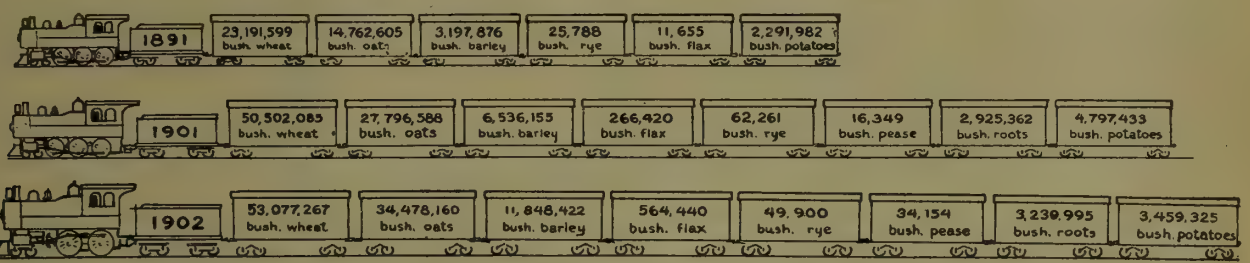
THE importation of flour into Japan was much greater in 1903 than in the preceding years, and, although this increase has been ascribed to war preparations, there is reason to expect a continued expansion of the market for this commodity in this country. In 1901 the importation of flour amounted to 81,000,000 pounds; in 1902 it was a little more, but in 1903 it increased to over 269,000,000 pounds, or more than three times as much as in 1901.

Wheat flour has largely displaced rice flour in the preparation of many Japanese sweets and cakes, and a great deal of the former is now used for this purpose and for paste for the manufacture of fans, screens, etc. For this reason Japanese dealers prefer flour rich in starch and dextrin, being less particular about the whiteness; thus the flour which ranks best in the home market sometimes proves less acceptable to the Japanese than that which is considered inferior in Canada, and exporters should bear in mind this difference in the requirements of the market.

Among the Japanese, wheat flour is not yet generally used for making bread, but a few are beginning to vary their diet by its introduction, and in the further development of this tendency lies the possibility of an immense market for the product of Canadian mills. It has been said that a Japanese eats on an average one pound of rice per day. The country, exclusive of Formosa, has a population of 42,300,000, and therefore the nation must consume as food 15,439,500,000 pounds of rice per annum. The official report of the amount of rice raised in Japan increased by the excess of imports over exports shows that more than 16,000,000,000 pounds were used in each of the years 1901 and 1902. If the people of the country should vary their diet by the use of bread in place of one-half the rice now consumed, the amount of flour required would be nearly thirty times as great as the unprecedented importation of 1903. Such a change in the diet of the nation is not a future improbability, providing a pound of flour continues to be furnished the consumer at the same price as a pound of rice, and is found to possess equal nutritive value.

Under these conditions, who is to raise the wheat and manufacture the flour to meet such a demand? Canada is already seeking an outlet for the products of her extensive, fertile fields. During the Osaka exposition of last year the agents of Canadian firms were systematically and actively engaged in exhibiting the superiority of their flour, and this activity is already bearing fruit in increased exportations to Japan.

It rests altogether with Canadian millers to make the best use of the splendid opportunities within their reach at the present time for the extension of trade with Japan. With her enormous wheat-growing areas it looks as if the possibilities of the flour export trade in Canada will be practically without limit in the near future. It is well known that two big Canadian milling concerns have already been meeting with phenomenal success in their export trade which may be considered merely as a foretaste of what is in store for the milling industry of Canada as a whole.



Increase in harvest of the chief Canadian cereals and roots.

Export Trade in Breadstuffs.

DURING the year 1903 Canada exported to foreign countries, principally Great Britain, wheat to the value of $24,566,000, flour to the value of $4,699,000, oats valued at $2,583,000, and oatmeal valued at $537,000. Exports of barley in 1903 were valued at $457,233, beans at $79,621, buckwheat at $175,394, Indian corn at $36,325, peas at $1,052,743, rye at $269,952, all other grain at $3,299, malt at $7,415, Indian or cornmeal at $4,993, and all other grain products at $26,223—making a grand total of exportations of breadstuffs from the Dominion of Canada during 1903 of over $34,500,000, as compared with $17,525,915 five years ago, an increase of approximately 100 per cent. Of the total wheat exportation of Canada in 1903 $22,999,745 worth went to Great Britain, and $536,264 to the United States. The States bought oats from Canada to the extent of $39,062, while Great Britain's importations amounted to $1,861,661, while other grain was exported to these countries to the value of $73,679 and $573,649 respectively. Great Britain took peas to the value of $476,714, and the United States to the value of $210,033. Exportations of wheat flour to these countries were valued at $2,358,667 and $68,216, and of oatmeal $180,458 and $888 respectively.

These figures represent, however, a small portion of the grain products of Canadian farms. The value of the cereal production of the Canadian Northwest alone for 1903 is estimated at about $55,000,000. Of this wheat, which is a cash crop, will bring in nearly $45,000,000, while there remains some 40,000,000 bushels of oats and 11,000,000 bushels of barley, representing alone a value of about $12,000,000. Only 10 per cent. of all this is sold, the balance being used at home by farmers as feed for their stock.

In this connection it must be remembered that Canada is just beginning to realize her possibilities in the production of breadstuffs. At the present time only a small percentage of the acreage suited to the production of cereals is under cultivation, and Canadian milling institutions, as far as export trade is concerned, have but recently sprung into existence, so to speak, even if they are able to show an output of manufactured grain products for export trade valued at $5,500,000. If the present rate of increase is kept up, there is no question that these figures will look very small and ordinary when they are compared with those of Canadian exportations of breadstuffs a few years hence. It is interesting to note that the relative increase in Canada's general export trade, in which breadstuffs figure largely, during the past 10 years has been greatly in excess of that of any other country in the world.

According to an American financial writer the production of wheat in the United States is not keeping pace with the growing domestic demand. The result is gradually decreasing supplies for export. If such statements be true, the United States through the years to come will have smaller and smaller quantities of foodstuffs for export, and the natural deduction is that Canada will more and more be called upon to furnish the food importing countries with the breadstuffs which they require.

One hears Canada spoken of these days as the granary of Great Britain. The English market imports wheat to the extent of 150,000,000 bushels a year, of which Canada supplied 32,985,745 bushels in 1903. Reckoning roughly Canada will have to increase her total exportations about 5 or 6 fold in order to supply this market. Since 1896, or in 7 years, these have increased three-fold and over. The deduction follows that in 10 years or less Canada will be able to supply Great Britain with all the grain she requires.

On the occasion of a recent visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the Corn Exchange, London, England, one of its leading members is reported to have made the following statement :

"When it is borne in mind that 80 per cent. of the breadstuffs of England has to be brought from abroad it may be readily appreciated with what great satisfaction Englishmen view the large and steadily increasing supplies of grain which are annually available for export from Canada; and I challenge contradiction when I say that of the wheats imported by England from Russia, India, the Pacific, and the length and breadth of the United States, none gives more general satisfaction, and none is more generally appreciated than that raised in Canada—and particularly that from the Northwest.

"We look forward to the time when at the present rate of progress, the Dominion of Canada will have a sufficient surplus of wheat to render Great Britain independent of other sources of supply."

Milling in Canada.

IN company with the development of the western wheat fields, the milling industry of Canada is striding forward. Out of a total of some 2,500 mills scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, fully 200 have capacities of over 200 barrels per day, whilst the largest mills are capable of producing between two and three thousand barrels every twenty-four hours. The value produced has increased annually. In 1871 the output aggregated $39,135,919. In 1881 the total reached $41,772,372, and in 1891 it grew to $52,423,286. A conservative estimate would place the present output at $70,000,000. Though apparently few men are employed in the mills and the machinery seems to do everything by itself, yet no small portion of the population of Canada is given employment both directly and indirectly by the milling industry. Mechanics are required to keep the machinery in repair, engineers to run it, coopers to make the barrels and other employes to sew the sacks, not to speak of the millers themselves, who perform the actual work required in grinding wheat. Were the industry to be removed from the country, the first shipment was made is unknown, but it is a matter of fact that in 1793, 10,900 barrels left the port of Quebec for the old world. This statement is authenticated by Bouchette, who gives a table of the exports for several successive years.

At the opening of the century the average annual exportation from Canada reached 20,000 barrels, which was increased to 45,000 in 1820. About this point the figures fluctuated, until probably 1830, when a rapid increase took place, bringing the exportation up to 490,335 barrels in 1849. The next decade witnessed a still further advancement, so that in 1860 over 850,000 barrels left the country.

The period from 1865 to 1895 was one of stagnation so far as the export trade was concerned. The average annual exportation did not pass much beyond 300,000 barrels, though in some years results were more satisfactory than in others. A considerable development is to be noted since 1895 and the average over the years 1898 to 1903 inclusive has exceeded 1,000,000 barrels per annum.

WHEAT VERSUS FLOUR.

The question naturally arises at this juncture as to whether Canada is exporting as much flour to-day in proportion to her exportation of wheat as she did at various periods in her past history. If this is found to be the case, the outlook is rendered so much the more hopeful. Beginning with the year 1870, the proportions range as follows: In that year 9 bushels of wheat were exported to every barrel of flour; in 1875, 14 to 1; in 1880, 9 to 1; in 1885, 19 to 1; in 1890, 4 to 1; in 1895, 39 to 1; in 1896, 53 to 1; in 1897, 18 to 1; in 1898, 14 to 1; in 1899, 13 to 1; in 1900, 22 to 1; and in 1901 only 9 to 1.

Now, considering that it is only within the last few years that the production of wheat in Canada has been increasing with any great degree of rapidity, it is most gratifying to find that milling has kept pace so well with its forward strides. For a time, in the early nineties, it seemed as if wheat would take and keep the lead, but the experience of the past five or six years has shown this to be as yet impossible. What the future will bring about is necessarily uncertain.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The situation of the milling industry in Canada at the present day is practically this. There are a good many well-equipped mills of medium size in Ontario, which, besides grinding wheat grown in the province, also turn a good deal of Manitoba wheat into flour. In addition, there are several large mills in the west, devoted exclusively to making flour from Manitoba wheat. The mills throughout the rest of the country, with a few exceptions, simply supply local needs. As a result a great portion of the surplus output of the larger mills is required to supply the demand in the Maritime Provinces, Newfoundland and such parts of the country as have no mills. The excess over and above this is available for export.

Great Britain affords the best market for Canadian flour. There is a demand there estimated at probably $450,000,000 a year. Of this amount Canada supplies barely 2 per cent. No one can fail to observe that there is a splendid field for development in this direction. Britain absorbs a great proportion of the Canadian wheat crop, but, instead of getting flour as well from this country, she patronizes the United States mills.

THE ORIENTAL DEMAND.

Another direction in which the future is sure to see a great development is in the Orient. China and Japan up to recent years have not been what one would term wheat-consuming countries. But the tendency has been of late towards a greater and greater consumption of flour. In this trade the Province of British Columbia seems bound to take no small share. Already the western states of the Union have obtained a hold on the Japanese trade. British Columbia, in a still closer proximity to the Oriental market, and able to draw from Canada's western wheat fields, should have little difficulty in securing a share of the trade, and ultimately controlling a large proportion of it.

A PREFERENCE REQUIRED.

The great desideratum is that Britain should afford her colonies some assistance. She has it in her power to make or mar the milling industry in this country. It is for her to say whether her premier colony shall be developed rapidly and in proportion to its resources or not. The United States and Russia, whence Britain derives much of her food, cannot be expected much longer to produce an excess over and above the home demand. Sooner or later Britain will be compelled to purchase all or next to all her food supply, beyond what is produced at home, from her colonies. Would it not be politic on her part to assist here and now in the development of Canada's natural resources.

The step required to accomplish this object would be the granting of a preference on colonial products, to Canada and the other parts of the Empire. A small tax on foreign produce would be all that would be required, and this would in no way endanger the British food supply. The colonies to-day could probably supply a sufficiency, and with the stimulus of an increased demand in England, the production would be largely increased. Nor would the preference be at all liable to raise the price to the British consumer. During the South African war when a tax was imposed on food-stuff in England, the price did not rise. The tax was paid by the shipper and not by the consumer.

The result on the milling industry in Canada would doubtless be stupendous. Mills such as the one erected by a United States company in Peterboro, would spring up all over the country, and the money spent in their construction and equipment would be of enormous advantage to Canadian industry in general, while their operation in the future would ensure work for many.

How Flour is Transported in the East.

THE American Miller has the following interesting account of transportation of flour in the Far East:

The flour markets showed increased signs of activity in October last, when the agents of the Japanese Commissary Department commenced to purchase bag and box flour from Manila concerns in large quantities.

In every case the flour was handled entirely in a retail way. That is, all manual labor was employed for moving the flour sacks, by tram cart, caribou vehicle and often drag sleds. Flour arriving by the shipload from foreign ports direct to the harbor of Nagasaki was also handled in the piece-by-piece manner.

There are no hoisting machines for elevating quantities of flour, no mechanical conveying systems for moving bags ten to one hundred yards from shiphold to wagons, or even large conveyances for containing the loads of flour on roads. The Manila and Iloilo end supply imported flour in bags and boxes, as the Filipino has not as yet got his flour grinding mechanisms in good enough order, or expansive enough, to do any more grinding than is sufficient to supply immediate family requirements.

The best grades of wheat, corn and rice grains are ground by the slow stone-and-hand instrument pounding contrivances, and occasionally by great revolving stone or iron disks, turned by an animal traction machine. But the product is too small to count for anything in the supply and demand for flour when war is in progress. The Japanese, and some Russian agents as well, simply visited all of the wholesale flour dealers in Manila, Iloilo and Zambangoa, and contracted for their flour at advanced rates over the usual prices. This flour was then hauled to the water fronts in the different places on caribou carts, with Chinese and Filipino drivers, receiving a certain stipend per load, and landed near the lighters.

The lighters are loaded with the bags or boxes of flour and hauled by tugs to the deep-water craft waiting out in the bay. Often the flour is moved out to the deep-water ships in the native boats of small sizes, and more than once during the day a boat upsets and the flour is lost. The native boat used for general traffic has outriggers of bamboo to keep it balanced; but squalls come up often and the boat goes over, the cargo is lost and the boatmen hang to the riggers until rescued. The demands of the agents of the two armies quite drained the Manila markets of flour. Cargoes en route were bargained for, and in some cases the ship turned into a Japan port instead of going to Manila, the original destination.

The bag flour is first-class, until the dampness of the Philippine climate penetrates the bags; then the crust forms, and repeated dampness and drying out soon make the flour cake so that when the bags are opened in the bakery only the middle is soft. All the rest has to be pounded up and rolled, and that takes time, including the sifting. The box flour does not do this.

The flour, when it gets to Japan in boxes or bags, is again handled quickly, but still entirely by manual labor. Continuous lines of Japanese coolies form and the bags or boxes are speedily passed from one to the other. In some instances the workmen pair off and with the coolie carrying-stick on their shoulders, swing two bags of flour in a loop between them and go trotting down the gang planks with considerable speed. The coolies get so much per load. They receive a little stick for each trip, and this stick marks one load. At night they are paid according to the number of sticks they have gathered, one at the time.

The final move is to the carts of the jinricksha men. These men are of great service in the transportation of stores; they are speedy, hardened, jolly, and exceedingly useful to the army.

A Canadian Milling Industry.

THE Lake Huron & Manitoba Milling Co., of Goderich, Ont., may be ranked as one of the representative milling industries in Canada—which promises soon to become one of the great milling countries of the world.

This young industry is particularly fortunate in having located at what is undoubtedly one of the best distributing points of Canada; goods reach all points east, north and south, readily and speedily. Goderich has the additional advantage of being almost on the direct line of the water route from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, over which a large percentage of the grain output of Western Canada passes en route to Atlantic ports.

Lake Huron and Manitoba Milling Co., Goderich, Ont.

The milling plant consists of a stone building 50x65 feet in size and six storeys high. It adjoins the elevator, a crib structure 50x110 feet in size, giving 225,000 bushels storage capacity, which is supplied with modern machinery with rope drives, belt conveyors for handling grain, steel marine leg for unloading vessels, etc.

The plans and specifications of the mill, as well as the operating diagrams, were prepared by Mr. R. J. McGaw, who superintended the entire installation of the plant. Mr. McGaw still holds the position of mechanical superintendent and head miller, and is ably seconded by Mr. Hugh Campbell. Both men have had extensive experience in the largest and hitherto the best mills in Canada. The mill has now an easy capacity of 1,200 barrels daily, with ample room for machinery to increase this output to 2,000 barrels, which will be done as soon as the business warrants the enlargement.

The Lake Huron & Manitoba Milling Co. have their own elevator, which is conveniently situated so as to take grain direct from shipboard on its arrival from Fort William. Their warehouse proper is 60x160 feet, three storeys in height, with a capacity for nearly 30,000 barrels of flour. Their packing rooms are situated about 40 ft. above the level of the railway tracks, and the flour is sent direct through chutes into the cars. In this connection loaders are known to have made a record of 20 tons in 10 minutes. Power is supplied by a steam plant consisting of three 250 horse power Heine tubular boilers, and a 28x60 400 horse power Corliss engine. The firm also have their own electric light plant.

All the barrels required for shipping are manufactured on the premises of the Lake Huron & Manitoba Milling Co. As a side issue they manufacture about 200 barrels of salt per day. The principal output, however, is flour, and of this their first patent, the celebrated "Buffalo," packed in barrels, is now a household word in the Maritime Provinces. The same flour in bags is branded "Five Stars," and the second patent "Three Stars."

The Lake Huron & Manitoba Milling Co.'s trade extends from Lake Superior on the west to Halifax and Sydney on the east. They have already succeeded in establishing an export trade, the bulk of which is carried on at the present time with Great Britain, South Africa and Newfoundland. For the short time they have been in business the development of their trade has been nothing short of phenomenal. It is said that already they control a fair share of the home trade. Every city, and with very few exceptions every town, within the limits mentioned above, is familiar with their brands. At the present time their milling capacity is taxed to its utmost to meet the demands of trade, and the firm anticipate having to increase it materially in the near future if their business continues to increase as it has during the past.

The product is hard wheat flour exclusively, made from Manitoba wheat brought from Fort William and Port Arthur, which are only sixty hours from Goderich by steamer. The president of the company is Mr. James Clark, and the vice-president Mr. C. A. Nairn, both known as wealthy and enterprising citizens. The manager, Mr. S. A. McGaw, has had twenty years' experience in the milling and grain business, principally in the Northwest, and is one of the best known men in Canada in this connection.

Western Canada's Wheat Supply and its Transportation

IT has been estimated that in Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta, there are 171,000,000 acres of land adapted for wheat growing. Of the 155 million acres of land in Athabasca and the 340 million acres in MacKenzie, it is probable that a considerable portion will be found suitable for the raising of wheat. Adding this area to the known wheat producing lands of the west, the mind is scarcely able to grasp the enormous extent of territory which may some day be devoted to the growing of wheat and other farm crops in the Northwest of Canada.

Of this area not much more than 5,000,000 acres will be under cultivation this year, or about 3 per cent. of the land suitable for agriculture. Each year witnesses an increased area under crops, but the increase is so comparatively small that at the present rate over 300 years will pass before the total area is cultivated.

The production of grain in the Northwest was, in 1902, 67 million bushels of wheat and 59 million bushels of other grain. Last year, owing to a less favorable season, the production over a larger area was slightly smaller, having been 52 million bushels of wheat with about 54 million bushels of other grain.

FUTURE CROP PROSPECTS.

Supposing that every year from now on witnesses a marked increase in the area of land cultivated and that crops continue to be of standard quality and extent, it will not be long before Canada will be in a position to consider the disposition of an enormous surplus production. Dr. Saunders, of Ottawa, the Director of Dominion Experimental Farms, gives some statistics in this respect. He writes :

"Were one-fourth of the land said to be suitable for cultivation in Manitoba and the three provisional territories under crop with wheat annually, and the average production equal to that of Manitoba for the past ten years, the total crop would be over 812 million bushels. This would be ample to supply the home demand for 30 millions of inhabitants (supposing the population of Canada should by that time reach that figure) and meet the present requirements of Great Britain three times over. This estimate deals only with a portion of the west, and it leaves the large eastern provinces out of consideration altogether."

A NARROW MARGIN.

The margin between the world's production and the world's consumption of wheat is astoundingly small. The surplus of one year may next year be wiped out in supplying a deficiency. In 1897 the world's crop of 2,226,745,000 bushels of wheat was too small by many bushels and there was want in many quarters. In 1898 the crop was 2,879,924,000 bushels, and there was a surplus. Owing to this very narrow margin, the importance of the rapid transportation of the wheat from the field to the consumer is doubly emphasized. Only thirteen weeks would be sufficient to put Britain face to face with famine, were she to depend solely on her home supply of wheat.

While it is true that the production of wheat is on the increase, it is equally true that the consumption of wheat is rapidly growing. Not only is the population of flour-consuming countries increasing, but to them must be added the inhabitants of such countries as China and Japan, who are gradually acquiring a taste for cereal foods. What portion of this new demand will be supplied by the fresh fields of Siberia and Manchuria, remains to be seen, but the problem of how to transport wheat and flour rapidly from one part of the world to another will be ever present.

CANADA'S GRAIN FUNNEL.

Canada posseses in the chain of great lakes and the St. Lawrence River, a remarkable funnel through which the golden grain of her western wheat fields may be poured. The importance of developing this marvellous waterway, thousands of miles in length, was early felt by Canadian statesmen, and more than a century ago projects were set on foot to overcome such natural obstacles to navigation as were to be found between Lake Superior and the sea. True, in those early days no one dreamt of the existence of wheat fields in the great lone-land to the far northwest. The builders of the first canals were building for the future, and time has vindicated their early efforts.

The first canal of the great lakes and St. Lawrence system to be completed was the Lachine Canal, connecting Montreal with Lake St. Louis about seven miles up the St. Lawrence River and overcoming the impediment to navigation occasioned by the Lachine Rapids. The canal was completed in 1825. It has since been considerably enlarged and improved.

The second canal to be constructed was the Welland, joining Lake Ontario with Lake Erie. It was first navigated in 1829. Then followed the improvement of the St. Lawrence navigation by the Beauharnois Canal, completed in 1845 at a cost of $1,331,787.95; the Cornwall Canal, finished about the same time at a cost of $1,827,249.62, and the three canals near Williamsburg, which were opened during 1846 and 1847. The substitution of the Soulanges Canal for the Beauharnois and the completion of the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie, gives a system of inland navigation from Lake Superior to the sea capable of accommodating vessels 270 feet in length and with a draught of 14 feet. Port Arthur and Fort William are thus at the head of a water route stretching 4,494 miles to Liverpool.

While the St. Lawrence system offers a splendid highway for the conveyance of wheat and flour from the west to the sea, it is not utilized for that purpose to the extent which many people would desire. That is, as far as through water shipment is concerned. Starting from Winnipeg the bulk of the Canadian grain is carried to Port Arthur and Fort William, either by C. P. R. or C. N. R. It is there transhipped to grain vessels, which carry it across Lake Superior, through the Sault Canal and either to Depot Harbor or Midland. Here it is transferred back to freight cars and carried either by the Canada Atlantic or the Grand Trunk to Montreal.

A Progressive Company.

ONE of the enterprising Canadian milling companies, which is successfully developing business along progressive lines, is Shirk & Snider of Bridgeport, Ontario, who control the Lancaster Mills and the Baden Mills. The firm manufacture flour of superior quality. Their high patents can be relied on to suit the demands of the most exacting dealer. The large orders which they receive for their flour testify to the reliability and excellence of their goods. Their advertisement appears on another page.

Manufacture of Biscuits in Canada.

THE manufacture of biscuits, which to-day occupies such a prominent place among the industries of Canada, may be said to have been begun in 1876. Before that time ordinary bakers and manufacturers produced considerable quantities of biscuits, although their efforts were on such a small scale that they can hardly claim the credit for having instituted the flourishing industry of biscuit manufacturing as it exists in Canada as the present time.

In the early days the Canadian consumer's wants in the biscuit line were supplied either in a more or less primitive way by the home baker, or more usually by importations from foreign countries. The last few years, however, have witnessed a veritable transformation in prevailing conditions. Not only has the home consumption of biscuits increased enormously out of all proportion to the increase in population, but the quantity of foreign goods formerly used in the home market has dwindled and dwindled until at the present time the importations of biscuits to Canada from other countries are hardly worth mentioning. Practically all this trade has come into the hands of Canadian manufacturers, who have practically a monopoly of the home biscuit trade.

The evolution of the biscuit industry has been the usual but significant one, from simple and crude methods such as were employed in the '60s and '70s to the intricate and highly scientific processes of to-day. Then everything was made by hand power and there were none but ordinary hand ovens. Now machinery does a large share of the work and the ovens in use in the largest biscuit factories are veritable works of mechanical genius, with machinery so intricate as to be a puzzle and continual source of wonder to the casual observer. One has only to go into an antiquated bake shop in some country village and then into an up-to-date biscuit factory employing say 500 hands, to appreciate the "then" and "now" of the Canadian biscuit industry. One large firm manufactures no less than 450 staple lines of biscuits and easily 220 varieties of novelty lines. These go to every family in the Dominion of Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and in considerable quantities to Great Britain and the colonies.

The value of exports of Canadian biscuits in 1903 was as follows: Sweetened biscuits of all kinds, $35,571; biscuits and bread, $33,499; sweetened biscuits, $33,571; biscuits not otherwise specified, $19,787; a total of $120,428. In 1902 the total value of biscuit exportations was $112,738; and in 1901, $89,727, thus showing a gradual increase in Canadian exportations. The bulk of this trade goes to the West Indies, Great Britain and South Africa, and is exclusively in high-class biscuits, such as sodas, etc. Up to the present Canadian manufacturers have had to face a serious proposition in attempting to compete with foreign manufacturers, and in particular old-established English firms, not that the intrinsic merits of Canadian products have ever been called into question, for Canadian biscuits will stand comparison with anything the world produces to-day, but because the older industries have become firmly established in every foreign market of consequence, and it is the old question of having to win a reputation against tremendous odds.

The English people are pre-eminently a biscuit-eating race, and, what is more, English biscuit manufacturers having educated them to use certain brands, they desire no other, and carry their desires with them to every civilized country in the eastern hemisphere. This prejudice is almost insurmountable, but in every case in which the barrier has been broken down an increased demand for the Canadian manufactured product has followed. Another difficulty is the relative cost of manufacture in England and Canada. Labor is much cheaper abroad and the English biscuit manufacturer has the additional advantage of many years experience in the trade, which means that he has been able to arrive at a scientific and economic basis in the matter of process and general production. This question of cost has made it practically out of the question up to the present for the Canadian to win a place alongside the English manufacturer in certain lines of goods. The outlook for foreign trade, however, is not at all hopeless. Canadian high-class biscuits have already succeeded in winning a deserved place in foreign markets, and it is only a matter of time until a market will also be created abroad for the various other lines of Canadian biscuits.

ONLY under the clear blue sky and the burning sun of tropical lands are to be seen growing in all their beauty and vigor, the trees that yield the beans which are known so well as chocolate and cocoa in their manufactured form.

Picking Cocoa, Trinidad, British West Indies.

The accompanying illustrations have been reproduced owing to the courtesy of J. Russell-Murray, representative of the Imperial Department of Agriculture of the British West Indies in Canada, in order that readers of The Grocer may be made familiar with the general features of the cocoa tree in its native habitation, and with the methods employed in gathering the cocoa product and preparing it for shipment. The views belong to the Island of Trinidad, in the British West Indies. This, however, is not the only place where the cocoa tree is grown. Its native home is Central America, and from this point, owing to its great value as a food product, its cultivation extends through the Spanish countries of Colombo and Venezuela. During the nineteenth century and especially the latter half, the cocoa tree has been grown in the West Indies, Ceylon, the West Coast of Africa, and other places, all within the tropical zone, in fact wherever the hot, moist atmospheric conditions so suitable to its growth exist.

The history of the cocoa tree is traced back to the Spanish invasion in Central America, when Cortez conquered the great Empire of Montezuma. It is recorded that chocolate was used as a beverage at this time, the old legend being that when used by the emperor and flavored with vanilla, it was drunk from a golden cup. Formerly the words broma cacao were familiarly quoted as "food for the gods."

The cocoa tree is from ten to twelve feet in height and is an evergreen, having a new series of leaves three or four times a year. The trees are laid out in much the same way as the large apple orchards of Canada. In some countries large shade trees are needed to protect cocoa trees from too much sun or wind. Such shade trees also serve to preserve the humidity necessary to their growth. The cocoa tree is of moderate growth and attains a fruiting period in about three years, though it is not until ten or twelve years have elapsed that it can be said to have reached a profitable age. It then continues its beneficent life for from 40 to 80 years.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows the tree with the cocoa pods growing upon the stem and branches, and one might travel a long way before he would see anything more pleasing than the ripened yellow and crimson pods hanging on the shaded trees, with their dark green background, not unlike a fairyland scene hung with golden hued and colored lamps. Another illustration shows the gathered pods surrounded by the pickers, who with cutters in hand, split the pod, throwing it to women, who withdraw the seeds which are covered with a thick mucous substance, and drop them into baskets. As soon as these are filled they are conveyed by hand, or by mules or donkeys if the distance warrants, to the estate building. Here they are placed in large bins to undergo a process of fermentation, and it is during this stage that the grade of cocoa is determined upon. For instance, short fermentation produces only an inferior class, while a long period of 7 to 10 days produces a high aroma.

Among other interesting features are the drying houses, which are nothing more nor less than large platforms of wooden flooring, with movable roofs. As soon as the cocoa has been fermented the beans are spread out on these platforms to be dried, a process that is accomplished in 5 or 6 to 10 days, according to weather conditions. It would do the heart of the housewife good to see the natives treading the beans. This process is termed "dancing," and is performed to remove mildew or polish from the beans, as well as to produce a cleaner and more pleasing looking product. As soon as the beans are thoroughly dried, they are bagged in packs of 150 to 200 lbs. and shipped to Europe, United States, or Canada. In these different countries, the cocoa bean goes to the manufacturer who quickly reduces it, after it is roasted, to cocoa nibs. Its final purposes are also decided upon by the manufacturer. For instance, if cocoa powder is desired, the bean has the larger portion of the cocoa powder extracted, which is then re-ground and the necessary ingredients added, making that powder which the advertisement "It is grateful and comforting" has made familiar to everyone. On the other hand, it may be destined for the Confectionery Trade of Canada.

THE candy and confectionery trade of Canada has shown such phenomenal growth of late that it may almost be said to have sprung up in a night. Even the juvenile in the grocery trade can remember well when the only lines of confectionery were those sold by the pound and put up in paper bags. What boy is there who hasn't vivid recollections of bull's eyes, mixed candy, and horehound sticks? The class of confectionery known as bonbons was an unknown quantity to him. High-class confectionery seems to have been a comparative novelty in Canada until recent years, and at any rate very little if any of such was manufactured at home. To-day the yearly output of Canadian confectionery establishments, of which there are as many as a score in Canada worthy of the name, is roughly estimated at $5,000,000. A few years ago there was little home demand for such goods. Perhaps the taste of the ordinary consumer had not as yet taken an epicurean turn. Another reason for the lack of consumption of high-class confectionery, foreign or domestic, is because people were not as well-to-do as they are to-day. The price of raw material was another obstacle to the manufacture of confectionery as well as was the difficulty of obtaining the requisite oils and coatings, none of which are available in Canada. The manufacturer then did not think it worth his while to send to a foreign market for these, and consequently did not attempt to make bonbons at all. Another factor was undoubtedly the lack of shilled workmen.

To-day the situation has changed radically, and the leading manufacturers tend to cater to the high-class confectionery trade exclusively, and what is more, the public have chosen to support their efforts, and are buying fine confectionery as never before. A bag of mixed candies is no longer the only source of delight. Hundreds of different kinds of chocolates and fully twice as many of bonbons in all the sizes, shapes and flavors imaginable are now put up in novelty packages imported from Germany, France and Japan. Nothing is thought too elaborate nowadays, and even the elegant silk and hand-painted confectionery boxes which would have been a source of curiosity a few years ago are becoming quite common. It may be mentioned that a large percentage of the novelties used in the manufacture of confectionery in Canada at the present time come from Japan. All the chickens used in eastern confectionery are manufactured by the Japs. France and Germany contribute the bulk of the art packages, although since the German surtax came into force this trade has gone almost exclusively to France.

A line of confectionery which is coming into popularity in Canada is the floral flavored. The confectioner has endeavored to accomplish almost the impossible in imparting to his product a substitute for the perfumes of various flowers, such as heliotrope, rose, violet, and lilac. In the process of manufacture the oil or concentrated perfume is utilized in the same way that the stronger otto is used in perfumed soaps.

To-day Canadian confectionery supplies the bulk of the home market, and home interests are confidently expecting to have the whole of this trade in their own hands within a very few years. A considerable percentage, however, of American goods is still used at the Pacific Coast, and holiday confectionery from England is bought largely in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

Certain Canadian confectioners have even been enterprising enough to exploit the export trade. One firm recently sent several trial packages to Natal; Johannesburg in the Transvaal; and Sydney, Australia. American confectioners have began to supply these markets, and, rightly enough, the idea that struck the Canadian firm was why Canada shouldn't have a share of this trade, especially since a very friendly feeling towards Canada exists in all these markets. The initial difficulty experienced was that of getting their goods safely across the equator. Confectionery as ordinarily made and packed will not stand an extreme of heat, and unfortunately adequate provision had not been made for suitable cold storage.

In general, however, the outlook for the development of an export trade in Canadian confectionery is bright. There is no question about Canada being able to manufacture as high grade confectionery as is to be found in foreign markets. On an equal footing, Canadian manufacturers claim to be able to compete with the very best. Prejudices have to be overcome before the entry into a new market can be made, and the burden still rests upon the Canadian confectioner to convince the foreign trade that theirs is the best article going. Canadian confectioners are justly proud of their achievements and will only make one admission when it comes to comparing foreign and home manufactured goods. Canada cannot hope to rival England in the manufacture of machine-made candy or pound goods on account of lack of facilities. Canadian manufacturers, moreover, by a curious but unjust irregularity in freight tariffs, cannot compete in the home market with English manufactured acidulated stuff. It costs as much or more to send stock from Montreal or Toronto to Winnipeg as from London, Eng., to Winnipeg. In hand-made or high-class confectionery, however, Canadian confectioners invite competition with the best.

COLD STORAGE OF FRUIT

By W. H. Day, B.A., Demonstrator, Department of Physics, Ontario College of Agriculture.

THE importance and the possibilities of cold storage may be illustrated by the simple fact that in 1880, less than twenty-four years ago, the first two cargoes of frozen meat, containing 400 carcasses of mutton, were shipped from Australia to Great Britain, while in the year 1900 the number of carcasses of mutton from the same colony was 6,433,821. The phenomenal growth in this particular line typifies a universal extension of the application of cold storage. While the frozen meat industry has passed beyond the realm of experiment, and while dairy products, if under proper conditions, are ocean shipped with little or no deterioration in quality, the limitations of and the ideal conditions for the cold storage of fruit are as yet not fully determined; it is with a view to aiding in the solution of some of the problems concerning the storage of fruit that a cold storage plant has been installed at the Ontario Agricultural College for experimental purposes. The present article will deal with cold storage in its relation to the fruit industry.

Methods of Cold Storage.

To begin with, it may not be amiss to devote a little space to the principles and the different methods of cold storage, though a full treatment of these cannot be undertaken in the limited space of this article.

The methods fall readily into two broad classes, ice refrigeration and mechanical refrigeration. In either system the store rooms must be well insulated from external conditions, so that variations of temperature may produce comparatively little effect inside, and that even these small effects may be slow. The insulation of the cold storage rooms at the college is described in the annual report of 1902 as follows:

"1. A hollow brick wall, constructed as follows: Two four and one-half inch walls, with a two and one-half inch space between. Across this space, at intervals of three feet, a bonding course of brick is laid all round.

"2. The two inside faces of the walls are coated with a preparation of cement plaster, making each wall practically air-tight; the top of each bonding course is also plastered, so that we have secured within the wall a series of dead-air spaces.

"3. Next to the wall is strapping placed vertically; on this is a heavy coating of insulating paper, and then lumber, paper, and lumber, making a second air-space and a course of insulation. Next comes strapping laid vertically and horizontally, in squares, then lumber, paper and lumber, making another dead-air space with a second course of insulation.

"4. The floors are insulated by two thicknesses of lumber and one thickness of paper above and below the joints, with mill shavings between the joists. This is the style of insulation also around the cooler above the second floor."

W. H. Day, B.A.

During the coldest weather of the Winter just past no heat more than that given by two incandescent lamps in each room and two in the hall-way was needed to prevent freezing in the rooms, so that this method of insulation may be taken as quite effective. A drawing will give a better idea of the different parts. (See page 90.)

Ice Refrigeration.

Ice refrigerators are simple in principle. Beside or above the store rooms, but connected with them, is situated an insulated ice chamber, the connections being so made as to secure a constant exchange of cold for warm air. This circulation, besides cooling the rooms, serves to remove the moisture to the ice chamber, where the greater part of it is condensed on the ice, thus preventing condensation on the walls of the refrigerator and tending to secure a dry atmosphere in it. The accompanying diagram will illustrate the principle.

By the passage (A) the cold air descending from the ice chamber is delivered at the bottom of the refrigerator. Becoming slightly warmer, it ascends by the passage (B) to the top of the ice chamber and again becomes cold. A false ceiling, (C), serves to secure circulation in all parts of the refrigreator, as indicated by the arrows. The ice may be stored in the ice chamber, which in this event must be large, or in a detached building. In the latter case it is transferred to the ice chamber as required. This is the more usual method.

Mechanical Refrigeration.

Mechanical refrigeration is based upon two principles: (1) That all liquids in passing to the gaseous state absorb heat, thus lowering their own temperature, as well as that of contiguous substances. (2) That any gas may be liquified by pressure accompanied with cooling. Various substances may be used as refrigerating agents, but those easily liquefied, and at the same time volatile or easily vaporized, and capable of absorbing much heat on evaporation, that is having a high specific heat, are the most economical. Ammonia meets these combined conditions better than any other substance, and consequently is more extensively used than any other.

From the underlying principles mentioned we should expect the plant to consist of three parts, a compresser, a cooling bath or condenser, and an expansion chamber or refrigerator, as indicated in the diagram herewith.

A pressure of 175 pounds per square inch is generated in the compresser. From the compresser, the ammonia in the gaseous state, at the pressure mentioned, and heated by compression, is led to the condenser, a coil of pipes over which flows a continuous supply of cold water, which so reduces the temperature that the ammonia is liquefied. From the condenser the liquid ammonia passes by pipe to a regulating valve, which reduces the pressure to about 28 pounds per square inch, and thence to coils of larger pipe, the refrigerator, where because of reduced pressure and increased room it again assumes the gaseous state, absorbing much heat in doing so, and producing very low temperatures. From the refrigerator it passes again to the compresser, having completed the cycle only to begin anew.

How Cold Air May be Utilized.

The "cold" derivable from the refrigerator may be applied in various ways: (1) The "direct expansion" method, in which the refrigerator is situated in the store-room, which is cooled by radiation. (2) The brine circulation method. The refrigerator is placed in a tank of brine, which is thus cooled, and the cold brine is pumped through radiating coils placed in the store-room. (3) The air circulation system. The refrigerator is placed in an insulated room adjoining the store-rooms; this room is connected with the store-rooms by two ducts fitted with slide valves. At the mouth of one of these ducts, and blowing across the refrigerator to the other, is situated a fan which when run draws the warm air from the rooms, forces it over the refrigerator, where it is cooled, and then down the other duct into the rooms whence it was drawn. The rate of circulation, and hence the temperature of the rooms, is regulated by the slide valves mentioned. To prevent the formation of ice on the refrigerator, brine is made to drip over it continually; but the brine serves another important purpose; it absorbs moisture and impurities from the air drawn from the rooms, and hence sends dry, pure air in return.

The method last described is perhaps the most perfect system of producing the ideal conditions of cold storage, viz., cold, dry, pure air in the rooms; and besides, much lower temperature can be produced by it than by the ice refrigerators, hence it is broader in its application. On the other hand, it is expensive, so much so that it is unprofitable except when constant storage of large quantities of produce is needed, as with a dealer or a storage company; in which cases it is the more profitable and convenient method. A number of growers might with advantage instal a plant on the co-operative system. The plant and building at the college cost in the neighborhood of $6,000, of which $3,200 was paid for the plant and $2,800 for the construction of the building. There are eight rooms, with average capacity of 675 cubic feet, and the plant has "a capacity of six tons," i.e., the plant produces in a day the same amount of refrigeration as would the melting of six tons of ice per day. Smaller plants, of course, are obtainable. The Linde British Refrigeration Company, which installed the college plant, manufactures a machine of three-ton capacity, which is large enough to maintain a temperature of thirty-two degrees in a well insulated room of from 4,500 to 6,000 cubic feet capacity, at a cost of from $1,200 to $1,500. A machine of one ton capacity would cost about $1,000. These prices do not include the driving power. A three-ton machine would require seven horse-power and a one-ton three horse-power. The cost of operation would be considerable during the Summer, but very little during the Winter.

The ice refrigeration, however, while less perfect than the mechanical, is fairly effective, and much cheaper, so much so indeed as to be within the means of most growers and dealers. An ice refrigerator of 1,500 cubic feet capacity could be erected for between $300 and $400. The cost of operation would be small.

The Efficiency of Cellars, where these are available as storage rooms, might be much increased during the Winter by a little attention to insulation and ventilation. We found that for five months of the past Winter we were able to maintain the desired temperatures, namely, thirty degrees and thirty-six degrees Fahrenheit in the store-rooms, without any outlay either for heating or for cooling when the temperature within the rooms varied. The refrigerating room, and hence the ducts leading to and from the store-rooms, can be opened to the outside air. When the rooms were too warm, cold air was admitted in this way; when they neared the proper temperature this connection was cut off. When they were in danger of becoming too cold, the incandescent lamps were left burning.

These conditions might be easily realized in many cellars. If a cellar receives heat from above by conduction through the floor, a ceiling of board might be put in. This, together with the floor above, would form a "dead air" space that would afford considerable insulation, or the space might be filled with mill shavings. Cold air, when needed, might be supplied by a duct connected with the outside atmosphere, provision being also made for the escape of the warm air. Any heat ocasionally necessary might be derived from lamps or from a small oil stove. With these simple, inexpensive devices efficient cold storage might be provided Necessity of Cold Storage.

The supply of farm, orchard and garden products frequently exceeds the local demand and the produce must be held, or markets at a distance must be sought. From this condition arises the necessity for cold storage. If perishable products, such as fruit, can be held in cold storage in good condition until the local demand is more active, or be placed on a distant market in good condition, then many problems arise: How long can different fruits be held? Can raspberries be shipped to Winnipeg, or peaches and pears to Britain? If so, under what conditions? Can storage transportation be made cheap enough to make such undertakings profitable? These are some of the problems now in process of solution by investigators in various parts of the continent.

Experiments in Cold Storage.

Experiments in the storage of fruit have been carried on jointly by the Departments of Physics and Horticulture of the Ontario Agricultural College for three years. At first no storage accommodation was available at the college, so the fruit was stored in Toronto and St. Catharines. Under these unfavorable circumstances only two varieties, one of pears, the Duchess, and one of apples, the Fameuse or Snow, were used for experiment. With these three conditions were investigated: (1) different styles of packing; (2) different temperatures in storage; (3) different sizes of fruit.

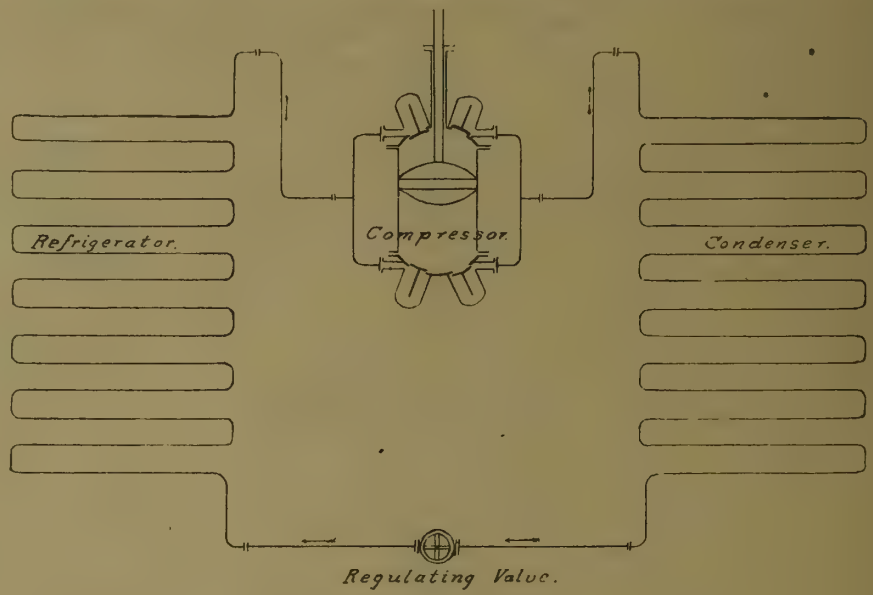
The following conclusions were reached: "(1) Apples and pears keep best when wrapped singly in paper and packed in shallow boxes not larger than a bushel. (2) Snow apples keep best at a temperature of thirty-one degrees. (3) Medium sized apples and pears keep longer than the largest, all being perfect specimens and picked at the same time. This is evidently a matter of maturity; the larger specimens are, on the whole, riper than the smaller ones, if picked at the same time. (4) With apples and pears the fruit should be picked in advance of dead ripeness. (5) Fruit, on being removed from cold storage, should be allowed to warm gradually, so that moisture will not be deposited upon it. If the wetting cannot be prevented, then the fruit should be spread out and dried as quickly as possible." (Bulletin No. 123.)

In the Spring of 1903 storage room was available in the new building, so that the scope of the investigations was much broadened, extending to different varieties of each of the following fruits: Strawberries, raspberries, currants, plums, pears, peaches, quinces and early and late apples. The general conclusions previously reached have all been confirmed, and many additional facts added. In the notes given below the figures following the names indicate the temperatures at which the respective species were found to keep and develop best. It is also necessary to define our use of the word "limit." With all kinds of fruit there is a time limit beyond which it is unprofitable to hold fruit in cold storage or anywhere else, for the fruit begins to deteriorate through mould, decay, loss of flavor, etc. That limit, for sound fruit, is dead ripeness. So that when we say a fruit has "reached its limit" we mean that it will deteriorate in quality if held longer. Fruit held in storage should be marketed before having reached its limit.

Time Limit and Temperature for Fruit.

Strawberries, stored in boxes, as picked for market, were found to keep best at thirty-one degrees. They reached their limit in about six to ten days, acording to variety and degree of maturity when stored. Irene, Haverland, Anna Kennedy, Saunders and Bismarck, stored when not too ripe, kept ten to twelve days, and were practically all sound and good at that time. These varieties might profitably be shipped to Winnipeg and other western points, if proper storage en route were provided.

For raspberries the most desirable temperature was thirty-one degrees, and the time limit ten days; for currants, thirty-one degrees, with time limit ten days, and for plums, thirty-eight degrees, with the time limit about four to six weeks. Most were stored rather green, but some were fairly ripe. These latter were prime in from four to six weeks; and they surpassed the greener ones very much in the quality developed.



Principle of Mechanical Refrigeration.

Four varieties were tested. Washington, Shipper's Pride, Bradshaw and Pond's Seedling.

The best temperature for pears was thirty-eight degrees. Six varieties were stored, viz., Bartlett, Flemish Beauty, Duchess, Keiffer, Clairgeau and Louise Bon. They were stored in baskets, as picked for market, most of them being quite green. Two or three baskets, however, were approaching ripeness. The latter gave good results, especially at thirty-eight degrees, reaching their limit in four to eight weeks. The green ones have not matured in storage; when removed to warm rooms they have ripened, with only fair results, in from ten to fifteen days. These facts indicate that for cold storage pears should be rather riper than they are as picked for ordinary marketing.

Peaches were stored as picked for market, mostly quite green, but some fairly ripe. The latter developed well at both thirty-one and thirty-eight degrees, being in prime condition in from four to eight weeks; the former did not mature.

Early apples required a temperature of thirty-eight degrees and reached their limit in six weeks and upward, according to variety. Those picked rather green developed no color and poor flavor. The desirable temperature for late apples was thirty-one degrees. Snows grown at Guelph, not wrapped, reached their limit early in March; those grown along the St. Lawrence (Maitland), not wrapped, about April 6, while those that were wrapped are still (May 6) firm, crisp and of excellent quality. Other varieties, such as Spy, Seek-No-Further, Salome, Russet, Baldwin, Bellflower, Tallman Sweet, Colvert, and Wallbridge, are still firm, especially at thirty-one degrees, and are developing well in quality, although still far from their limits.

Summary.

Three important facts have been determined with regard to the different fruits under experiment:

(1). The most suitable storage temperature for each.

(2). The storage limit for fruit of each variety approaching ripeness when stored.

(3). Fruit of any kind picked rather green does not give good results in storage. This was noticed in several varieties of each species, and was perhaps the most strikingly demonstrated of any fact observed. Its lesson should not be disregarded when fruit is being prepared for cold storage or even for storage in cellars.

All over the continent more extensive investigations are being prosecuted from year to year, consequently the possibilities of cold storage will be realized more and more by producers and dealers, the men whom it most vitally concerns. This will mean an increased demand for cold storage transportation, which will be furnished better and more cheaply than at present; and it seems not too much to predict that what cold storage has done for the mutton industry of Australia it will also do for the fruit industry of Canada.

FRUIT DEPARTMENT

The Fruit Trade of Canada.

AMONG the many sources of revenue open to the Canadian husbandman it is a question whether any are fraught with greater possibilities than the fruit trade. Favored above almost any other country in point of adaptability for fruit growing, and especially the cultivation of apples, a phenomenal development in this industry is looked for in the near future.

Fruit growing is carried on extensively in the Province of Ontario, but its possibilities have as yet been only imperfectly exploited, notwithstanding the fact that in 1902 Ontario's apple crop was 48,185,125 bushels. According to the census of 1901, the area in orchard, garden and vineyard was 337,000 acres. There were over 9,500,000 apple trees in the province, 1,280,000 peach trees, and 3,250,000 other fruit trees (pear, plum, cherry, etc.) There were also 2,620,000 grape vines, yielding over 23,000,000 pounds yearly. In addition to supplying the Canadian markets with home-grown fruits, large and increasing quantities are exported to foreign countries, chiefly to Great Britain. In 1902 the crop of apples in Ontario was larger than that of any state but one in the United States, being over three times that of the State of New York. Tomatoes are also extensively grown, a large portion being canned and exported. In the Province of Quebec, because of the rigorous and lengthy Winters, there is not so much fruit raising as in Ontario. The chief fruit district in Quebec is that lying in the vicinity of the St. Lawrence River, particularly the districts along the south shore. In the Maritime Provinces farmers pay great attention to fruit growing, especially in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. In the fertile valleys the choicest varieties of apples, pears, plums, and cherries grow in abundance. Large shipments of fruit are sent regularly to the United States and Europe. Strawberries and other small fruits ripen after the earlier harvests of the south have been consumed, and find a ready market in the New England States. British Columbia is particularly suited to the cultivation of apples, pears, plums, cherries, and in some districts peaches, and in the fertile districts on the Pacific side of the Rocky Mountains such as the Okanagan Valley, fruit growing has already made surprising strides and reached a high level of perfection, as any one will readily admit who has tasted the delicious product of the Okanagan Valley. Only a very small portion of Western British Columbia adapted to fruit growing is as yet under cultivation. Growers, however, are beginning to awaken to the possibilities of fruit growing in the west, and already have an eye on the Northwest Territories, where a market of enormous proportions will presently be created for green fruits, owing to the rapidly increasing settlement of that boundless area.

The exportations of fruit from Canada in 1903 were valued at $3,689,000, as compared with $1,716,000 in 1896, an increase of $1,973,000 in the the last 7 years. Of the total fruit exportations from Canada, apples to the value of $2,696,000 went to England, while other Canadian fruit going to this market, mostly small fruits such as blackberries, gooseberries, raspberries, strawberries in one form and another, and grapes and pears, amounted to $110,000. The United States also took apples and other fruits to the value of $155,000. The aggregate fruit export trade of Canada is growing steadily, and now that cold storage facilities for fruit are being provided on a liberal scale there seems to be nothing to prevent Canada competing successfully in foreign markets, not only in the apple trade but in pears, plums, and all fruits that can be grown in the Canadian climate.

The following tables are interesting in as far as they show the relative position Canadian fruit occupies in fruit importations to Great Britain in 1902. They are also suggestive of the fact that Canadian exporters might profitably exploit certain departments of the export fruit trade in which as yet they find no place in the British market.

Canadian Fruit Pulp for Export.

THE possibility of building up an export trade in Canadian fruit pulp for the manufacture of jams, jellies, etc., is beginning to attract the attention of Canadian manufacturers. Already the English market has been successfully exploited to a considerable extent. There remain various other likely markets in foreign countries, and there seems to be no reason why Canada should not supply such countries as Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India, if not with fruit pulp then with the manufactured jam or jelly product. True, most of these countries grow fruit, but at the same time the fact remains that England supplies them with large quantities of jams, jellies, etc. Why should not Canada have a share in this trade ?

The facilities for the cultivation of fruit on a large scale in Canada are infinitely greater than in England. Canada has an enormous area suited to the cultivation of all kinds of fruit, with the actual industry of fruit growing as yet only in its infancy. Besides, it is admitted on all sides that Canadian apples, peaches, pears and small fruits are second to none in quality. Potentially, there are big things in store for the fruit canning industry of Canada. The time is not far distant when Canada will no longer allow England to act as middleman between consumers in Great Britain and the colonies, and herself, but will manufacture fruit pulp into jellies, jams, etc., at home for direct export to these countries.

Nearly all the prominent canning factories in Canada make fruit pulp. Raspberries, strawberries, plums and peaches are sometimes put up, without sugar, as fruit pulp either for export or for keeping until the Winter season, when most canning factories are idle. In the latter case it is then mixed with apple jelly and sweetened with glucose to be sold to the trade as jams of various kinds. The favorite package, when the fruit is to be used in Canada, is a large cask, glucose barrels often being used for the purpose. For export gallon tins, especially for stoned fruit, have been found preferable.

There appears to be a somewhat fluctuating demand for raspberry pulp from Canada, which reaches important dimensions only in years when the Old Country berry crop is a failure. Light color is considered a sign of good quality and any pulp showing a darker tint will suffer in price. This pulp is usually put up in seven pound "gallon" tins and packed twelve to the case. It is estimated that an average price in England would be eight or nine dollars a hundredweight (112 pounds).

Black currant pulp, consisting of the whole fruit (not mashed), is an article that is in almost constant demand, the export of which would probably be profitable from year to year. The usual package seen in the British markets is the ten-pound tin packed ten to a case. Australian shippers use a square fifteen-pound tin, packed securely four to a case. This is described as an "excellent traveler." The cask appears to be universally unpopular. The price varies greatly according to the supply from nearby sources, but has been averaged by a large importer at from six to nine dollars c. i. f. London in ordinary years. It has run as high as twelve dollars when there was a shortage.

At present enquiries are being made as to the feasibility of using Canadian Concord and other black grapes for making grape jam or jelly (either the seeds alone or both the seeds and skins being removed).

Broken Apple Boxes.

J. BROWN, inspector of the Department of Agriculture at Glasgow, reports to the Fruit Division, Ottawa that a shipment of over 1,200 boxes of Canadian Baldwins and Greenings recently landed in that city with a large number of the boxes broken. This condition of affairs seemed to be due to the fact that the boxes were made with only a straight dovetail, simply matched, as it were. The advisability of having the boxes made with the regular fan-shaped dovetail, or otherwise strongly nailed, is therefore apparent.

Many varieties of apples have been known to keep in good condition much beyond their ordinary season. For example, the average length of life for Twenty Ounce extends in the above list to January 20, McIntosh to January 30, and Grimes' Golden to February 23. It should be borne in mind that in the above record of keeping qualities so long as an apple was apparently sound it was credited with being in good condition, yet in many cases it was certain that fruit apparently sound was far past its prime when viewed from the consumer's standpoint.

There is one point in particular to be noticed in connection with the above list, namely, the fact that many kinds of apples which are commonly recognized as Autumn varieties may, if properly handled, be kept into or through the Winter without artificial refrigeration; thus Gravenstein extended to December 6 and Maiden Blush to February 20.

The Wagner Apple for Export.

THE inspector for the Department of Agriculture at Glasgow, Scotland, reports to the Fruit Division, Ottawa, that the Wagner apple is much esteemed by some in the trade there, and that if the fruit is of good size it is readily bought by certain of the best buyers. Others, again, will not look at this variety if they can get Spies or Baldwins, and class it next to Ben Davis. Its color and appearance are its redeeming points as it lacks the flavor and juiciness of the two above mentioned varieties. Some dealers say it is a mistake to ship Wagners after the month of December, as they take on scald very easily.

Successful Orchard Meeting.

Splendid weather has marked the series of educational orchard meetings now being held in the Province of Quebec by the inspectors of the Dominion Fruit Division, Ottawa. Although the farmers are very busy with Spring seeding, there has been a very fair attendance at the meetings, averaging between forty and fifty at those held to date, viz., Waterville, Barnston, Massawippi, Knowlton, and Sutton.

THE NEW CANADIAN RAILWAY.

A RAILWAY project outranking in importance any single railway scheme in history, with the possible exception of the trans-Siberian Railway, is at present occupying the attention of the Canadian people and the Canadian Parliament. This is the projected Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, extending from Moncton, New Brunswick, through Quebec, northern Ontario, Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia, to Port Simpson, on the Pacific Ocean. The Canadian Government has agreed to construct a portion of the road and to guarantee the bonds to be issued for the remaining portion. The total cost will be not less than $125,000,000.

Besides having the shortest route from Liverpool, from the large centres of Canada, from New York and the manufacturing centres of the east and practically an equal route from Chicago and the middle west to the Orient, the railway will have the lowest grade mountain line on the continent, and over 7,200 miles of continuous railway, with steamship connections, over which rates can be made to every part of the world without consultation with friendly or unfriendly connections. The New England States are reached by the Central Vermont of the Grand Trunk System, and the gateways of Chicago, Detroit and Port Huron, by the Grand Trunk Western, both roads making short connections with the proposed transcontinental railway. Some of the distances are significant. For example, from New York to Yokohama by the way of Montreal and the new line will be 418 miles shorter than by the Canadian Pacific, 555 miles shorter than by Chicago and San Francisco, and 1,800 miles shorter than by Galveston and San Francisco. From Liverpool to Yokohama by way of Quebec and the new route will be 528 miles shorter than by the Canadian Pacific, 1,313 miles shorter than by New York and San Francisco, and 130 miles shorter than by Moscow and the trans-Siberian Railway. From Chicago and Milwaukee to Yokohama by the Grand Trunk will be 535 miles longer than by the short route by St. Paul and the Canadian Pacific, but shorter in time, and will be 365 miles shorter than by St. Paul and Winnipeg.

An idea of the part this line will play in Oriental trade is gathered from the statement that the Canadian exports increased from $93,827,077 in 1890 to $211,640,286 in 1902, while from the United States the increase was from $151,100,000 to $433,850,000. Along the lines of the Grand Trunk system are located 45 cities and towns of more than 4,000 population each, and aggregating 1,000,940, which is 18.7 per cent. of Canada's population. From these towns the bulk of manufactured articles are now shipped to the Northwest and exported.

One of the most important facts in connection with the project is the existence of approximately 500,000,000 acres of fertile and unoccupied land in Northwest Canada, or five-eighths of the total farm acreage of the United States. Of the 15,100,000 acres of occupied land there, only 6,000,000 are under cultivation, and they produced 60,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1902. It is estimated that the unoccupied lands are capable of a wheat production amounting to between two and one-half and three billion bushels, or five times greater than the total United States crop of 1900. There are other factors which make the Grand Trunk Pacific project one of stupendous possibilities.

MONTREAL CITY CHARTER.

WHEN Rudyard Kipling wrote his now famous poem, "Daughter am I in my mother's house, but mistress in my own," the reference was to the connection between Canada and the Old Country. The principle expounded in these words may be applied with equal force to the connection which should, but does not, exist between Montreal and the Province of Quebec. There are many little matters, such as the abolition of trading stamps, which Montreal should have full authority to deal with herself, without being compelled to go to Quebec.

At present Montreal is constantly in the position of having to apply to the Local Legislature for amendments to the city charter. As many private interests stand behind these proposed amendments, frequently measures antagonistic to the general welfare of the city have been hurried through. At last year's session of Parliament much legislation inimical to Montreal business men was passed, and the same thing is being repeated this year. A long string of amendments have been before the House, some of which aim at setting aside some important features of the revised city charter, which was created by the Reform element of the City Council. The intention of the new charter was to give Montreal power to control its own affairs, and it certainly rests with the Parent Government to reject any measure that is brought in with a view to tying the hands of the city.

COSTLY TARIFF WARS.

TARIFF wars are costly. The proof of this is to be seen in the cold statistics recently published in a report prepared by the British Government. It deals with the tariff wars between France and Switzerland, France and Italy, and Germany and Russia.

The tariff war between France and Switzerland was in 1893-5. The latter country increased its customs tariff on French goods by 190 per cent., and the former by 41 per cent., against the products of Switzerland. As a result the exports of France to Switzerland for home consumption fell off 43 per cent., and the imports from Switzerland 27 per cent. The transit trade between the two countries also suffered. That to Switzerland from France declined 26 per cent., and that to France from Switzerland 17 per cent.

The tariff war between France and Italy was even more disastrous. It is estimated that when it ended in 1899 the joint loss of the two countries was about $600,000,000. The exports from Italy to France declined 57 per cent., and from France to Italy 50 per cent.

The tariff war between Germany and Russia only lasted eight months, which, it is held, was not long enough to permanently dislocate the conditions of trade. At any rate, however, it was long enough to make the two countries eager for peace. The trouble arose over Germany's decision to lower her duties on breadstuffs imported from countries which gave a like concession on the products of her factories. As Russia was at the time inaugurating a policy of protection for her iron industry she refused to comply. Then the tariff war began, and ended only when Russia practically surrendered to the original demands of the German Empire.

The experience of these three countries is particularly interesting to Canadians in view of the increasing sentiment in this country for a higher tariff against the United States. Our tariff is about one-half that of the latter country, while our exports from the United States are 90 per cent. larger than their imports from us. The McKinley and Dingley tariffs were designed to injure Canada. And although our general export trade has increased rapidly since then the inequality of the two tariffs and of the international trade of the two countries is so striking as to create a pronounced spirit of retaliation.

We may never go so far as to declare a tariff war. But it is well for us to remember, in view of the experience of other countries, that in tariff as well as in physical warfare both combatants suffer.

UNKEPT PROMISES.

IT is an old song that the insurance companies have been singing for years, "Improve your fire protection and we will lower our rates." Have they ever kept their promise? Experience would indicate that they have done quite the opposite. Down in the Maritime Provinces one of the grievances of business men which is annually aired at the Board of Trade meeting is this breach of faith of the insurance companies.

If the insurance men fail to show their sympathy with improvements in fire protection, there is naturally less and less inducement to carry out reforms. This is an unfortunate state of affairs. Business men have always supported movements for the preservation and protection of property, but their efforts in this direction will assuredly be diminished unless the insurance men co-operate with them in earnest. Increased taxation for fire-fighting appliances and increased insurance rates should not go together.

CHINESE LABOR.

IN view of the complaint frequently heard in Ontario that the beet sugar factories have been unable to secure a sufficient supply of beets, it is interesting to note that the difficulty is being solved in Alberta in a novel manner. A rich Chinaman, by name Sam Kee, is leasing land in the neighborhood of the sugar factory at Raymond, on which he will employ Chinese labor. Last year the same enterprising contractor was content merely to supply the labor. This year he will raise the beets himself. A proof that this method of providing the raw material for the factory has been successful is afforded by the fact that the management of the factory are said to contemplate an early enlargement.

CARELESS EXPORTERS.

A GENTLEMAN who is greatly interested in the development of export trade complains to The Canadian Grocer that some of the exporters are not as business-like in their methods as they should be. He complains that first there is a laxity on the part of Canadians in acknowledging letters from foreign correspondents; secondly that complaints are sometimes received of goods not being up to sample, and thirdly, indifference in regard to methods of packing. He cites some instances in support of his contention, and he certainly makes out a case.

This is not the first time that The Canadian Grocer has heard of similar complaints. Besides those which have come to us privately there are the reports of commercial agents in different countries. These make complaints similar to those of the gentleman above referred to.

No one regrets more than The Canadian Grocer to hear these complaints. This paper, however, feels it necessary to make reference to them as it is only in this way that the evils can be remedied.

It is essential that business men should be as zealous for the goodwill of their foreign, as for that of their home, customers. In fact if extra care is demanded it should be in the former instance. The home customer business men can usually see personally and thus straighten out any difficulties which may have arisen; but when it comes to the export trade the customer, often many thousands of miles away, can only be reached by mail or telegraph. Consequently when difficulties arise they cannot be so easily explained and satisfaction given. Those, therefore, who desire to build up an export trade should make every effort to be thoroughly business-like and fair in all transactions. Letters should be answered promptly, and goods should be up to sample. If these two conditions are not complied with trade must suffer; and unfortunately in such cases it is not only the individual who has been negligent who suffers but the good name of Canada itself is sullied.

TRADE WITH MEXICO.

DIRECT steamship communication between Canada and Mexico has been strongly agitated recently, and Signor Santiago Mendez has visited Ottawa on behalf of the Mexican Government to negotiate with Sir Richard Cartwright, the Minister of Trade and Commerce. It will be remembered that shortly after the Liberals reached power in 1896, a commissioner was sent to Mexico to look into the actual and possible trade issues between the two countries. This may have been the first cause of the awakening.

To-day Canadian trade with Mexico is very trifling. The whole volume of imports amounted to $125,575 last year, embracing coffee, dyes and chemicals, fruits and tobaccos. We sold to Mexico in the same period exports amounting to $137,034, which included manufactured cottons, machinery, gunpowder, and a few other articles, making a total trade for both countries of $262,609, or a trifle over a quarter of a million dollars. It would take a good deal more than that amount of trade to induce any company to start a steamship service direct, more especially as Mexico does not seem to be a very industrious commercial country. Their total trade with the whole world amounts to a little more than eighteen million and a half dollars per annum, and more than one-half of this trade is done with Great Britain.

Last Winter Sir William Mulock visited Mexico, and there discussed trade questions with President Diaz, and other public men. There then seemed a readiness on the part of the Mexicans to encourage trade with Canada, and a willingness was shown to share equally the cost of inaugurating a steamship service between the two countries. This attitude has appealed to the Canadian Government, no doubt, as already it has been announced from Ottawa that there is a possibility of monthly sailings, both on the Atlantic and the Pacific. This should open up a new market for Canadian flour, bacon, fish, lumber and coal, and on the other hand the Mexicans will try to export to us many things we do not produce.

Canadian manufacturers and merchants, however, have to give their opinion regarding the service before it will be inaugurated by the Government. It is quite likely they will favor the service, more especially because they have been handicapped in New York by inadequate steamship facilities, not only to Mexico, but to Central and South America.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY

A STRIKING illustration of the manner in which public opinion has awakened during recent years to the wisdom of safeguarding the Supreme Court by greater liberality in the salaries attached thereto, is given in the opinion expressed by Sir Mackenzie Bowell a few days ago. Sir Mackenzie, in the course of conversation, strongly supported the policy of The Canadian Grocer in advocating higher remuneration for Supreme Court judges. He said that at one time he was opposed to any higher salaries for judges. He felt that the position, like that of cabinet ministers, was one of such great honor that a man should be willing to accept smaller remuneration. During the last few years, however, he realized that owing to the greatly increased cost of living, and the greater earnings of leading lawyers, it was impossible to get the best men without paying them more money than at present. He strongly favored increased salaries for all judges, from the Supreme Court to the County Court Bench. He believed it would be good policy for the Government to begin with the Supreme Court immediately. Later, the salaries of the lower courts could and should be increased.

CANADIAN BUTTER IN ENGLAND.

IS Canadian butter receiving fair treatment in the British market? This is a question which is exercising the minds of Canadian manufacturers, and the question is important as it affects one of Canada's leading industires.

What has given rise to the question is the practice of British buyers to buy, not to sell but to hold, on the chance of a rising market, and it is unfortunate that Canadian butter only should be the sufferer in this respect, the reason being that it possesses a body that Danish and Russian butter cannot pretend to.

These butters have to be sold within a short time after arrival, but the qualities of Canadian butter enable it to be kept in cold storage for a considerable period, though not without detriment to its table qualities. The result in many cases is that when the butter reaches the consumer its condition is such that even a few days on the shelf will render it unfit for use. In this way the reputation of Canadian butter is being seriously endangered, and it is to be feared that unless the Canadian butter trade with the Mother Country ceases to be a purely speculative concern, Canadian manufacturers will be obliged to turn their attention to other markets where their product will receive more adequate treatment. This would be unfortunate in the interests of both countries.

A REMOVAL.

B. O. Beland, commission merchant, Montreal, has removed his offices, samplerooms and warehouses to 1684 Notre Dame street, near Place D'Armes. The premises are especially suitable for his kind of business. The customers will find handsome, clean, bright offices, and well arranged up-to-date cellars. Mr. Beland has added to his traveling staff lately, having now seven travelers covering the Dominion of Canada, and M. R. Carignan, of the firm, will take his place this year to visit Europe for all new and up-to-date goods that can be secured.

TEA NEWS FROM JAPAN.

"Market active owing to small arrivals; prices have advanced since telegraphing you yen 4, which is equal to two cents per lb."

This cable was received by Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, of the Central Tea Traders' Association, Montreal, Monday morning. In the course of an interview with Mr. Nishimura in last week's Grocer, a reference was made to the crop being 4,500 piculs shorter than last year. The word "settlement" should have been used instead of "crop."

Cold Storage at Creameries.

THE Dominion Department of Agriculture has called the attention of creamery owners to the fact that a large proportion of butter for export is not cooled to a sufficiently low temperature before leaving the creamery. It is very important that butter be cooled to the centre of the box at a temperature below 38 degrees F. as soon as possible after being manufactured. Every moment that butter is left at a high temperature lessens its keeping qualities. Butter left at a high temperature for some time is subject to a rapid deterioration on its arrival in Great Britain. The refrigerating compartments of steamers are not intended to cool warm butter, and such butter does not get sufficiently chilled before arriving in England.

In order to lower the temperature of the butter below 38 degrees it is not sufficient to lower the temperature of the refrigerator one or two days before the shipping of butter. Butter boxes should be exposed to a temperature below 38 degrees for at least five or six days.

Canadian Cheese Trade.

IN his report regarding the Canadian export cheese trade of 1903, A. W. Grindley, agent of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, makes the following suggestions that merit the attention of makers and exporters:

The cheese season of 1902 was a most successful one; there was a large increase in the quantity, and the steady improvement in the quality was so great that in spite of very heavy supplies the prices realized on the whole were satisfactory. The mild, sweet, palatable flavor, as distinguished from the heated and biting character so noticeable in former years, has created a large consumptive demand, which will have a tendency to do away with the disproportion in value between Canadian and English cheddar.

The practice of shipping too new or "green" cannot be too emphatically condemned as it not only spoils the sale, but hurts the reputation of Canadian cheese. The salesman as well as the exporter are to blame for sending these immature cheeses, and the patrons of factories should insist that their cheese should be held in the curing room until it is in such a condition as will give satisfaction to the British consumer.

COOL CURING OF CHEESE.

The comparative difference in the cheese held in the Government cool curing rooms has become very noticeable, not only in quality, but in general appearance. The improvement is due to cool curing and "waxing" the cheese, which also has the advantage of preventing a considerable percentage of shrinkage. During the season of 1902 when "waxed" cheese first appeared on the British market, some of the Grocers' Associations objected, and even went so far as to demand an allowance in weights, but it was soon proved that there was less shrinkage, which, added to the improved quality and appearance of the cheese, quickly created a brisk demand for cheese coming from the Government curing stations, at an advance in price compared to cheese coming from the ordinary factories.

BOXING CHEESE.

The percentage of broken boxes was not so high during 1903, although it still runs very high, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent. The falling off in breakage is due to:

(1) The damp season, which makes the boxes less brittle.

(2) More care on the part of the shipping companies in loading, stowing and discharging cargoes, this work being closely watched by the inspectors of the Canadian Government.

(3) The use of boxes of better quality. The latter point has been very noticeable in cheese coming from the Government curing stations, the boxes being made of heavier material; the percentage of broken boxes did not run above two per cent. which proves that it is false economy to buy cheap boxes.

Care should be taken not to use green, unseasoned boxes, as the cheese, particularly the top and bottom, may be damaged in quality from this cause alone.

SKIN BRAND ON CHEESE.

Leading British importers of Canadian cheese are in favor of branding cheese indelibly with the month in which they are made. Some years ago "September" cheeses became the favorites, but owing to the improvement in the quality of cheese made during July and August, brought about by the system of "cool curing" introduced by the Department of Agriculture, the makes of other months have proved to be nearly as good in quality as Septembers.

It is claimed that unscrupulous dealers in Canada as well as in Great Britain quote "Septembers" at such low prices as to lead to the supposition that they are the make of other months, and as a result any inferiority in quality is not discovered until after delivery is taken. If the month of make was branded on the cheese they would be sold on their merits, and speculators who bought cheap lines of July, August, October or November makes would be debarred from quoting them by cable or otherwise as "Septembers."

A Growing Business.

ONE of the growing produce businesses of Canada is that of J. B. Jackson, Simcoe, Ontario, who has erected an up-to-date cold storage warehouse in that town. This enables him to purchase produce direct from the farmer and place it in cold storage under the most favorable conditions. Mr. Jackson gives his personal attention to this branch of the trade and, while he has only been exporting during the past four years, his eggs under the "Cannon" brand are well and favorably known in all the British markets. There is no doubt a successful future in store for Mr. Jackson in the produce trade, as his straightforward business methods are already well recognized both in Canada and Great Britain.

Canada's Export Trade in Butter and Cheese.

IN 1891 the value of butter and cheese products ranked eighth among Canadian manufactures, in the last census of 1901 it ranked third, being led only by log products valued at $50,805,084, and flouring mill products valued at $31,835,879. In 1903 the value of Canadian exports of dairy products alone was nearly $32,000,000, about double the value of the grain exported in the same period, the money invested in Ontario alone in cattle, land, factories, and dairying utensils being estimated at $175,750,000.

During 1903 the value of Canadian butter imported into Britain was $6,554,014 (185,464 cwts.), as compared with 285,765 cwts. for the previous year. This large falling off is ascribed to the high price of cheese which induced farmers to send their milk to cheese factories instead of having it made into butter, and to the high price of butter in the home market, which precluded a profitable export business being done.

There are several interesting figures regarding Britain's imports of butter. Denmark supplies nearly half of the total quantity imported. The amount received from this source last year was 1,771,654 cwts, an increase of 68,622 cwts over the previous year, the improvement being attributed largely to the co-operative system of dairying in vogue in Denmark. The next largest source of Britain's supply is Russia. The Russians are devoting special attention to buttermaking, and have expended large sums of money in placing this branch of dairying on the best possible footing. The amounts imported from the other countries that supplied large quantities of butter to Great Britain last year are as follows :

	Cwt.
France	454,088
Holland	343,725
New Zealand	249,879
Sweden	212,232
Canada	185,464

These figures show an increase over the previous year for France of 41,848 cwts., for New Zealand of 91,886 cwts., and for Sweden of 20,641 cwts.; while the figures for Holland record a decrease of 49,536 cwts., and for Canada of 100,301 cwts. Canada last year stood in the seventh place, while the year before she occupied fifth place.

Canada's rather disappointing showing is, however, made up by the quantity of cheese sent to Britain in 1903. The British imports of cheese from the Dominion amounted to 1,848,152 cwts., as against 856,062 cwts. from all other countries. This is an increase of 139,287 cwts. over the previous year.

Taking butter and cheese together the returns show a small increase in the value of these products imported into Great Britain from Canada. In view of Canada's possibilities in the dairy line this small increase over the previous year cannot be considered quite satisfactory. It is, therefore, to be hoped that the Canadian Government will take whatever steps are necessary to secure the proper storage facilities for butter on vessels plying between Canadian ports and Great Britain, and thereby encouraging the export of this produce.

The president of the London, Eng., cheese board recently remarked that everything pointed to a poor year's business in cheese this year. The trouble lay in the fact that last year English buyers stocked largely and paid too high a price for cheese, with the result that a number of firms still had on hand a supply which should have been disposed of long ago.

There is also an unprecedented dullness in the English butter market due largely to over-supply, which will interfere temporarily with the success of the Canadian export butter trade with Great Britain.

British Columbia Cattle Outlook.

ACCORDING to an official report received by the live stock commissioner, Ottawa, British Columbia range cattle went into Winter quarters in fair condition, feed in the late Summer having been good owing to the heavy rains. The Winter up to February was fine and mild, but after this to the end of March the ranges were covered with deep snow. Hay was comparatively short all through the range country, with no old hay on hand and a good deal of the 1903 crop damaged by the heavy Summer rains. Speaking generally, cattle are in fair condition and few losses have occurred; the she stock suffered most, and it may be estimated that in consequence the calf crop will be below the average.

There can be no doubt that in certain sections of the country, more especially on the Thompson River, the cattle business is too speculative to be healthy. If the past Winter had been of a similar character to the previous one, a very large proportion of the stock of that section would have been wiped out. The day is past when it is safe to go into Winter with one-third or one-quarter of a ton of hay per head, per year, the reason being that, snow or no snow, by the time January comes there is practically no feed left on the lower ranges.

Beef is still low in price and from present indications is not likely to be better than last year, if as high. The C. P. R. have given the following figures of shipments from points on the main line during the year 1903. To coast points : Horses, 140; Cattle, 9,484; hogs, 2,013; sheep, 400. To points east of Laggan : Horses, 1,722; cattle, 130.

In regard to cattle, in addition to 9,484 head given as shipped to the coast markets, in order to arrive at the consumption of beef at these points, must be added the local supply and a total supply for about four months from the Northwest, as the B. C. ranges hardly ship any beef from February to June 1. The Kootenay trade is supplied mainly from the Northwest with the exception of the supply from the country south of Okanagan Lake and along the boundary. This will bring the exports from B. C. ranges to a figure probably between 10,000 and 11,000 head. The improvement of the herds is steady, and although no doubt a vast number should still be weeded out, the average is a good deal better than a few years ago.

G. T. R. Ice Cars.

The regular service of ice cars for the transportation of butter from points throughout the country to Montreal, viá the C. P. R., commenced Monday.

Pork, Bacon and Hams.

Canadian exports of pork, bacon and hams are nearly four times as great as they were seven years ago. In 1896 they were valued at $4,446,884; in 1902 at $12,457,863, and in 1903 at $16,029,269. The Canadian product has won an enviable reputation on the British market, and it is almost certain that the next few years will see an enormous increase in British importations of Canadian pork, bacon, and hams. At the present time Canada supplies only from one-fifth to one-sixth of the bacon, etc., consumed in England, which consumes yearly $92,650,146 worth, being outclassed by the United States and several other European countries.

Provisions—Conditions in provisions remain about the same as last week. The demand has varied little. Lard is reported as somewhat easier, caused, no doubt, by temporary accumulations of stock, resulting in a drop of 1c all around. The fresh meat market is fairly lively, and prices in hindquarters have advanced noticeably. Lamb is quoted 50c cheaper. We quote this week:

Butter—The quantity of butter pouring in on wholesale houses has made it a drug on the market. If prices could go any lower there is not much doubt but they would do so. The large stocks accumulating are far outrunning the demand. Butter is in close touch with cheese, and when one is dull the other is almost sure to be in the same condition. More is coming on in tubs than last week, but the first part of the week was cool enough to make roll shipping perfectly safe. A comparison with prices for this time last year is interesting. Quotations were then as follows: Creamery prints, 20 to 21c; creamery solids, fresh, 19 to 20c, and dairy rolls, large, 14 to 15c; dairy prints, 16 to 17c; tubs, 14 to 15 1-2c. This week we quote:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 17
Dairy rolls, large	0 11	0 13
" prints	0 13	0 14

Cheese—There is a slightly better demand for export this week, but its effect on prices is very small, as it assumes a tendency rather than an actual increase in the outlet. Large stocks of old cheese are on hand, and this is responsible for the dullness. Stocks were bought by exporters at such high prices last year that the sale in England decreased greatly during the Winter. Cheese is an article of such large consumption in that country that a falling off in the demand is very simply effected. Exporters have lost a great deal of money this Winter on cheese. We quote the following:

Cheese, large, old	0 09½	0 10
" new fodder	0 08	0 08½
" twins	0 08½	0 08¾

Montreal and Quebec.

Provisions—The receipts of provisions still continue to increase, there being 320 packages of tinned meats and 152 boxes of hams and bacon offered on Monday. Private cables indicate better prices for Canadian bacon in the Old Country, in London and Bristol. In London the advance is from 2s to 4s per cwt. and the price 44s to 52s. The rise in Bristol is only about 1s to 4s, making prices about 40s to 50s. There was a slight advance in the price of hogs, of a quarter of a cent per pound. From packers the demand was good and sales were made up to 5 1-2c a pound. For fresh killed abattoir stock there was no change. The tone was firm and sales were made freely at from $7.25 to $7.50 per hundred. In lard and bacon locally there was a steady trade doing all round, and activity ruled. We quote:

Butter—The butter market is still quiet and uninteresting. From the Eastern Townships it was learned that at the Dairymen's Exchange, held in Sherbrooke on Monday afternoon, twenty-five factories were represented. Mr. Jas. McKinnon, the president, in addressing the meeting, advised the members of the board to combine together for the time being, and not to sell any dealer in Montreal that would not attend the sales. Only one Montreal buyer was reported to have qualified on that day. This was Mr. John Orpe. It is expected that at another meeting, however, Montreal buyers will have representatives present. Mr. Orpe purchased 300 packages of butter at 14 3-4c. This is practically the ruling price for a very good grade of butter. We quote 15c as standard.

Cheese—The prices of cheese seemed mixed early in the week. There was a firmer undertone, yet no definite advance could be noted. Better prices were paid in the country. This is surmised to be, however, a speculative deal, and is not the true value of cheese. It would be difficult, therefore, to declare an improvement in cheese, although the tendency points that way. From Great Britain, however, there are the most gloomy reports. Several of Montreal's largest produce merchants have just returned from Europe, and while some of them are optimistic, the Old Country advices do not back them up. One advice stated that between Liverpool, London and Bristol there were still 250,000 of old cheese unabsorbed on the 7th of May. Some of the local exporters confess that it is easier to sell the new make cheese than it was at the beginning of last week. They will not deny, however, that there is no improvement in the Old Country situation to warrant the increased prices paid within the last few days. There were actual transactions in Quebec goods at 6 1-2 to 6 3-4c, and in Ontario makes at 6 3-4c to 7c, while the combination of the two makes changed hands at 6 3-4c. On the other hand, 1,500 boxes of Quebec cheese, offered at the wharf, commanded a first cost of 6 1-2c, which is an advance of a quarter of a cent on Monday of last week, and should be equal to a spot price of 6 3-4c, so that altogether, prices are irregular, ranging from 6 1-2c to 6 3-4c on Quebecs and 6 7-8c to 7 1-8c on Ontarios. The first cheese here has been of very poor quality, or no doubt better prices could have been attained.

BUTTER AND CHEESE EXPORTS.

Considerable interest is being taken in the stronger tone of the cheese market, which is dealt with elsewhere. The exports of butter for the week ending May 14th, from Montreal and Portland, and from New York for the week previous, were as follows:

	Montreal.	New York

The shipments of cheese from Montreal and Portland for the week ending May 14 and from New York the week previous, were as follows:

Same week last year	11,985	4,413	12,343

Provisions—In barreled pork and beef prices are rather firmer, but sales are very small. Smoked meats have a fair demand, chiefly in local cured. Pure lard is at least no higher. The low price of pure tends to a lighter demand for compound lard. In fresh meats, domestic beef is in but fair supply. Western is unchanged in price. Veal is plentiful. Mutton is quite firm. Lamb is still high. Pork is low, with a light sale.

Export Trade in Eggs.

THAT the Canadian export trade in eggs has already assumed big proportions is seen by the annual report of the Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa, which estimates the total exportations of eggs from Canada in 1903 at $1,436,130. The bulk of Canadian eggs exported goes to Great Britain, although a promising market has opened up in the Canadian Northwest, where veritable hordes of new settlers will require large quantities of eggs for some time to come. The Northwest cannot begin to use the surplus of Canadian eggs, however, and exporters continue to look to the English market. There are practically no limits to the latter except that of price, and just now the fact that Canadian eggs are two cents a dozen higher than ordinarily at this season of the year, is acting as an effective barrier to their introduction on English markets. "The English consumer," said one provision dealer," has not been in the habit of paying such a record price, and simply won't take our eggs." Under ordinary circumstances there is a brisk demand for Canadian eggs, and dealers in England will take as many as Canadian exporters care to send them. It cannot help but cause envy in hearts of Canadian egg exporters, to learn that Great Britain imported last year $30,659,679 worth of eggs, their share of which was comparatively small, being only $1,420,760. During the same year Canada also exported to the United States eggs to the extent of $6,436, and to other countries to the extent of $8,934. The following figures represent the total egg exportations from Canada for the last 19 years :

Year ended 30th June.	Value.
1885	1,830 632
1886	1,728.082
1887	1,825 559
1888	2,122,283
1889	2,159,510
1890	1,795,214
1891	1,160,359
1892	1,089,798
1893	868,007
1894	714 054
1895	807,990
1897	978,479
1898	1,255,304
1899	1,267,063
1900	1,457,902
1901	1,691,640
1902	1,733,242
1903	1,436,130

The British market has been exploited by Canadian egg exporters for some 15 or 20 years, during which time the trade has undergone several changes. Formerly eggs were sent in long coffin-shaped cases, holding 120 dozen, packed in straw. Now 30-dozen cases are used almost exclusively, having cardboard fillers and nail tops or patent wire fasteners, although the latter are by far the more popular. Much greater care is exercised in sorting and packing eggs than heretofore, and at the present time complaints on this score are heard against only a few of the smaller dealers. It is no secret that steamship companies have vastly improved their facilities for carriage, which fact has also helped materially to improve the egg trade.

The demand in England is principall for glycerined eggs, although "new-laid" find ready sales. Glycerined eggs are the same as ordinary pickled eggs, with the exception of having a particular finish required by the English trade. Fresh eggs are gathered late in the Summer season and placed in cold storage. These require to be shipped in cold storage and will not keep well if subjected to changes of temperature.

Canadian egg exporters say the outlook for 1904 is not particularly bright. As a matter of fact last year was not a profitable year for this department of export trade. More eggs are being consumed at home, and the consumption in the Northwest is an increasingly important factor, together with the high price of poultry, which has caused farmers to kill off stock. The principal reason, however, for the unfavorable outlook is decreased supplies, the egg season being from four to eight weeks later than last year, and the high prices prevailing. Certain egg dealers have gone so far as to withdraw from the export trade until prices adjust themselves to a more reasonable level.

Expansion of Dairy Industry.

THE expansion of the Canadian dairy industry depends largely on export of creamery butter, and as the extent to which this trade may be developed depends in turn on a high standard of quality being established, the Canadian Government is justified in adopting every means necessary to protect the good name of Canadian creamery butter.

The relative selling price of all butter made in Canada is influenced and regulated by the price obtained for that which is exported. It is obvious, therefore, that anything which tends to improve that price will help the whole trade. That there is still room for a great increase in exports of fancy creamery to the markets of the United Kingdom is shown by the fact that during the year ending June 30th, 1903, Canada sent only about 6 per cent. of the total importation. The following countries compete with Canada : Denmark, Russia, France, Holland, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, United States, Belgium, Argentina and Germany. The four first named each supply more at present than Canada does. In some of these countries stringent laws have been enacted to regulate the marking, grading and export of butter. Canadians must do likewise if they wish to compete successfully in this important trade.

"FULTON'S," ADVERTISING CONTRACTORS.

THERE is in London, Eng., an old established house of advertising contractors whose way of doing business is somewhat unique, and whose methods of working are so successful as to command orders from many of the largest manufacturers of proprietary articles in Great Britain. This house, Fulton's, employs a small army of work people, and there are few, if any, other organizations, who work on the same lines or are so successful in producing a demand for any article of household use in so short a time.

The essence of the system is to show and talk up the article with the housewife, through the medium of a staff of experienced saleswomen, to go to a town with the object of interviewing every housewife resident and introducing whatever article a client wishes to have placed on the market. The ground is systematically worked from house to house and street to street. Wherever possible a signed order is taken from the housewife to be executed by the retailer she usually deals with. At the same time the wholesale and retail trade are supplied, in order that these traders may be in a position to execute immediately all orders that the staff of agents take from the public daily. Goods for the execution of such trade orders are delivered, and every trade account is guaranteed, so that manufacturers have practically nothing to do but supply the goods ordered, sending them forward carriage paid to the town or towns in which these operations are being conducted. There is no friction with the public or the retail or wholesale trades. Thousands of accounts have already been opened throughout the country and Fultons are well enough known in many parts to produce by their direct methods a trade for any article of household use or consumption quickly, and taking all their services into consideration, at a comparatively economical cost.

A representative of The Grocer was favored with a "private view" of some of their systems and a diary of results, and the figures were most surprising, showing that actual sales had resulted to 33 1-2 per cent of the families in those areas of Great Britain which had been contracted for. The advertisement of the company in this number of Grocer is worth the attention of any Canadian manufacturers who want to get their goods on the British market, and detailed information will gladly be given by Fulton's to any who wish to make private inquiry.

MR. JULES COTE,

THE Canadian Grocer takes pleasure in presenting to its readers in this issue a portrait of one of Ottawa's bright young business men. Mr. Jules Cote, manager and secretary-treasurer of the firm of S. J. Major, wholesale grocers, Ottawa.

Mr. Cote was born in 1879 at St. Stanislaus de Champlain, P.Q., singularly enough the very year that the business in which he now holds a guiding position was founded by the late Mr. S. J. Major. At the age of thirteen he entered Ottawa University, from which institution he was graduated at the end of three years. Six months later he entered the employ of the late Mr. Major as assistant book-keeper. Through close application and hard work he became head acocuntant in two years, and shortly after was promoted to the management of the business. Owing to illness Mr. Major, his principal, was ordered to Europe. On the death of that gentleman last June it became necessary to reorganize the business; a joint stock company was formed, and incorporated in December, 1903, under the firm name of S. J. Major, taking over the business of the estate. Mrs. Major, widow of the late S. J. Major, retained a controlling interest in the stock, while Mr. Cote secured a good share for himself. The corporation is a close one, being composed of only a few members.

Mr. Jules Cote, Manager and Secretary-Treasurer of firm of S. J. Major. Wholesale Grocers, Ottawa.

Mr. Cote is a hard and steady worker, with a most agreeable manner and progressive ideas. He is a good and ready buyer, and generally knows what he wants for his trade. As an evidence of the growth of the business it may be stated that when the management of affairs passed into his hands the annual turn-over was only half a million, while last year's statement showed close to one million dollars.

Mr. Cote was married on April 18th last to Miss Catherine Gravel, of Rockliffe, a suburb of Ottawa, where he resides at present. For a young man of not quite twenty-five years to have charge of a business of such importance and magnitude is certainly creditable, as well as an evidence of what close application, careful study and attention to an employers' interests will do.

AN ENORMOUS BINDER.

The Rolla L. Crain Company, of Ottawa, manufacturers of loose leaf systems, have had on exhibition in Ottawa the largest loose leaf ledger binder ever made in Canada. It was made for the Ontario Department of Crown Lands, and is designed to hold sheets 29x34 inches; the length when opened out is within a few inches of six feet. This binder is on exhibition in the windows of the Mason-Risch Piano Company, Toronto, and the work reflects credit upon the Rolla L. Crain Company.

REFLECTION.

IN the March 31 issue of The Grocer an article appeared concurrently with many other periodicals regarding the Japanese Government and the tea subsidy, referring directly to its effect upon the Central Japan Tea Traders' Association which has one of its largest offices in Montreal. Extracts are quoted noting the result of the subsidy expenditure, and as the whole article was printed from the Kobe, Japan, Chronicle no personal reference could have been intended. Japanese tea traders the world over have established a reputation for respectability and standing; and that Japan is an important tea producing country is unquestioned. Any thought of displeasing allusions to the association's personnel was absolutely foreign to the intention of The Grocer.

CANNED GOODS DEPARTMENT

Canadian Canned Goods Trade.

THE canned goods industry in Canada is one whose chief feature during the last few years has been its remarkable development. Canned goods may be roughly divided into the four general departments—canned meats, canned vegetables, canned fruit and canned fish.

EXPORTS OF CANNED GOODS.

Canned meats, poultry, etc.	$104,718	$312,290	$423,045	$882,191	$619,911
Canned fruits	293,660	329,696	181,829	143,244	403,558
Canned vegetables, such as tomatoes, corn, etc.	19,934	18,101	43,566	118,013	34,128
Total	$418,312	$660,087	$648,440	$1,143,448	$1,057,597

CANNED MEATS.

The variety of canned meats put up by Canadian manufacturers is almost innumerable. Only a few years ago corned beef, dried beef, and a few other staple lines covered the list. To-day the variety is surprising, including ready lunch beef, chipped beef, sliced smoked beef, ham, pigs' feet, mutton, roast and boiled ox and lamb's tongue, potted and devilled tongue, veal, chicken and turkey loaf, jellied hock, and many other lines. The home consumption has also shown a marked increase, and at the present time Canadian meat packers have a practical monopoly of the home trade. Formerly American interests carried on a more or less extensive trade with Canada in canned meats. This, however, has dwindled of late years, and the percentage of American goods sold to Canadian consumers has become comparatively small, the exception being in fancy meat loaves which are being put up so attractively as to capture the Canadian trade. One wholesale dealer's opinion on this feature of the trade was that directly Canadian manufacturers set about it to equal, if not surpass, the efforts of American packers, there could be little doubt as to the direction trade would take. One prominent American packing firm has evidently realized the seriousness of the situation in as far as it is sending its representatives out among the retail trade.

During the South African War Canadian packers developed a healthy export trade in canned meats, principally beef, which trade has become somewhat curtailed since, although the exportation of canned meats on a large scale is looked forward to as a realization of the very near future. In 1903 Canada's exports of canned meats were $619,911, as against $104,718 in 1899—an increase of $515,193.

CANNED VEGETABLES.

Ten years ago the quantity of canned vegetables put up in Canada came within very small compass. Canned corn, peas, and tomatoes were on the market then as a comparative novelty. There has since been an enormous increase in the home consumption of these staple lines, and at the same time a promising increase in exports to Great Britain, although canned vegetables with the exception of tomatoes are not in brisk demand in the English market, owing to the large quantities of vegetables which are grown at home. It may interest the ordinary reader to know that canned corn is almost unknown to the English consumer. The price of canned vegetables there, moreover, places them practically beyond the reach of the poorer classes.

Another feature of the canned vegetable trade is the enormous demand for canned pork and beans which has sprung up within the last few years. Canned soups have also become one of the leading features of the canned vegetable trade, and it is no secret that Canadian canners of the same have won an enviable reputation for their soups. A representative from Armour's packing establishment who visited Canada recently, remarked that he had not seen anything in the trade to surpass Canadian soups. Canadian canners have practically a monopoly of the home trade in canned vegetables, and are still making great strides, especially in the newly settled districts of the Canadian Northwest.

CANNED FRUIT.

The Canadian canned fruit industry has shown equally rapid development, being fully ten times as extensive as it was eight or ten years ago. The large home trade is now supplied almost exclusively by Canadian canners, while Canadian exports have increased from $293,660 in 1899 to $403,558 in 1903. It may interest the trade to know that the English demand is mostly for fruit put up in bottles, rather than in tins, and the majority of English canners put up canned fruit in no other way. One feature of the trade to-day is the gallon tins which have become a popular size for putting up both canned vegetables and fruit.

CANNED FISH.

The oldest established and perhaps on the whole the most successful department in the canned goods industry in Canada is that of canned fish, the total value of fish exported from Canada in 1903 being $10,014,298, mostly British Columbia salmon, herring, cod, and mackerel, as compared with $8,718,053 in 1899. Recently Canadian kippered herring have almost entirely displaced Scottish goods, which formerly held the Canadian market. These are exported mostly to the New England States. Canadian canned haddies are also a comparative novelty, although the export trade in them has already assumed considerable proportions. The trade, however, in canned lobsters has diminished owing to the poor catches during the past few years, and prices have almost become prohibitive. At the present time ½ lb. tins cost 25c, whereas the price formerly was only 15c. for pound tins. The big feature of the canned fish trade, however, is that in Canadian sock-eye salmon, which are known the world over.

Exports of canned meat, vegetables, fruit and fish are rapidly increasing in value, totalling more than $6,000,000 in 1903 as compared with $3,700,000 in 1893.

A Modern Canning Plant.

THE Bloomfield Packing Co., Bloomfield, Ont., have recently made a number of changes in their plant in the way of additions and improvements. The capacity of their storehouse has been doubled, being now 280x60 feet, two storeys high and built so substantially that the upper storey can be safely filled to the roof with canned goods. Two new boilers have been installed of 80 horse power each. Numerous improvements in the way of pea filling machines, pea graders, corn cutters, caping machines, etc., have been added to the pea and corn canning sections, until their capacity is now 150 cans per minute—double what it was last season. The capacity of the tomato plant stands at present unchanged, 72 cans per minute, although the management say they expect to make changes which will increase this 100 per cent. between now and tomato packing time.

As a partial solution to the labor question, the company last Fall erected a three-storey building 30x100 feet. This is intended as a boarding house and has free accommodation for one hundred people. It is now being furnished in a very comfortable manner throughout, lighted with electricity, etc. Meals will be furnished to employes at the low rate of 10 cents each. One of the buildings in contemplation, but not yet commenced, is a kindergarten, where the little ones can be taken care of and taught while their mothers are packing tomatoes and husking corn.

With a view to increasing the efficiency of the staff, a number of changes and additions have also been made. Mr. D. D. Ranney, of Salt Lake City, the new superintendent, arrived a few days ago to assume his duties. Two other fresh faces on the ground this year are Mr. Ball and Mr. Allan, first and second engineers, respectively, who arrived from Birmingham, England, last week. Mr. Mac Clark, electrician, late of Glasgow, Scotland, has also been added to the staff. With all these changes, additions to plant, etc., the management hope this year to pack the requirements of the country for "Quaker" canned goods, something they have not been able to do since the establishment of the business four years ago.

Mr. N. Peace, of Birmingham, Eng., is president of the company, and Mr. T. E. Owens, manager. Mr. Peace is now on his way from England to take a look over the factory for the first time, it being forty-two years since he was last in Canada. The manager, Mr. T. E. Owens, is well-known from coast to coast, having for fifteen years represented the Century Co. of Picton. He was also connected with the late Mr. Wm. Newman, of Fairport, N. Y., when he first introduced "Pure Gold" goods to the Canadian public.

A New Canning Factory.

THE wholesale and retail grocery trade will be interested in learning of a new canning factory, with location at Picton, Ont., in the famed County of Prince Edward. The new concern is styled the "Old Homestead Canning Co.," and the brand of the goods will be "The Old Homestead." Associated in the enterprise are men of repute and substance. The manager, A. H. Baker, is a widely known resident of Picton, having for many years past been extensively engaged in the evaporated fruit trade. A modern factory, built of concrete hollow blocks, is in the course of erection, and one hundred men are hastening forward the work of completion in time for the opening of the strawberry season.

The bulk of the machinery—all of it of the most approved sort—is in place. A process man has been brought in from the United States, and if half of the good things said of him are true, his principals will be more than satisfied.

Prince Edward County will furnish the fruits and vegetables, a guarantee straightway of an excellent product. The new company will compete for high-class trade since they propose to make only a high-grade quality. "Old Homestead" labels are very attractive,—an item of importance in commanding public favor. Shelf goods that please the eye have a self-selling power too great to be ignored.

W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, grocery brokers and manufacturers' agents, will act as selling agents for the "Old Homestead" canned goods.

AN ENTERPRISING POTATO GROWER.

"Beauty of the Valley" is the name of a potato introduced to this country by J. F. Lavoie, of Cote des Neiges West, P. Q. It is a fine tuber impervious to the contagion of rot, no matter where planted or cast, in fact Mr. Lavoie claims it is invulnerable even when side by side with diseased potatoes. To give an idea of the value of culturing such splendid food products, it may be mentioned that he raised a little less than a thousand bags last year, and recently received as high as $1 to $1.25 for them. They are fine cooking potatoes and the sales were made largely for seed purposes.

TARIFF OF UNITED KINGDOM.

THE provisions of the British budget come as a reminder how very few articles appear in the customs tariff of the United Kingdom. The impost upon tea is to be sixteen cents per pound, and upon unmanufactured tobacco somewhat less than a dollar a pound. Cocoa imports pay two cents, and coffee four cents a pound, sugar from fifty cents to a dollar a hundred weight, according to standard; confectionery, canned and dried fruits, such as currants, raisins, etc., are liable to a small duty, also condensed milk and marmalade, but there the list of taxed articles of food ends. Sparkling wines pay a duty of sixty cents per gallon, and spirits from four to five times more, according to their strength.

The entire revenue from customs tariffs in the United Kingdom, according to the figures for the year ended last March was only $167,688,710 out of a total revenue of $738,056,764. More revenue was received from the property and income tax, which latter is not paid by persons earning less than $800 a year, and rarely by those earning any weekly wage.

The contrast between the financial system of Canada and that of the United Kingdom is very strikingly illustrated by the fact that of the total revenue the customs duties amount to considerably more than one-half, while in Britain the proportion of indirect taxation through the customs tariff last year was but little more than one-fifth of the total revenue.

"The resolution passed upon the night when Mr. Chamberlain introduced his budget scheme was carried by large majorities," says the Montreal Herald, "in order that the extra duties upon tea and tobacco could be at once levied, otherwise there would have been a rush to evade the possible duty by taking goods out of bond before the House had made up its mind."

THE PICKLE TRADE OF CANADA

THIRTY years ago Canadian pickles were looked at askance by the better class of Canadian trade, and well they might be, since Canadian manufacturers at that time had scarcely begun to learn the a, b, c, of the art of putting up fancy sauces, relishes, pickles. Pioneers in the grocery trade remember well when the only line manufactured at home was plain cucumber pickles prepared after the crudest possible fashion. Then a housewife had no choice but to take the imported article.

A Great Change.

however has taken place in the character of the pickle trade. Canadian manufacturers, not slow to see a good thing, have followed the example of their English and European predecessors in endeavoring to put up condiments such as would tempt the appetite of the most fastidious. That they have been successful is proved by the rapidly increased consumption of home-made pickles in the Canadian market. A brisk demand has sprung up where formerly a prejudice existed, and in popularity the Canadian article is steadily gaining ground on the article of foreign manufacture. This is easily seen from the relative amounts of imports of pickles from Great Britain, the United States and other countries during the last few years. In 1889 Canada's importations of pickles amounted to 102,200 gallons, valued at $108,364; in 1895, 107,496 gallons were imported, valued at $100,-399. In 1902 and 1903 the quantities and values of importations were 291,-792 gallons, $233,929; and 439,306 gallons, and $313,514, respectively. By far the largest part of the last importations were pickles in jars or bottles, the total being made up as follows: Pickles in jars, $187,220; pickles in bulk, $32,676; sauces and catsups in bottles, $80,531; sauces and catsups in bulk, $6,933; soy, $6,154. The increase in importations of pickles shows considerable progress, which is to be expected with the population rapidly growing, and home manufactories hardly able as yet to supply the home demand. It is more than offset, however, by the increase in the output of Canadian manufactories. A representative of The Grocer interviewed one of the largest Canadian retailers on the subject, and was told that the percentage of sales of home-made pickles was fully half or over of his total sales. The demand for Canadian pickles, he said, had shown wonderful improvement, and although a certain percentage of what was known as the fancy trade would still call for the imported article, the trade in general had come to the conclusion that Canadian pickles were at least equal to anything on the market. No statistics are obtainable, but it seems as if considerably over half the home market, from sixty to seventy per cent., is supplied by Canadian manufacturers; they will be in a position to supply the home market altogether directly they get Canadians sufficiently educated to the relative merits of home-made pickles.

Conditions Favorable in Canada.

Conditions of climate and soil in Canada are wonderfully adapted for the growing of all the vegetables required by the pickle industry on a large scale. She can easily grow enough of such produce to supply the home market. The majority of Canadian pickle manufacturers are looking farther ahead than this, however. There is a possibility ultimately developing a Canadian export trade in pickles. If England can feed her own population and have and to spare, why cannot Canada with much greater resources do as well?

Canadian manufacturers of pickles have branched out in a surprising way, and to-day the number and variety of sauces and condiments bearing the Canadian stamp is legion. It is no longer necessary to think the only chutney in the world comes away from India. A dozen varieties of the same are manufactured right at home, which do not suffer in the least from comparison with the former.

Salting Stations.

The ways and means by which the Canadian pickle maker obtains supplies of raw material are worth noting. Certain likely districts for growing the necessary vegetables, situated conveniently within a radius of a hundred miles or so of the central factory, are exploited, and salting stations built. It is calculated that a possible poor crop in one district will at least be offset by a better yield in the vicinity of another salting station. Here stocks are gathered in season, and put in brine where they are kept until required for manufacturing purposes. Frequently supplies have been held for as long as two years, and when taken out have been found to be perfectly preserved.

For the last two or three years supplies of vegetables have been difficult to obtain owing to scarcity of labor. Large numbers of laborers are flocking to the Northwest and it has been found difficult, and in some cases impossible, to replace them, owing to the fact that the majority of new comers also go straight to the Northwest. Manufacturers, however, are hopeful that this will soon be adjusted, and that vegetable growing which under ordinary circumstances pays exceedingly well will be undertaken on a much larger scale in Canada than it has hitherto been.

Freight Rates Too High.

One complaint is being raised by pickle manufacturers all over Canada, namely, that freight rates are too high. Owing to what they conceive to be unfair discrimination on the part of railways and steamship companies, English manufacturers are able to place their stock on the markets of Western Canada as cheaply as Canadian manufacturers. It will be granted that labor is cheaper in England, but it is manifestly unfair that there should be no relative difference between freight charges from England and from Ontario to the Northwest respectively. This is a question which might very well be taken up by the Dominion Railway Commission. Canadian manufacturers are undoubtedly competing against big odds and the surprising thing is that they have been able to do it so successfully. At the same time it is claimed that those who have charge of transportation in Canada should give a preference to the manufacturers at home if to anyone.

The general impression seems to be that the preference which English pickles enjoy entering Canada ought to be sufficient without the granting of additional favors.

Trade Requires Watching.

The pickle trade requires eternal watching in every department if it is to be developed. We have to be continually on the alert to make up none but the best quality going, said a prominent Canadian pickle manufacturer. Not only because we want to give our customers the very best pickle obtainable, but because we have strong competition in the imported article. Another important item the manufacturer has ever before him is that of suitable packages. Public taste is continually undergoing change and the manufacturer has to be in a position to supply whatever consumption demands. One section of a community may prefer small packages, in another the demand is for large packages exclusively. The enterprising manufacturer therefore will see to it that his particular brands of pickles, sauces, etc., have first claim to supremacy in the minds of the largest possible adian manufacturies. A representative number and variety of customers the world over.

Wholesale Grocer's Trip to the West Indies.

WHEN in Ottawa last week The Grocer had an interview with A. Allard, of Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, who has lately returned from a two months' tour through the West Indies. Mr. Allard's recital of his experiences was a most interesting one, and as he is a close observer of things commercial, his trip was enjoyable as well as instructive. Many of the commodities handled by the grocery trade, such as sugar, molasses, onions, lime juice, cocoanuts, etc., are indigenous to the islands, and a study of their growth, cultivation and preparation for the market was naturally of great attraction and interest. Mr. Allard left Ottawa February 11, sailing from Halifax on February 18, by the ss. Dahome of the Pickford & Black line.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH THE ISLANDS.

Mr. Allard's views as to the possibilities of trade between Canada and the islands and Demerara are pronounced, and as a true and progressive Canadian he feels depressed at the opportunities for mutual trade which are being neglected on all sides. "Why, every merchant I spoke to expressed a decided preference for dealing with Canada, and the wonder to me is that Canadian manufacturers have not taken advantage of the friendly hand held out to them by their fellow colonial citizens. We can sell them canned goods, flour, furniture, boots and shoes, butter, soap, canned meats, etc., in large quantities, exchanging with them sugar, molasses, Bermuda onions, sweet potatoes, bananas, oranges, and other tropical fruits. Canadian canned goods are in favor but I found that no regular shipments are being made, and continuity in supplies is necessary in order to secure a hold on the consumer. First-class goods, I found, bring good prices, and as we can put up these lines as well as any other country, our packers are losing a good market. English and American packers are getting the trade in this line and unless our packers bestir themselves and follow up the trade regularly it will be a difficult matter to get in at all."

POSSIBILITIES NOT FOLLOWED UP.

Mr. Allard expressed surprise that the jobbers of Halifax, favorably situated as they are with continuous and regular steamship services, do not reach out for some of this trade, such as bacon, hams, pork, fish, etc., which are staple and steady sellers. "Spasmodic trips," said Mr. Allard, "have been made by a few Canadian manufacturers and shippers, but as they are not followed up, the result is naturally unsatisfactory. What is needed is for a firm to send representatives down there at regular intervals; then the trade will know what to depend on, and reserve a portion of this valuable business.

"I learned that there is one Toronto firm which has gauged the possibilities of trade, I think it is Northrop & Lyman Co., who send a representative down there every six months.

BUTTER AND FLOUR.

"Butter to be marketable must be packed in tins, principally 1-lb. and 2-lbs. With the quality our Canadian creameries produce there is no reason in the world why we shouldn't get a good share of this trade. Flour to be properly landed must be put up in barrels, as flour in sacks is too liable to moisture and will not keep in salable condition."

MANUFACTURE OF SUGAR AND MOLASSES.

Mr. Allard, in company with five other tourists, had the privilege of visiting one of the large sugar plantations of the Diamond Co., at Demerara. An inspection of the same and observation of the process of extracting the sugar from the cane, grinding, centrifugal process, and manufacture of molasses, was one of the most interesting features of his trip. The attention that has been paid of late to the production of Barbadoes molasses by the larger refiners has resulted in the making of a grade of molasses bringing prices equal to the highest Porto Rico makes, and shipments are being made to the United States markets at very remunerative prices. On the smaller plantations the methods appear to be after the simplest and crudest possible fashion, but in a few years it is believed planters will recognize the value of improved machinery and higher grades of goods will be produced as a result.

"I had the pleasure of meeting Sir Daniel Morris, commissioner of agriculture, at the Leeward Islands, to whose efforts and energy are largely due the best results that are being brought out of the islands. Sir Daniel is, of course, an appointee of the Imperial Government, and so directly in touch and sympathy with the views of the rulers in Downing street, who are paying a good deal of attention to the development of the West India Islands."

WEST INDIAN STORES.

Mr. Allard stated that the stores in the larger islands were in every respect the equal of the best we can show here. Stocks are bright, clean, well assorted and well kept, and the merchants every whit as keen and up-to-date as we Canadians claim to be. Prices are reasonable and profits on a par with our own. Demerara, on the mainland, was one of the most interesting districts visited, and Trinidad and Bardadoes impressed him as being thriving islands, capable of showing good business to Canadian manufacturers and shippers.

Mr. Allard's advice to merchants desiring a holiday in which health, recreation and benefit may be pleasantly and profitably combined is, "take a Pickford & Black steamer for the West Indies."

BIG NEW YORK COMPANY.

MR. JOHN C. JUHRING, vice-president and secretary of Francis H. Leggett & Co., importing and manufacturing grocers of New York, in an interview stated that their trade has been picking up rapidly since May 1, and business is now excellent. Though April was a quiet month, the company's sales up to May 1 of this year were quite up to the average of a year ago. The falling off in April did not appear to be due to either special or general causes, unless caution on the part of buyers might be called general. This was a good and not a bad feature, as stocks are light in both first and second hands, and as everyone has been buying from hand to mouth for the last three months.

Francis H. Leggett & Co., announce that they are opening a branch house in St. Louis. The managers of the branch, Messrs. H. J. Koch and J. J. Lee, have secured a five-storey building at 508 North Main street, where they are putting in a stock.

REMOVAL.

The Duncan Company of Montreal, manufacturers of "Chaser" Laundry Soap, have removed from Inspector street to 1,974 and 1,976 Notre Dame street. The business has increased to such an extent that larger and more suitable premises were a necessity. Their premium system, conducted on entirely new lines, has proved such a success with the trade and the consumer that larger showrooms were required. In the near future the company will open up premium and sales rooms in the larger business centres of Canada and the merits of "Chaser" Soap will be known from the east to the far west.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

A Maple Window.

WHEN window dressers start out with the idea of building a fancy window, they so often lose sight of the fact that the features included that are not a part or an adjunct of the goods handled, are in the majority of cases a waste of time and expense.

By this it is not meant that the picture window has no place in the plans of a window dresser, but that serious consideration should be given the question whether such a display will sell goods, and whether just as attractive a window cannot be arranged out of the goods themselves, or with accessories that are closely related to the goods shown. If this is not possible the picture window can be used occasionally—not oftener than the special holiday seasons, and perhaps two or three times more.

In the present development of window dressing the picture window (and by this is meant the one that contains no or slight reference to any line of goods carried) is of little service. It may attract a crowd, but so common are tasty displays that the name of the firm exhibiting is often never noticed, and even if it is there is doubt if any substantial benefit results unless made use of on a few occasions only.

There are open to the trimmer schemes in great numbers that are just as attractive to the average public as the picture window, and will prove far more profitable. The expense of dressing these windows is much less, and there is little danger of working in too much and thus ruining the general effect. If the window dresser has before his mind a definite conception of the goods he is to display, and is not simply building a background that would be suitable for dried herring or vinegar, he is less likely to let his imagination run away with him in the production of a scene that would rank with the prospectus of a new gold mining company.

Maple syrup and sugar are in themselves awkward articles for effective display, but in this window has been attempted something that makes of it an excellent advertisement, as well as one that has all the advantages of a picture window. A scene in a maple woods is always picturesque and interesting, and Mr. Hasenflug has utilized this to a most commendable extent.

The scheme is simple, the expense next to nothing, and the finished window all that could be desired. The rough bark hut used in the maple woods is the centre of attraction, and over its head hang the branches of a large maple tree tapped and bucketted as it would be in the woods. The mirror at the side assists the scene materially by giving an air of greater space and more trees. The snow on the ground and on the roof of the hut, represented by batting, gives the proper surroundings, as does the bit of log carelessly placed in the foreground. At the back is a white sheet with branches placed against it. An owl in the tree gives life to the picture.

Care has been shown in the placing of the goods advertised. A few stacks of bottles and a few cakes of maple sugar are all that is necessary to show the application of the woods scene, and the few twigs scattered among them on the snow takes off the "shoppy" look.

Price tickets have not been forgotten, and they are appropriately in the shape of a maple leaf. The smaller size are the better ones, although a larger size is necessary to include the wording desired. The two larger leafs could have been a little smaller, or one could have borne both phrases without the prices, leaving that to the smaller cards.

Display Criticisms.

Merchants are invited to take advantage of these columns for a helpful criticism of window displays which they have shown, or the interior of their store. Suggestions will be gladly made by the window and interior critic, and window dressers will be enabled to get far better results from their plans. Send in your photos, and they will be published and commented upon. There is scarcely a window but could be improved and every improvement means better business. Try it.

A Holiday Display.

THE holiday seasons, such as Easter, Dominion Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas, etc., call for some special effort on the window dresser's part. At these times arrangements that have no value as direct advertisements of any goods carried are perfectly proper and will be found, in many cases, of great value. The special Easter arrangement shown with this article was built by Mr. Whitesides, for F. Carne, Jr., Victoria, B. C., and contains ideas that would be effective in attracting attention.

The color scheme is purple, white and green. The background is made of two screens 5x5 feet each, with scrolls as shown. The whole is covered with white calico, and over this is spread a covering of white net. The entire structure is then outlined with pale purple cheese cloth, in the style known as ball-puffing, and starting from the bottom of the frame is a profuse growth of artificial smilax vine climbing upwards, with small bunches of artificial violets pinned to the smilax as a relief.

A—Skeleton of frame built of 1 x 1½ inch cedar.
B—Board ½ x 18 x 8 inches.
C—Braces.
D—Bracket to hold E.
E—Iron gas pipe for shaft.
F—Screw head to hold fan. A similar one holds pulley.
H—Piece of wood 1 x 6 x 6 inches screwed to F.
K—Fan 6 feet long.
L—Eight-inch pully.
X—Reducer.
Y—Motor.

In the centre is a windmill, draped in white cheese cloth and decorated with smilax and violets. The fans are skeleton frames covered with white ball puffing with green ribbon between each puff. At the centre is a square piece of cedar 6 inches in size, covered with white and edged with white ball puffing very full. In the centre is a large bunch of artificial white violets with green leaves.

The second cut shows the framework of the mill in detail. Around the base of the mill is green moss with calla lilies, white violets and lilies of the valley showing here and there.

The floor is covered with cheese cloth with smilax trailing from the window to the centre. Four nests of green moss with colored eggs, two dolls with bunches of violets in their laps, and a colored egg in with the violets, complete the design.

The whole display has a quiet, artistic, unstrained appearance that too seldom characterizes elaborate designs of this description. Easter is symbolized in the eggs and flowers; Spring is noticed in the windmill, the flowers, the green leaves, and the moss, and life is given it by the dolls and moving arms of the windmill, which are connected with a motor under the floor.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

HOW CAPE BRETON ADVERTISES.

A FORTNIGHT ago I had something to say concerning some advertisements which appeared in a Newfoundland paper. A good friend of The Grocer in Sydney, N. S., sends me a half dozen advertisements taken from Sydney and Glace Bay papers, and suggests that I "can throw some hot shot at" them. "Hot shot" is doubtless intended to kill, but I hope that criticisms I may make from time to time concerning advertisements submitted for review neither kill nor wound their authors. FERGUSON'S CHEAP CASH STORE,
Main Street.

These Cape Breton advertisements vary greatly in character and quality,—some are distinctly good, one or two are fair, and other two are curiosities. Easily the best of them is that of Bertram Co., Limited. It is creditably "set up;" it is not crowded; it is devoted to one subject; the type display is first-class; it tells in exact language just what the probable customer wants to know; and it gives a simple, well expressed reason why people should buy fish. One does not often come across a better example of a good advertisement. The writer who prepared it is to be congratulated.

Judged by the standards by which the Bertram Co.'s advertisement has been measured the others fall decidedly short. The advertisement of Fulton's grocery is devoted to a single subject, in a sense, but beyond the fact that it emphasizes a brand of goods of known excellence, it does not tell very much, and of course will not sell very much. An advertisement should aim to have "news" in it. Advertising is news, and can be made readable and instructive. When merchants appreciate the news feature of advertising they are in the position to prepare good "copy."

The announcement of Ferguson's Cheap Cash Store is attractively set up. Its balanced arrangement and, the enumeration of goods of like character; its simplicity, all combine to make it a fair example. Yet it, too, fails in the supreme test—does it provoke desire for the goods advertised?

John McLeod & Son have a neat looking advertisement, but the closely printed list of a rather mixed up lot of sundries will not be read by many people, and conveys to those who may read it—nothing; it leaves the mind a blank. "If you are"—the caption of the advertisement, is very poor. This portion of an advertisement should strike quick and hard, and compel both the attention and the interest of the reader.

The compositor who set up James Hewson's advertisement surely is of the old school. The type is ancient. The arrangement is ancient,—and the language of the advertisement is more ancient still. One can in imagination see our friend James sitting on the wrong side of the counter smoking like a furnace, discussing with a kindred spirit the Crimean War. He has town lots to sell, but I venture to think it would surprise him—alarm him—did some one come in and say, "Mr. Hewson, I see in your advertisement that you are selling town lots."

And now for canny David Macpherson's four inches of space. Would he waste his opportunity? Not he! Dry goods; salt in bags; groceries; potatoes, turnips and oats; flour; meals, crockery and glassware; miners' supplies; furniture and house furnishings,—a Noah's Ark for variety. I have known a man who received $10,000 a year for preparing 312 advertisements, but I am absolutely certain he could not put as much in four inches of space as did thrifty

In Profitable Advertising for May appears an advertisement as follows:

A TALK TO MANUFACTURERS.

"The consumer is your first, not your last, court of resort. With the price and quality of your goods the jobber should have nothing to do. He does not use them. He simply passes them along. His legitimate place in the business world is that of a distributor merely. His influence on sales and consumption is too small to be considered.

"Convince the customer and your problem is solved. Trade flows from that source through the dealer and jobber to you.

"Make your product known to the people who ought to use it. Give it a name and a trade mark so it can be identified at sight. Communicate to the people the enthusiasm you feel for your product. Throw out your chest and advertise.

"The consumer is your jury, will hear your evidence and pass upon your case, and no one else has that right—not even you. If the verdict is favorable, the response will be generous and permanent. Your trade mark will be added to our vocabulary, and will become your most valuable business asset.

"You will then be in a position to dictate terms to both the jobber and dealer, who will carry your goods because they have a demand for them, and will accept your conditions because this demand compels them to."

To this remarkable utterance is attached the name of a New York firm of advertising specialists. Americans, mark you, who repudiate all monarchical forms of government and who proclaim every 4th of July with the waving of the Stars and Stripes and with the noisy din of giant crackers and screaming rockets that all mankind are born free and equal.

Listen! Down with the retailer! Down with the jobber! Long live the manufacturer! Let him be exalted and every other creature abased! Dictate terms to the jobber and dealer, forsooth! It is to be hoped that all the manufacturers who read the strange words above quoted will perceive the spirit of the men who wrote them. One can hear the buzzing wings of some blood-sucker if he will but listen closely.

It is becoming a very common delusion among many manufacturers that advertising to the consumer is the sort of advertising worth while. These men say: "We must create a demand for our goods, and then we don't need to care a rap about the retailer; he cannot help himself; he must carry our goods." This sounds reasonable and there is a large measure of truth in the statement; yet it brings to mind the old saying, "First catch your hare."

In theory it is all very well to create a demand among the consuming public for one's wares. In practice it takes a fortune to bring about the result desired, and many a manufacturer has spent the fortune and has not secured the demand. In the process two classes of people have prospered—the advertising counsellors (?) and the publishers of newspapers and magazines. It is not hard to "smell the rat" in the elaborately wrought out argument of the foregoing "talk." The advertising firm are hot foot after 10 per cent. of the appropriation required to "Communicate to the people the enthusiasm the manufacturer feels for his product."

What, for example, would it cost a manufacturer of a new cereal to put his goods before the public so forcibly that there would be created "a generous and premature response?" A million dollars is not too small a sum. What would it cost to maintain this demand year in and year out against old and new competitors? Another million dollars a year would almost certainly be required for this purpose. Or suppose it to be a new baking powder? or soap? or brand of biscuits? The manufacturer who has the good fortune to possess a line that is a new thing has a lesser task than if he is called upon to oust some older and well established competitor. He has no right to expect that he can with a paltry outlay drive out a well set commodity for whose establishment in public favor long years and many thousands of dollars have been spent. A word of caution to remember when some smooth tongued solicitor is urging a "campaign to the consumer," is "look before you leap,"—and look far.

There comes to my recollection an instance worth noting of a manufacturer who had an excellent article for which through its own merit and the co-operation of the retailers of the country there had been developed a magnificent sale. This manufacturer, flushed with success, was an easy prey to an "advertising authority," and was persuaded to spend $50,000 in newspaper and magazine advertising. The $50,000 was spent, the advertising agent made $5,000 or more, and the manufacturer, who had taken his salesmen off the road as being useless, found at the end of the year that he had sold but a fraction of what had been his output in former years. He was "sore," and $50,000 of good money, the fortune acquired in 25 years of diligent toil, had gone to enrich strangers. He vowed he wouldn't spend another cent in advertising. But the resourceful advertising counsellor persuaded him that $12,500 more would turn the tide of favor his way, and with the gambler's hope he undertook to continue his advertising another three months. The agent, of course, got $1,250 or more.

The pot of gold at the end of the rainbow seemed as far off as ever. The manufacturer, crippled, sadder and wiser, has returned to the retailer, and is seeking to bridge over a chasm of a year and three month's contempt for his best friend.

It is far from my thought or purpose to belittle advertising to the consumer. What I protest against is the doctrine that the retailer is a mere distributor, without influence, without backbone, a creature not worth considering by the manufacturer. My word to manufacturers is—advertise to the consumer if you can afford it, but advertise, too, to the salesman, who is very truly a distributor, but who is, in addition, a factor too important to be ignored or to be held in contempt. If your means are modest you can't afford to go after the consumer in any large way. It is better far to join forces with the retailer and, having his favor, it is an assured thing that your business will expand and there will be no woeful item in your expenses put there by the seductive allurements of men whose sole object is to get 10 per cent of your appropriation—the bigger the appropriation the larger, of course, their fee.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Cigar Selling—The Old and New Way.

By A. E. M.

CHARLES KINGSLEY says of tobacco: "For when all things were made, none was made better than this: to be a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire; while for staunching of wounds, purging of rheum, and settling of the stomach, there's no herb like it under the canopy of heaven."

Casting all prejudice aside, it must be admitted by all fair-minded people, even by non-smokers, that there is a good deal of truth in the above remarks, and at least the non-smoking community cannot justly bring the same arguments to bear against tobacco that it does against liquor selling. The handling and selling of cigars and tobacco to-day cannot be done in the same way as it was some years ago, when the storekeeper was satisfied with having a few boxes of cigars shoved into a case or cupboard indiscriminately, with no more regard to value or quality that "the man in the moon." Cigars were allowed to dry up or spoil without trouble being taken to keep them in salable condition; remnants of one box were thrown into another without regard as to color or quality. All that was necessary was to know the price per thousand, colors and sizes.

To-day the man who would conduct his business after such a fashion might just as well "shut up shop." The successful tobacconist makes a study of everything pertaining to his business, the different kinds and qualities of tobacco—Sumatra, Havana, Virginia, Manilla, Turkish (wrongly called by some Egyptian), and many others. There are many varieties of each of the above, and the up-to-date cigarist must familiarize himself with all of these. A customer is more easily impressed when the man behind the counter shows a thorough knowledge of his business.

Besides cigars, it is necessary to have a thorough knowledge of imported and domestic cigarettes and smoking tobaccos. One retail dealer in Montreal handles 50 different kinds of pipe tobaccos, and even then is occasionally asked for some brand unknown to the trade, the would-be purchaser from the country assuring him that it is really the finest in the world, and that everybody smokes it in his part of the country. Besides the above mentioned goods there is a large line of smokers' sundries, such as brier, meerschaum and amber goods. The up-to-date storekeeper will post himself on the grades, qualities and places of origin of these various lines so as not to be ignorant when questioned about them. So much for the cigarman's stock, to which the limits of this article will only admit of a very brief reference.

The fittings—not the decorations—of an up-to-date cigar store are made for that special business. The cupboards for tobaccos are made as nearly airtight as possible, and the receptacles for cigars are lined with tiles or zinc and fitted with moistening apparatus so that the cigars are always kept in proper condition. In one store which the writer saw in New York recently, the walls and ceiling were lined with tiling, while both heat and moisture were regulated automatically, thus keeping the temperature even all the year round. The fixtures alone of some of the finer cigar stores of to-day will many times exceed in cost both the stock and fixtures of the cigar stores of 25 years ago.

That tact and patience are more necessary in the cigar business than in almost any other line, the following actual incidents will show: First let me say that the term "Reina Victoria" has nothing whatever to do with the quality of a cigar. It simply refers to the size and style of packing, and a "Reina Victoria" can be had for 5, 10 or 15 cents. A smoker who had noticed the above words printed on cigar boxes at the store where he generally bought his cigars, happened to be in a cigar store in a different part of the city one day and asked for a "Reina Victoria." The man behind the counter whose business it was to exchange the weed for coin of the realm, naturally asked what kind he wanted, and the would-be purchaser repeated the words with more emphasis. "Yes, but what kind, what price," asked the dispenser of the weed? The customer, knowing only one kind of "Reina Victoria," and thinking that it was the name of the special brand he smoked, imagined that the salesman wanted to palm off something else on him and started to walk out. The storekeeper, seeing the man's ignorance, took down from the shelf a box with the magic words on it and pretending to have misunderstood him at first said: "Here is what you want, sir." As he made his purchase the buyer remarked: "Why didn't you show them to me at first?" Another instance was where a person went into a cigar store and asked for a "Flor Fina" cigar, and because the storekeeper hesitated a minute before serving him, he started to walk out, saying that he could get "Flor Fina" cigars at lots of other places. By way of explanation it may be said that the words "Flor Fina" are stamped on 90 out of every 100 cigar boxes, and simply mean fine leaves, fine tobacco. Sizing the man up as a 5c smoker, he was handed a box of 5c cigars with the mystic words printed on, and that was sufficient to satisfy him.

Coming into contact with so many people, most of whom have some peculiarity or fad about cigars, the successful cigar merchant must possess considerable savoir faire. To the Englishman must be handed a very dry cigar. It must crackle when he squeezes it. The American, on the contrary, likes a very fresh cigar. Another always wants a spotted cigar. Some like a joke, others are particularly serious. The writer remembers one case where a customer would come in sometimes for weeks without uttering a word—just put his money down, take his cigars and walk out. One Montreal tobacconist is a great believer in novel signs. Here are some copied from his window: "How to be happy, tho' married: Smoke my Famous Specials and be happy ever after." "Don't let cigars get the best of you, but get the best of cigars. They are to be had right here." "'Tis better to smoke in this world than in the next, especially if you smoke my mixture." One thing, however, is sure, while curiosity may bring people into your store for the first time, only quality and proper treatment will make customers of them.

The Tobacco-Growing Industry in Canada.

TOBACCO growing in certain districts of Canada has recently assumed large proportions, although the industry has been carried on in a small way for as many as 25 years. Ontario raised tobacco to the value of $3,500,000 in 1900, while the Quebec crop for the following year was estimated at $7,656,000, and that in British Columbia at $61,830. The leaf grown is known as Canadian burley, and is used mostly in the manufacture of chewing tobacco, and smoking mixtures or combinations, being blended with foreign leaf. Straight Canadian smoking tobaccos are manufactured to some extent as well as Canadian cigars, but these are overshadowed by the foreign brands and mixtures.

The Canadian tobacco growing industry has been most successful along the lake shore of Essex County, in western Ontario, where it extends over a district 35 miles long by ¼ to 2 miles broad, and is to-day one of the principal industries in Essex County. During 1903 about 3,500,000 lbs. of Essex or white burley leaf were grown in this district, 2,000,000 lbs. of which were sent to Quebec for manufacturing purposes, and the remainder used by Ontario tobacco manufactories. It is claimed for Essex tobacco that the rich, brown color of the leaf is excelled by no other burley leaf grown. The leaf grown in Quebec is dark in color, heavy in flavor and not nearly so desirable.

In Essex county the culture of tobacco has, on the whole, paid remarkably well. Conditions of soil and climate are exactly suited to growing the burley leaf, and when the season is late and warm, and there is an abundance of rain, a quality of tobacco leaf can be grown which is unsurpassed. At the present time Essex farmers are getting 11c a pound for leaf, and when it is considered that 1,600 lbs. are often produced on a single acre it will easily be seen that tobacco growing pays. On the above basis a grower will make over $150 per acre on his tobacco crop; the average is considerably under this, being only from $85 to 125 per acre. It must not be forgotten that tobacco is a more or less uncertain crop in view of which manufacturers find it necessary to keep two years supplies ahead. Tobacco culture is also hard on the land, making necessary the use of fertilizers to a greater or less extent. The Essex farmer makes adequate provision, however, in that he moves his tobacco fields from one section of his farm to another as soon as the ground shows signs of playing out. The general impression with regard to the profits to be derived from tobacco growing is that they are as great or greater than those to be derived from any other agricultural pursuit.

The demand for home-grown leaf is steadily increasing. Canadian growers are beginning to exercise more care in getting leaf ready for the market in the way of keeping sand leaves out of the bales, and in assorting, and as a direct result the trade has shown marked improvement.

Canadian grown tobacco cannot compete successfully with foreign leaf in the manufacture of cigars. The straight Canadian leaf has too strong an odor and is nauseating. Even this rule, however, has its exceptions. In the Okanagan Valley, British Columbia, where the soil is irrigated, samples of cigar leaf have been grown which were considered quite as fine as the foreign product.

Satisfactory results have been obtained from mixing Canadian and foreign leaf as in smoking mixtures, and to-day a considerable number of the cigar factories in Canada are known as combination industries.

Canadian leaf is used principally in manufacturing chewing tobaccos and smoking mixtures. Old-time chewers still cling to foreign leaf, although it is generally recognized that a blend of Canadian and foreign leaf is milder and on the whole more agreeable than the straight foreign leaf. Among the increasing foreign population of Canada Canadian leaf and Canadian and foreign combinations are meeting with increased demand. It is estimated that of the total Canadian consumption of chewing tobacco, the proportion of mixed and foreign leaf is much larger than that of Canadian leaf, while more foreign leaf is used than straight Canadian, although the consumption of the latter is increasing.

The Development of Modern Commerce*

By John McEwan.

MODERN commerce may, for the sake of convenience, be dealt with in three great divisions: 1, the commerce of production; 2, the commerce of transportation; 3, the commerce of distribution. Supplementary to all three come those great adjuncts of business—banking and exchange, the postoffice, the telegraph, the cable and the telephone, with those who provide their use. Then at the end, the cormorant class, who hang on to profit by the follies, blunders, quarrels and extremities of the others, who produce nothing, transport nothing and sell nothing—the lawyers, accountants and stockbrokers.

The Commerce of Production.

The age of the individual or isolated worker is almost past. To take one class as representative of others, Silas Marner is no longer to be met walking about with his bundle of flaxen thread, or its completion, a web of linen, and in Thrums the sound of Hendry's loom is heard no more. The handloom weaver who worked alone in his cottage or in an adjacent shed, has given place to the noisy factory, where one girl minds several power looms at once and turns out thrice as much cloth in a given time. Indeed, there are automatic looms (mostly in the United States of America) where one man is said to run at once as many as twelve looms. There are no intervals in the life of the weaver, such as formerly occurred at the finish of each web, or through other incidental causes. Now, it is high pressure from start to finish, the numerous looms driving on constantly, and all needing more or less attention.

It is the same with all the processes relative to the production of yarns and the cloth woven from them. Spinning, warping, weaving, dyeing, finishing; all have passed from the retail to the wholesale methods of production, and in the course of change have forced the population from the country districts to the vast aggregations in smoky, dirty and unwholesome cities. Children, as soon as the law will permit, are sent to work in the great mills and factories—even as half-timers. The small producer has been driven out everywhere by the necessity of lowering the cost of production and taking the fullest possible value out of plant and mechanical power.

It may be fairly assumed that analagous conditions prevail in other classes of production. Even field labor and the operations of husbandry need now to be on a large scale with many machines employed—milling, malting, brewing, are all in fewer hands than formerly. Indeed, if we look at the food on our tables we can realize how far we are from the times of our fathers, when, except for spices and a few foreign luxuries, everything eaten was produced in the immediate neighborhood, or perhaps even within the bounds of a man's own estate.

The homely pig seldom meets his fate in the old solitary fashion. In Chicago he goes to his doom in droves, and one man has as his "daily round, his common task," the execution of some 700. Mechanical processes absorb every fragment of his carcase, including even the bristles and hoofs. Then he comes over here in sections to furnish, frequently, "Irish-cured bacon."

To give us the bread we eat there are now countless machines, beginning with steam ploughs for the soil and going on to mechanical sowing, reaping, binding and threshing. Except in Oriental lands, where time stands still, the "two women grinding at the mill" are now never seen. Huge factories no longer grind, but crush between rollers the wheat into flour, which steam bakeries often turn into bread. Time fails to refer to more of such changes in which retail production has been replaced by wholesale.

Production has, until quite recent years, been but little influenced by the co-operative movement, it being too difficult a probelm adequately to apportion the financial results between the various interests of actual labor and responsible control. Trades unionism has affected it more seriously—probably in no hurtful way—by shortening the actual hours of work and advancing rates of wages, but certainly harmfully by reducing to an equality the rates of pay to be given to good, bad and indifferent workmen, and by the restriction of output in certain businesses to a uniform low quantity.

The Commerce of Transportation.

In early days the trader made his own transport arrangements and carried somehow his own merchandise. In the gradual division of labor there grew up various types of professional carriers, probably beginning with human slaves bearing bundles and leading up to troops of pack mules and camels. Wheeled vehicles for road carriage doubtless followed, but it is difficult to trace at what period they were introduced, and they were only available in countries having good roads. Ships that took cargo or were wholly chartered to merchants, are of great antiquity, having probably been known long prior to the circulation of the widely spread tradition of a general deluge and the saving therefrom of a whole family in a peculiarly constructed but capacious sailing vessel.

But any kind of road transit for heavy goods was cumbrous, slow and most expensive. Hence came the making of canals and the exercise of great ingenuity in carrying those over varying elevations. In this country, throughout Europe, and to some extent in America, those had made rapid progress before railways relegated them to a secondary place. The genius of George Stephenson in making a steam engine capable of traveling along rails dragging a heavy load after it, did more than anything previously introduced to increase land commerce, and now all civilized nations have their railroads, while even in "Darkest Africa" the dream of Cecil Rhodes of a continuous line from Cairo to Capetown seems likely soon to be realized. North America has eight distinct lines crossing it from east to west, and South America one at least. Had the present war not interfered, it was hoped within this year to carry passengers without change of carriage across both Europe and Asia from Ostend to Peking, a distance of over 7,000 miles, in about 17 or 18 days. So rapid and extensive has been the development that from the 38 miles of the Stockton and Darlington line, opened in 1825, the first railway, there are now throughout the world 500,000 miles open, representing a capital value exceeding £7,000,000,000.

But, however much the railroad has done for commerce, the ship has done more, because it can carry larger volumes with less handling and at much lower cost. Great Britain has always been a nation of seagoing and seafaring people, and the history of its shipping is, to the man of commercial instincts, a fascinating one. The 19th century saw a wonderful development in size, build, model and equipment of sailing vessels, but, because of commercial evolution, before 1900 went out, their number on the British register had fallen far below what it was when 1801 came in.

By altered materials and differently modelled lines, the carrying capacity per net register ton was made much greater in the later periods. The wooden ship gave place to the composite built of iron and wood. The latter was followed by one of iron and later of steel. The size and speed of individual ships were increased, as appliances were invented to make handling more easy. The competition to excel in producing a fine ship was keen, and it looked at times as if some of the old romance of the sea were returning. The slow and stately progress of the old East Indiaman grew out of date.

In Scotland and America simultaneously were brains at work to do for the sea what Stephenson was later to do for the land. In 1814 came the first steamship, and while the new idea was slow in being adopted generally, it gradually advanced in its displacement of the older method of ocean locomotion. England again here largely represents the world, because she has till recently sailed and built steamers for all nations. The progress shown in the British net register of mercantile steam tonnage is as follows:

1820	34	steamers	3,018 "
1830	295	"	30,009 "
1840	768	"	87,500 "
1850	1,181	"	167,398 "

or, as gross register—13,263,000 tons.

Throughout all these years constant improvements have been made in details of construction and in altered models and proportions of hull, giving greater safety and more relative capacity. More important, however, have been the developments in the matter of propulsion, passing from paddle wheels to screw propellers and on to turbines, from simple or high-pressure engines to compound, then triple and quadruple expansion, and the reduction in the cost of running by improved methods of steam generation. All such changes have assisted the modern steamer to displace the sailing ship.

The size of vessels has recently had an enormous development. In 1893 there were only two vessels of over 10,000 tons, except the effete hulk of that white elephant the "Great Eastern." To-day there are in existence eighty of that size or over, and several that exceed 20,000. Others of 24,000 and 40,000 are in course of construction, while one Atlantic mail boat has developed no less than 40,000 indicated horse power.

The effect upon commerce of such improvements in transportation facilities by land and sea, has been to reduce materially the cost of moving goods from point to point. Not only are the rates of freight lower, but the times of the journeys are so much shortened that a great economy arises. Most distant points are brought economically near, while the surplus production of continents and countries far apart is rendered readily and cheaply available in those where such products are scarce or dear.

The Commerce of Distribution.

The retail shopkeepers of the types known in the days of our fathers and grandfathers will soon be only a memory. The man who formerly called himself and really was a "merchant"; who served a protracted apprenticeship to learn his business and knew it thoroughly in all its details; who lived in or over his shop or warehouse; who was a member of his trade guild or merchant company; who had as members of his household his own assistants and apprentices, all in strict subjection to his authority and rule by day and night; who instructed them wisely and well in what he knew and set before them constantly an example of commercial honor, integrity and mercantile ability, is a figure of the past. So is the "honest apprentice" in many of the retail trades.

What is arising in place of them? The gigantic department store and the multiple shop business, the former an aggregation of different shops or departments under one roof, the latter a disintegration of one shop under many roofs, in the form of widely scattered branches. The best that can be said for either is that they supply the public in a cheap, quick and convenient way with what is wanted, and that they tend, if well managed, to produce rapidly new capitalists of ever-increasing wealth. Allied to those are the co-operative stores, founded on a principle ideally beautiful but liable to break down under the strain of temptation to those ethically incapable of living up to a high level of mere principle without the control of over-lordship or present proprietorship. In America the department store is an even more strongly marked feature of life in large cities, but the lack of trust there in one's fellow-man has kept down the co-operative movement.

The multiple shop business has of recent years gained ground rapidly, there being many concerns with hundreds of branches. In Great Britain there is one with 530, and in Germany one with nearly as many. Such concerns provide a few of the modern prizes of life, in good positions with high salaries for competent men willing to work hard, but they take away from hundreds the chance of a decent and honorable occupation in which a living or more might be made. They do infinite harm to the community by destroying ambition and lowering hope in the hearts of the rising generation. They give only a few good positions at the central controlling office, and at the branches frequently anyone without training or experience is employed, not to sell with salesmanship, but merely to hand over, under rigorous checks as to honesty, the goods all previously prepared and ready in handy form for the customers' requirements. There are fewer and fewer opportunities for what we have been accustomed to call the self-made man, but these opportunities are magnified in their possibilities if we are to consider the end aimed at to be merely "to buy and to sell and to get gain." The small shopkeeper will have less chance of becoming the great trader. The rising assistant can rarely now succeed to his employer's business when the latter retires. Too much power and capital are needed to work things in the modern style and scale to make a transference easy. The management of a branch in a multiple shop business calls for little skill or technical knowledge, and that of a department in a general store is too limiting, so that in neither case is there much hope of rising to better things. The individual touch between the shopkeeper and his customer is lost—they are generally each personally unknown to the other. The assistant degenerates as a rule into a mere "hand," and that often in a most literal sense. The rapid multiplication of shops has led to an extreme fierceness of competition, retail prices being frequently cut to an unreasonable degree for effect, and dodges of every kind practiced to attract custom from the ignorant or to tempt the cupidity of that large class who are constantly seeking for bargains and trying to pick up goods at what they imagine to be less than their true value. It has also encouraged a large demand for lowness of price, irrespective of quality, and so lowered the standard of good productive work. This is a commercial feature most difficult to combat, a lower level once established being difficult to disturb. As said Napoleon: "One can stop easily when he ascends, but not when he descends."

VISIT FROM A VANCOUVER WHOLESALER.

MR. W. H. MALKIN, of the W. H. Malkin Co., Limited, wholesale grocers, Vancouver, B. C., was in Toronto on Saturday last en route home from a three months' trip to Great Britain. His trip was particularly on pleasure account, and he was accompanied by Mrs. Malkin. The trip has done him a great deal of good and he is returning to business in first-class health. Speaking of business in England, he said that he heard a good many complaints there, "but," added he, "you seldom hear business men in England say that trade is good. Ask a man how business is and he will say, 'Oh, not bad,' even when trade is good."

One thing that impressed Mr. Malkin a great deal when in England was the excellent arrangement of the displays in the retail grocery and provision stores. They are, he considered, very much in advance of the window displays in many of the Canadian stores.

Mr. Malkin is a careful reader of The Canadian Grocer, and from what he saw during his trip abroad he is convinced that it is the best grocery paper in the world. "The trade in Canada," he said, "should be proud of it."

Mr. Malkin left for Vancouver on Saturday last at noon.

This powder has, during the past ten years, been used by the best families of Montreal, and the trade from a small beginning has developed rapidly. The growth is entirely due to its superior and reliable working qualities. Grocers generally, especially those having select family trade, will find this powder a trade builder and holder. The company are open for a few responsible and active agents in the larger centres.

TRAVELLERS' DEPARTMENT

TREATMENT OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS.

THE man who does not treat a traveling salesman who calls upon him with courtesy and respect is a twin brother to the animal which Balaam rode, and is out of place as a buyer, remarks an exchange. He has missed his calling and some manure fork is pining away in lonesomeness without the unfriendly grasp of his withered hand. He is not a good man for the firm; he misrepresents as a buyer or proprietor; he is going through the world missing the honest, friendly grasp of hundreds of manly hands; he is losing the cream of the bargains that many traveling men have up their sleeves for "good people," he is advertised only as a sneak by the men who are unfortunate enough to call on him once; he is shunned by the boys on the road, who are always well posted on who are the decent men in the trade. They all lay for him, and do him if they can. He may think he is sharp, but all the boys think he is an idiotic loon, and they love to give him an unfriendly blast every chance they can get, and many of them will work overtime to say a mean and generally true thing of him. Many of the "very smart" buyers are upstarts who do not represent a dollar they have ever earned; who are excess baggage on the hands of the firms they try to buy for, who would be more in proper place as wrap holders for a second-class race horse, or as chambermaids in a country livery stable, than as buyers for reputable concerns. It is not necessary to buy of every traveler who calls upon you, but if you have got to be the least bit mean to anyone, vent your spite on one of them to whom you have given an order. If you feel called upon to be wamble-cropped and ugly and such a fool that you can't hold it in, and too cowardly to try it on someone your own size, give a traveler a good order, and then he will grin and bear it. Tell him that if the goods don't come exactly as represented and plumb up to the sample, that you'll fire 'em back and kick him out the next time he comes. He will laugh at it and say to the boys, "the old man is a d—d crank, but you can sell him all right," and the other travelers will at least tolerate you. If you can't give a man an order, you can give him a good, pleasant word, and make him feel almost as well as though you had bought a bill from him. There are very few traveling men who are not gentlemen, and the equal in every way of the men they call on. It is their way of getting a living, and it is an honest way. The writer tried it for twenty-five years and knows all about it, and I say it without fear of successful contradiction, that you make the mistake of your life when you do not treat traveling men with courtesy. And then when life's fitful dream is o'er, if you are fortunate enough to appear with us good people on the plains of Paradise, you'll find the traveling man in evdence, and you'll feel glad to meet him, for, if he has been there any length of time, he will know the place, and will willingly show his friends around and introduce them to the best people. Speak gently to the traveling man, "the larger the man the gentler speak," he is liable to be one of the proprietors in your next stopping place, when time shall be no more. Then

"Here's to the health of the traveling man,
That merry, good-hearted fellow;
He is trying to do the best that he can,
And nary a streak of yellow
Can be found in this grand purveyor of mirth,
As he travels the world around;
And he circles the hemisphere with a girth
Of bargains and advice so sound.
May his time on earth be long and glad,
May he lay up wealth and never be sad;
May he sell lots of goods by car-load and case,
And then buy the firm out and run the old place
Then we'll drink to his health at the hour of eleven,
May his family keep well, and his home be in heaven,
Aye, here's to the brightest of heaven's great plan—
The red-hot, still heating, traveling man."

TRAVELERS AT CRICKET.

THE travelers down in Nova Scotia are going to squeeze in a little fun this Summer. About fifteen of them are managing their routes in such a way as to be on the north shore of Nova Scotia at about the same time. They have formed a sort of association and are going to show a few fortunate towns how knights of the grip play cricket. Of course business is not going to suffer, but it is not going to be allowed to take any of their heart out of the game. Annapolis, Digby and Weymouth are the towns to be favored in the present plans, but many others hope to have a game and are making negotiations. Several first-class cricketers are included among the traveling men, and they can be depended upon to uphold their end. Mr. Frank Fairweather is secretary.

Notes.

The transportation companies in Toronto have decided not to enforce storage baggage charges for a reasonable time on travelers representing firms that have been burnt out.

Commercial travelers will be glad to learn that the Baggage Transfer Company, Montreal, have agreed with the association to transfer trunks between depots for twenty-five cents a trunk.

The Ontario Provincial Secretary has received from the Secretary of State an Imperial paper giving full details of the regulations governing commercial travelers in foreign countries. It is open to inspection by business men.

The Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association has presented ex-President Wm. Turnbull with a case of one hundred pieces of solid silver cutlery. President W. R. Grant made the presentation. The address was enclosed in a leather cover, bearing the association monogram in silver.

ODORS IN A GROCERY STORE.

STOCKED as it is with goods of a more or less perishable nature, the grocery store is apt to present to sensitive customers odors that are very disagreeable. The grocer may not notice it as he is breathing it in all day long, and so accustomed has be become to such surroundings that even where he can detect it, the effect is not repulsive. To a customer, however, entering from the fresh air and unaccustomed to the smell of groceries any special prominence to one odor, whether of tainted goods or not, gives the impression of a carelessly kept store.

The utmost importance must be attached, in a business dealing in edibles and table delicacies, to a reputation for cleanliness and care in the handling, buying and selling of stock, and the first sign of offensive odors must be promptly dealt with. But not only offensive, but strong odors of any kind must be avoided as even the consciousness through the sense of smell of the presence of perfectly fresh goods is sometimes disagreeable.

The most offensive, and the most injurious to the reputation of the store are those given off by decayed vegetables or tainted meats. Many a grocery store that maintains a most satisfactory interior pays little attention to the storehouse at the back, or the cellar. Bad potatoes or fruit lying carelessly around are easily detected by the sensitive. A back yard that is not kept clean will waft malodorous breezes into the store, and will assist in tainting meats and other perishable goods in the interior. It is not sufficient to protect the store itself, but the entire premises must be sweet and clean.

Summer time is, of course, the season most prolific of foul odors in such goods. Meats lying on the counters will soon give off a disagreeable odor even before the stock itself is unfit for use. Cheese acts in the same way, the outside becoming greasy or mouldy. Sugar barrels must be carefully attended to in all weathers, but especially in hot. More often than the grocer suspects is this line accountable for what is blamed on less innocent looking goods. In hot weather the sugar melts and sours around the wood. The best way is to place the barrel in a cool place, and keep only a drawer full in the store, carefully washing and cleaning it each time it is emptied, or every couple of days.

Prunes, dried fruits, currants, raisins and such stock should be kept well covered and as small quantities in the store as possible. Confectionery is best in glass jars and brought from the storeroom only in sufficient amount to supply immediate trade.

Such innocent looking things as tea, packages of cod fish, coffee, pickles, etc., are often responsible to a great extent. Many of these are of themselves as innocent as they look, but when the odor of them is combined with a few others, the aggregate may be very disagreeable. It is often this mixture alone that is noticed, and against a great part of it a grocer cannot fight. It is safe to move all the stronger smelling goods to the back of the store, whether they are of themselves unpleasant or not.

But all this care in the prevention of odors must be coupled with an attention to the arrangement of the goods that will give the impression of an earnest endeavor to have things neat and sweet. The best kept grocery store cannot avoid the scents that attach themselves to the goods, but he can, by presenting a neat interior, so please the eye as to lessen the offence to the nose. The most perfect atmosphere possible, when surrounding a slovenly arranged stock, will be full of imaginary odors to the customer who appreciates neatness.

THE CANADIAN WINE INDUSTRY.

THE manufacture of wine in Canada has assumed large proportions, and has replaced to a great extent the medium and cheaper wines formerly imported into the Dominion. This has not only benefited the wine industry of Canada, but at the same time it has crowded out the cheap, spurious foreign so-called wines, and benefited the health of the Canadian people.

Grape growing has been tried in Canada for many years, but it was not until 1865, at the close of the American War, when a company of Southerners from Kentucky, of whom the late Thaddeus Smith was the chief, came to Pelee Island, in Lake Erie, and went extensively into grape growing and wine manufacturing, that it may be said to have successfully started.

The location of Pelee Island, the most southern point of Canada, in the middle of Lake Erie, owing to its great climatic advantages, made possible the thorough ripening of the Catawba, Virginia Seedling and Isabella grapes, an impossibility in any other part of Canada.

In the long mild climate of Pelee Island these grapes reach their greatest perfection. In 1873 the vineyards established in 1865 made arrangements with J. S. Hamilton & Co., of Brantford, Ont., to take the sole agency for the sale of their wines, and this was continued up to 1884, when the Pelee Island Wine and Vineyards Co. was formed. J. S. Hamilton was elected president, and steps were taken to increase the extent of the vineyards of Pelee Island. In 1891 the company erected a fine three-storey stone wine house with extensive cellars. This wine house is one of the best equipped establishments of the kind in the world, and the greatest care and cleanliness is observed in the pressing and various processes the wine has to undergo before it is thoroughly mature and ready for the market.

Special care is given to the production of their celebrated communion wine, "St. Augustine." Only the most select and choicest grapes are used for this purpose, and the high reputation of "St. Augustine" is undoubtedly due to the fine quality of grapes used and the great care exercised in pressing, racking and maturing. The fact that "St. Augustine" is used in thousands of churches in Canada, Great Britain and Ireland, the West Indies and the United States, is good evidence that the company have succeeded in producing a perfect communion wine. In 1892 the company started a brandy distillery on Pelee Island, and the high quality of the product has made the name of J. S. Hamilton & Co.'s brandy famous throughout Canada.

Wine House, Cognac, Pelee Island.

The Pelee Island Wine Co.'s unfermented grape juice is considered much superior to other brands on the market and enjoys a large sale amongst religious bodies, who contend that only unfermented wine should be used for communion purposes.

During the vintage of 1894 they prepared a quantity of wine for champagne, and had the manufacture carried on under a natural fermentation process, under the supervision of an expert from Rheims. It has developed into a champagne of high character, and has been placed on the market under the registered brand "L'Empereur." They put up two qualities of dryness, "Sec" and "Extra Dry;" the latter is one of the dryest wines used in this part of the world. Notwithstanding the great cost in producing the genuine natural champagne, they have arranged to fix the price at about half that of imported wines of equal quality.

The firm of J. S. Hamilton & Co. have not only pushed their wines to the front but have also exhibited at many of the leading world's exhibitions and obtained many medals and diplomas. At the great Paris Exhibition of 1878 Dr. S. P. May, Canadian Commissioner, wrote: "Your wines were tasted by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, who expressed himself much pleased with their quality and flavor." While Messrs. J. S. Hamilton & Co. have their wine houses at Brantford and Pelee Island, their principal shipments are made from Brantford, and they have appointed agents in leading centres in Great Britain, the West Indies, and Canada. Their list of agents is as follows: Great Britain and Ireland, Stephenson, Routley & Co., Manchester, England; West Indies, W. S. Johnson & Co., Bridgetown, Barbadoes; Ottway Bros., St. George, Grenada; C. C. Cody, Kingston, Jamaica; W. H. Fleming, Frederickstadt, St. Croix; John H. Hazell, Sons & Co., Kingstown, St. Vincent; MacKenzie & Kirton, Port of Spain, Trinidad; Sandbach, Parker & Co., Georgetown, Demerara; H. H. Hutchins, Turk's Island; agents in United States: The Engels Krudwig Wine Co.; Canadian agents: Nova Scotia, T. F. Courtney & Co., Halifax; New Brunswick, Foster & Co., St. John; British Columbia, the F. E. Hose Co., Vancouver; Turner, Beeton & Co., and D. H. Ross & Co., Victoria; Thomas & Co., Rossland; agents in Manitoba: W. Ferguson, Brandon; J. O'Reily, Portage la Prairie; G. A. Leach, Dauphin.

Major J. S. Hamilton, president of the Pelee Island Wine and Vineyards Co., and head of the firm of J. S. Hamilton & Co., has shown great enterprise in connection with the Canadian wine trade, and to his efforts is largely due the fact that Canadian wines of a high grade have been produced which compare favorably with the wines of the best vineyards of Europe.

SAMPLE TESTIMONIALS:

WILLIAM COX, ESQ., HAMILTON, ONT.:

DEAR SIR, In reply to your enquiries as to the working of the new mill which you recently installed in our factory, we were desirous before replying to same to have the fullest opportunity of testing the machine. We may now say, however, that we have much pleasure indeed in stating that we find it exceedingly satisfactory on every point which goes to the make-up of a complete mill for grinding spices.

The excellency of the product, ease of manipulation, saving in loss of grinding are more particularly features which commend this mill to our appreciation.

In our many years of experience in the spice business we are free to say that this is the best mill we have ever seen, and we will now seek to displace all other systems of grinding with this machine.

Wishing you abundant success with the new mill, we remain,

Yours truly,

WM. COX, ESQ., HAMILTON, ONT.:

DEAR SIR, -After having used one of your Disintegrators and Sifter Combinations for some months, we are glad to say that it has fully come up to your claims in regard to it, and we are perfectly satisfied in every way with the machine.

Yours very truly, MAYELL & CO.

Among our latest customers are The Canada Grocers, Limited, who are equipping a spice plant that will be as up-to-date as money and brains can put together, and who have ordered Five of our New Process Mills for grinding spices, the several grades of sugar, cream tartar, etc.

A FEW OF ITS HIGH QUALITIES

It is the only Disintegrator that can be adjusted for fine or coarse grinding while in motion.

Each bar has two cutting edges to one in any other Disintegrator and in conjunction with the shape and position to the beators, insures freeness in the milling, a cooler and more uniform product, than has been heretofore attained.

Having another improvement in a hinged door with inner corrugations, the interior may be opened up to full view for cleaning purposes in a moment.

Because of its free, cool milling qualities it has more capacity with a given amount of power, and grinds with less waste than any other mill.

SPICES, DRUGS, ETC. Grinds oily goods that other mills will not touch and does not loosen the oil, and puts a finish on dry or oily stock that is not approached by any other process.

The goods are not spoiled by heating as with other mills.

The elevated sifter is the best device ever invented. By adjusting one of the eccentric blocks a smooth or jarring action is produced, the latter giving large sifting capacity. The mill with elevated sifter makes the best possible combination for spices, drugs, etc., and takes up very little space.

SUGAR.- All grades turned out by Cox's New Process remain free indefinitely, and in connection with reel makes the best possible combination for grinding sugar. It grinds the whole into a soft, cool icing, positively free from grit and specks, or will make the whole into a mould sugar, and when desired will make a large percentage of Fruit or Bar Sugars free from icing, uniform and fine as wanted, without loss, and in a dustless and automatic manner.

A LITTLE NONSENSE

Ignorant of Its Use.

OLD Doctor Miskelli, of the Red Bank neighborhood, was very fond of chewing tobacco, and he was, moreover, a bit careless as to where he expectorated.

On one occasion he had called at the home of Mrs. Simmons, an old lady who believed that cleanliness comes next to godliness. This lady, knowing the spitting proclivities of the doctor, had provided for his use a fancy china cuspidor. The doctor, however, ignored its presence and continued spitting upon the floor of the veranda where they were seated. At the same time Mrs. Simmons kept moving the cuspidor gently into a more and more favorable position for the old gentleman's use.

Finally, becoming exasperated at the queer doings of his hostess, the doctor with some warmth exclaimed :

"Mrs. Simmons, if you don't move that thing I'm going to spit in it !" — Hugh A. C. Walker, in May Lippincott's.

Utterly Impossible.

Uncle Daniel Harmon's pastor was a vigorous temperance advocate. For years and years he had preached to the old man about the virtues of total abstinence, but had never succeeded in convincing his parishioner that it was wisest and best for him to part company with the "cussid stuff." At last one day, after long persuasion, the minister managed to extract from the old man a promise that he would not drink another drop. The Saturday night following the day on which this promise was obtained the parson met Uncle Dan on the street with a basket of groceries in one hand and a tell-tale "little brown jug" in the other."

"What you got in dat jug, Uncle Dan ?" asked the parson.

"It's liquor!" exclaimed the old man; "it's liquor. It sho' is liquor, an' I ain't gwinetah lie 'bout it."

"Whose liquor is it?" inquired the minister.

"It b'longs to me an' Deacon Walkah —me an' Deacon Walkah, sah," said Uncle Dan, looking the questioner straight in the eye.

"Bruddah Harmon, you ain't forgot yo' promus so soon, is you?" asked Rev. Mickins. Uncle Dan made no reply.

"Set dat jug down—set it right down," commanded the parson, "an' po' dat whisky right out on de groun'!"

The old man put the basket and the jug down. Then, straightening up, he said :

"Bruddah Pastah, you knows I tries to 'bey you in ev'yt'ing—I sho' do; but I don't think you'd want me to follah yo' ordahs in dis mattah ef I tol' you it would cause me to treat Deacon Walkah wrong."

"I don't see," protested the preacher, "how you'd be treatin' Deacon Walkah wrong by po'in out dat liquor."

"Ain't I done tol' you," explained Uncle Dan, "dat me an' Deacon Walkah went 'in cahoots' in buyin' dis liquor—dat ha'f uv it b'longs to him an' de uddah ha'f b'longs to me ?"

"Dat's so," said Rev. Mickins, "dat's so, Uncle Dan; well, den, you po' out yo' ha'f—I reckin you kin do dat !"

"Dat's onpossible," said Uncle Dan, "dat's onpossible; I can't po' out my ha'f 'dout po'in' out Deacon Walkah's ha'f."

"How's dat ?" asked the preacher. "How's dat ?"

"Cause," said the old man, "Deacon Walkah's ha'f's on top, an' mine at de bottom!"—Silas Xavier Floyd, in May Lippincott's.

The Scruples of M.P.'s.

The House of Commons is a terrible place for unexpected shocks (says S. L. H. in the current Bystander). Of all men there, the last I should have suspected of being a revolutionary is Mr. Bousfield. He is a Conservative, a King's Counsel, an Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, and the vice-president of a gold club. Moreover, he looks respectable enough for all this and much more. And yet Mr. Bousfield the other day stood up in his place and proposed that troy weight and apothecaries weight should be abolished ! I am glad to be able to add, for the sake of the reputation of Parliament, that the insidious proposal was resisted, for Sir George Christopher Trout Bartley instantly detected the thin end of the wedge, and he sounded an alarm. He did well—for what is the first thing one learns in the table of Apothecaries Weight? It is this valuable and helpful truth : "Twenty grains make one scruple." Are we to abandon our scruples? I. for one, say "No," not even though twenty general elections were at hand. There are men on both sides of the house who would die in the last ditch rather than embark upon a policy so unscrupulous.

TRADE WITH TRINIDAD.

TRADE with the British West Indies seems to be occupying the attention of Canadians at present. The Montreal branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at its last regular meeting, gave a good deal of attention to the promotion of trade between Canada and Trinidad. Following up an old resolution which had been passed by the Chamber of Commerce at Port of Spain, Trinidad, in 1900, with a view to the negotiation for a reciprocal tariff arrangement with Canada, which fell through, the committee made a new move. They decided to recommend to the executive council that this action of the Port of Spain Chamber of Commerce be endorsed, and that the Canadian Government be asked to sympathize with and support the movement; further, that the Hon. R. H. McCarthy, collector of customs at Part of Spain, who is a warm and capable advocate of trade relations between Canada and the Indies, should be invited to attend the next annual convention of the association, which will be held in Montreal in September next.

The opinion of the manufacturers seems to be that it was important to secure tariff preference in the West Indies and British Guiana, where there were such large consumers of food products and manufactured goods, such as Canada produced. The matter was referred to the Parliamentary Committee of the Executive Council, with the request that it be taken up with the Dominion Government.

The delegation sent to Quebec to oppose certain clauses in the city bill, reported that the clauses to license the stores and cellars of varnish dealers and to tax manufacturers of varnish and three-horse vehicles, had been struck out. The following resolution was communicated to the Government: "At the special meeting of the Montreal branch of the executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, held in Montreal in May, it was unanimously decided to request your honorable Government in the interests of commercialism in the Province of Quebec, and Canada as a whole, to reconsider your decision to license extra provincial commercial corporations and joint stock companies."

Fresh and Cured Fish

The Fisheries of Canada.

THE fisheries of Canada are the most extensive in the world, extending practically all over the immense line of sea-coast, besides innumerable lakes and rivers. The eastern sea-coast of the Maritime Provinces, from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle, covers a distance of 5,600 miles, while the western sea-coast of British Columbia is reckoned at 7,180 miles; the fresh water area of that part of the Great Lakes belonging to Canada is computed at 72,700 square miles, not including the numerous lakes of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, all of which are stocked with excellent species of fish.

To better demonstrate the importance of the fisheries of Canada it is only necessary to give the enormous aggregate value of the five principal commercial fish caught in Canadian waters since 1869, namely, cod, salmon, lobsters, herrings and mackerel, which reaches the stupendous figure of $377,949,339. Of this amount, one-third is represented by cod, which to the value of $125,200,083 have been extracted from Canadian waters; salmon come second, with a little over $74,000,000 worth.

While the value of the annual catches fluctuates a good deal, the Canadian fisheries' industry has shown a continual steady growth. The hauls of 1903 aggregated $21,959,433, despite a falling off of almost three million dollars in the British Columbia salmon trade, and a general decrease in every province as compared with the previous year, when the catch reached a total of nearly $26,000,000.

Every province in Canada is interested in the fish industry, owing to the number of great lakes, but, of course, the trade is comparatively small in the fresh water fisheries. Yet, Prince Edward Island is the only province whose annual catch does not exceed a million dollars. The extreme eastern province, Nova Scotia, leads, with $7,351,753, while the farthest west province, British Columbia, follows with $5,284,824; then comes New Brunswick with $3,912,514, and Quebec with $2,059,175. Ontario's catch only amounts to $1,265,706—all fresh water fish.

In 1903, despite the poor season, salmon headed the list in value, with $4,335,039, cod being a close second, with $4,028,788, and lobsters $3,133,737. The value of the Caandian oyster crop was only $155,168—a decrease of nearly $25,000 from the previous year. Another very important fishery, the herring industry, showed a decrease of $142,296, yet its value was $1,723,098.

The deep shore and inland fisheries on the Atlantic extend from the Bay of Fundy to Labrador. The chief catch is of cod, mackerel, haddock, halibut, herring, lobster, oyster, seal, and white whale. The principal fisheries on the Pacific coast are the salmon fisheries of British Columbia. Besides salmon, however, there is a great variety of other good fishes, such as halibut, anchovy, herring and smelt. The caviare industry has been developed recently, and whale, shark and oyster fisheries also exist. In addition to this nearly $500,000 worth of sealskins are taken in the open season. In the great lakes and their tributaries whitefish, trout, herring, sturgeon, pickerel, pike, bass and maskinonge are found. In the lakes of Manitoba and the Great Northwest most of the fish just named are found. The caviare industry also is growing. The fish production of these regions in 1902 was $1,000,000 worth. Hudson Bay and the coast waters from Ungava to Mackenzie River are the richest whaling grounds of the world. Walrus and many valuable fish, such as sea trout, salmon and cod are found in these waters, while the extreme northern rivers and lakes teem with inconnu, pike and sturgeon.

It goes almost without saying that the Canadian export trade in fish is a very large and an increasingly important item. In 1903 Canada exported $11,800,184 worth of codfish, herring, lobsters, mackerel, salmon and other fishery products, as against $8,743,050 ten years ago. Of the total exportations Great Britain got $3,904,793 worth in 1903; the United States came next with $3,760,266 worth, while other countries got $4,135,125 worth.

Cheap Fish From Gaspe.

SOME very interesting information has come to hand concerning the Canadian fresh fish trade and the possibility of supplying Montreal and Toronto with cheaper and better fish from the Gaspe coast than is now procured from Portland and other American points. At present Gaspe fishermen receive only $1.80 or $1.90 per draft of 230 pounds of green or fresh codfish, split, cleaned and minus the heads, which requires about 300 lbs. of freshly caught fish. Now, at the usual prices paid in Montreal for Portland fish, the amount realized for the quantity now selling at $1.80 to $1.90 would be $20. Lobsters, which sell on the Gaspe coast for $1.70 to $2 per 100 lbs., sell in Montreal and Toronto for from $8 to $10.

It is also pointed out that the Gaspe fishermen would be only too glad to obtain half the price of seven to eight cents per pound paid in Quebec and Montreal for haddock. It is hoped that all this will be changed when the short line of railway is built through the interior of the Gaspe peninsula. In the meantime it is suggested that Quebec, Montreal and Toronto could even now obtain large quantities of cheaper, better and fresher fish from the Baie des Chaleurs and the Gaspe coast if the subsidized steamer on the Baie des Chaleurs route should run only between Gaspe and the present terminus of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway at New Carlisle, instead of to Dalhousie. This would enable it to make three trips to Gaspe a week instead of two, and to place fresh fish from Gaspe almost as quickly, and much more cheaply, in Quebec and Montreal than the fish now brought from Portland, while a great boon would also be conferred upon the fishermen of the Gaspe coast.

Waste of Fish.

It is reported that there has been a great waste of fish in Lake Scugog, Ont., during the past Winter, owing largely, it is thought, to the severity of he weather. Early in the season the water became very low, and when the cold weather came the lake froze to the bottom, naturally killing the fish.

Gossip About Ourselves

MISS E. CORA HIND, who has for some years been our Winnipeg correspondent, has been compelled through pressure of other duties to resign her position. We regret this exceedingly, as Miss Hind was a clever correspondent and gave general satisfaction. Miss Hind is one of the best known newspaper women in the west, and we hope that even greater success is assured for her in the future than has been her lot in the past.

Whenever you are in any of the cities where our offices are situated, come in and see us. We are always at home to our readers. If we can be of any service to you in any way while you are in our city, we would be only too happy to avail ourselves of the opportunity. Don't forget, our staff is at your disposal and the "Welcome" sign is always over the door.

We are pleased to note the growing interest taken in The Grocer by our good friends the commercial travelers. These shrewd men of business are not slow to recognize the fact that the merchants who are readers of an up-to-date trade paper are the biggest buyers of goods. We teach the merchants how to sell more goods, and if they sell more, it stands to reason they will buy more. Many travelers, with the endorsation of the houses they represent, not only put in a good word for The Grocer, but often send us in the names of new subscribers. One such friend, in writing in to us, says: "I do what I can towards getting subscriptions for you, though as far as I can see your paper is to be found in most stores of any consequence."

One of the evidences of the growth of The Grocer is to be seen in the fact that in our bindery department we have been compelled to put in a stitching machine with a capacity one-third greater than that of any machines which we previously had in our office. This is an evidence of the growing time which The Grocer is experiencing. We have also been compelled to increase our editorial and advertising staffs as well, so that in both men and machines the rapid growth of The Grocer is illustrated. The Grocer is bigger and better to-day than it ever was and at no time in the history of the paper were so many encomiums received from our subscribers and advertisers as at present.

The progressiveness of the French Canadian merchant is becoming daily more and more evident. Not only do the majority of them speak and read English as well as the merchants of Ontario or any other province, but they like to do so. They feel a natural pride in being familiar with the English tongue, just as anyone does who is able to speak or read a foreign language, and especially so as it is of great advantage in their business.

Our canvassers in Quebec not only meet with a cordial reception but they find the merchants there gladly become subscribers to papers which they find helpful in up-to-date business methods. It is not surprising therefore that The Grocer is now read extensively by enterprising French Canadian merchants.

Nor is Lower Canada the only place where The Grocer is read eagerly every week. Our circulation in the great Northwest is limited only by the growth of the development of the country. Our subscription canvassers are keeping close tab on every new place of business opened up and rarely fail to obtain a new subscriber.

A careful comparison with late issues of the mercantile reports shows several more names on our lists than the agencies give as being in business.

To merchants in this scattered country where commercial travelers are not so numerous, a good trade paper is looked upon as a necessity to their business and they subscribe accordingly.

One of our subscription men, Mr. Alex. Wales, is now on his regular trip covering Ontario. He has been authorized not to refuse any money, so you will feel quite safe in paying your subscription to him. He will also be glad of any new names you can tell him of.

The offices of The Grocer in Montreal have been greatly enlarged and improved lately to make room for additions to the staff. The floor space has been more than doubled, neat partitions dividing the various departments, while a cosy reception room is being fitted up for the use of our friends. Tables and writing materials, and access to latest trade publications of all sorts are here placed at the disposal of any of our visitors in the trade, who will be made heartily welcome. Information is also cheerfully furnished on any trade subject. Come and see us any time you are in Montreal.

EXTENDING BUSINESS.

D. RATTRAY & SONS, commission merchants, of Quebec, have opened an office at 110 Coristine Building, Montreal, from where they will direct their import and export business. The Montreal office will be managed by Mr. D. J. Rattray, who has just returned from an extended European trip, during which he visited the principal cities in England, Scotland, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Greece, Sicily, Italy, France and Spain, meeting their connections already established and making new ones. In establishing new connections Mr. Rattray took particular care to assure himself of the responsibility of the different firms, and although some of the shippers may be unknown to the trade, there is no doubt that any orders confided to them will be filled with care as to quality and every other particular.

Amongst the firms represented by D. Rattray & Sons might be mentioned the Salt Union Ltd., of England; Armour & Co., Chicago; John Walker & Co., sugar refiners, Scotland; A. T. Zini, Patras, Greece; Jose Reira, Denia, Spain; Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago; Australian Meat Co., England and Australia; Juan Llopis, Reus, Spain; A. Russo & Co., Sicily, filberts; DaCosta & Co., Barbadoes, molasses and sugars; Machonochie Bros., Ltd., London, Eng., etc., etc. For most of these firms they are sole Canadian agents, while others are represented for specified districts. They confine their business to the wholesale grocery, provision and drug trades exclusively, and we have no doubt it would be in buyers' interests to communicate with D. Rattray & Sons for quotations on imported sugars, rices, dried fruits, etc, before ordering elsewhere.

In addition to lines mentioned above they are large exporters from Quebec of local products, such as maple sugar, balsam, seal, whale and cod oils, pickled fish, etc., etc.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, May 19, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery trade during the week under review cannot be said to have been more than fair. Navigation has opened and shipments billed for upper lake ports will be completed this week. One reason assigned for the general slackness in trade is that farmers are too busily engaged in their Spring operations to do trading to any extent. The situation, however, is not abnormal, trade being usually quiet at this time of the year. Collections are only fair. Sugar is firm and has advanced 5c all round since last quotations. Canned goods are firm and in brisk demand, particularly canned fruits and preserves, while beans are scarce. The molasses and syrup markets are strong, with supplies comparatively scarce, and New Orleans tending to show an advance. The tea market is quiet, with low grade Indians and Ceylons dearer as a result of the increased tea duty and not available locally at the present time. Coffee continues steady with the exception of Rios, which are still exceptionally high, with very little trade doing. The spice market is quiet, with a slight advance reported in cloves and another expected in ginger. The only feature in foreign dried fruits is the unfavorable report that has come to hand concerning the coming crop of Oregon prunes.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade in canned goods continues steady, with firm prices ruling, the tendency being, if anything, toward a quieter market. Corn and peas are particularly firm and in brisk demand. There is also a big demand for canned fruits and preserves. Stocks of canned lobsters are almost exhausted, and the new supply will not arrive until next month. Beans in 2-lb. sizes are practically exhausted. A new variety of waxed beans, put up in 1 1-2-lb. tins, has appeared on the market. These goods come in cases of 100 tins, and are put up like French goods. A novelty in the canned goods market is California ripe olives, which are seen this week for the first time. The flavor of the ripe olive is somewhat similar to that of the green article, only it has an additional rich nutty flavor and the fruit is full of olive oil. We quote the following prices:

SUGAR.

The sugar market has put on further strength during the past week, and there have been considerable sales of raw sugars at prices recording an advance of fully 3-32. At the close of the week the Arbuckle refinery purchased from 125,000 to 140,000 bags of Cubans on a basis of 2 1-2c for 95 test, which is equivalent to a duty-paid price of $3.87 for 96 test. Following this large business, the market has assumed a quieter phase, although the firmness is fully maintained. Refiners are naturally indifferent buyers, especially of near-by sugars, but sellers are not pressing sugar for sales, and are holding for a further 1-16c advance. Business would be possible at 2 1-2c, c and f, for basis 95, but at this there are no sellers. We hear of sales in Cuba to dealers there at prices equal to 2 5-8c, c. and f., New York, for basis 96, and it seems as if these prices would be realized in the near future.

Europe has made further advances, and 88 per cent. beet is now quoted at 9s 3 3-4d for both May-June shipment. It is believed that U. S. refiners will soon have to enter European markets in proportion as available supplies of Cubans become more restricted, in which event the market will move to a still higher level. Refiners' requirements for meltings until October 1 are estimated at 840,000 tons, and of this probably 365,000 tons will be from Cuba, 335,000 tons from the Sandwich Islands, Porto Rico, the Philippines, the West Indies and jobbers. To these estimated receipts of 700,000 tons add total stock in U. S. four ports, May 12, of 201,988 tons, thus giving an estimated supply of 901,988 tons. Refiners' working stock on October 1 should be at least 150,000 tons, which would leave a balance available of 751,988 tons; this deducted from estimated requirements would leave a deficiency of 88,012 tons to be obtained principally from Java and Europe. These figures are culled from Willett's & Gray's weekly circular of May 12, and those of Cuban estimates are based on total production of 1,130,000 tons. Should the crop turn out short of this, the above deficiency will have to be correspondingly increased. By some it is believed that this year's Cuban crop will barely exceed that of last year, which was 998,878 tons.

There is a very strong undertone to the market, and indications are favorable to sellers. Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for the week ending May 12 were 52,669 tons, with meltings 39,000 tons, leaving a total stock in all hands of 201,998 tons. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba for the same week show a decrease, as compared with the corresponding week last year, of 203,573 tons, and there are further indications that the Cuban campaign is being rapidly brought to a close, fifteen central factories having closed down during the week under review, making a total of forty-two centrals which have ceased operations for the season.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,245,988 tons, a decrease of 192,280 tons, as compared with the same time last year.

The refined market has responded to the strength of raws and on Monday, May 15, all American refiners advanced prices 5c per hundred pounds; this was anticipated by Canadian refiners, who advanced the list on the previous Saturday afternoon, and we revise quotations acordingly. There is a general desire for anticipated requirements, and in view of the outlook, this would seem to be only wise.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup and molasses market is in a peculiar position this week. There is very little New Orleans molasses on the market, and the usual West Indian stocks have not arrived, leaving supplies of West Indian which might serve as a substitute for the time being very scarce. Prices quoted on New Orleans are firm, and another advance is predicted in the early future. One or two sales of New Orleans are reported on the street for the week under review, the test, however, barring their importation on a big scale. With New Orleans molasses in such small compass in the local markets for any considerable time the price of cheaper biscuit products is certain to become enhanced. We quote the following prices:

TEAS.

The tea market continues steady and quiet at firm prices, low grade teas being particularly firm. All teas are in fair demand and fairly good volume. No low priced Indians or Ceylons are to be bought at the present time, the lowest price being 16c.

Latest London reports say that sales for Indians have passed with fair demand and little change to note. Up to 7d the recent advance was well maintained, but above this price there was some irregularity and an easier market. Pekoes from 7d to 7 1-2d were in comparatively large supply and mostly tended in buyers' favor, as did broken Pekoes from 8 to 9d. Fine tippy lines of this grade, however, kept firm. The position continues to gain in strength, stocks of all black tea now standing at 78,000,000 lbs., no less than 9,000,000 lbs. below what it was a year ago.

Telegrams from Calcutta say entries for export to the United Kingdom for April were 111,000 lbs., whereas during the same month in 1903 they were 243,000 lbs. Immediate crop prospects on the whole are reported fair, but April has mostly cleared with poor outturn.

In Ceylon, bidding has been strong, with prices generally showing a hardening tendency for common to fair kinds, while for standard and finest, rather dearer rates were paid. Medium Pekoes sold especially well, but broken Pekoes ruled rather irregularly. The average price was 8d per lb., as against 7 3-4d in 1903.

Colombo telegrams give shipments to Great Britain during April at 9,500,000 lbs. and estimates for the current month at 10,000,000 to 10,500,000 lbs. In May last the exports amounted to 10,250,000 lbs.

Clearances of all teas from London warehouses on which duty had been paid were: April 1—30, 1904, 19,970,746 lbs., as against 18,580,197 lbs. a year ago.

Regarding the possible effect of the increased duty on tea, according to London reports, there can be little doubt that the necessary higher retail costs will act as a check on, or even cause a reduction in, the rate of increase of consumption shown in recent years, because this will be the first observed advance in retail prices during modern times. However, if producers show moderation in plucking and the outlets other than the United Kingdom continue to expand as of late, there should be little fear of any fall in the average public sale value of tea in London markets.

An uncertain element in the position is the tendency recently shown to revert to the use of China tea. The general consuming public have ceased to care for China tea, which cannot under ordinary circumstances now form a large percentage of blends. Its presence, however, in the country in any serious volume could not fail to have a lowering effect upon prices of Indian and Ceylon teas. Our quotations are as follows:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues steady at firm prices, with the exception of Rios. Prices quoted in primary markets are higher than New York quotations and as a result trade is very slow. The world's visible supply of coffee has increased materially within the past few weeks, there being now sufficient Rio, Maracaibo and Santos in sight to last twelve months, which would seem to indicate that the price of Rios must become easier. Speculators are largely responsible for the present situation of Rios, but the opinion is expressed that much further bulling the market will be at their risk. We quote the following prices:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The foreign dried fruit market is quiet and last week's prices continue unchanged. Advices from Oregon State say that the crops of Italian prunes have been almost entirely destroyed, with the exception of those grown in upland orchards. The yield is likely to be reduced to a very small minimum. Most of the growers place the estimate at one-quarter the regular crop. Our quotations are as follows:

cient to effect prices for the moment. The level is, however, less firm, and another week will doubtless see a falling off. Pickling is being carried on to a small extent in outlying districts, but local dealers will not risk it. The demand is brisk, but at last the supply appears to be outstripping it. Lower prices and pickling cannot be long delayed now. There is still little prospect of short stocks of pickled goods for the cold season. In New York, Chicago and a few other larger cities in the United States, eggs are much more plentiful than they were last year. April was reported very short, but the extra receipts of May have more than made up for it. The prices this week are 14 to 15c, with the former price more frequent than the latter.

APPLES.

A quiet market in evaporated apples is reported, with last week's prices unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

Evaporated apples, per lb	0 06½

MAPLE SUGAR AND SYRUP.

Trade in maple sugar and syrup continues quiet and steady. Last week's prices remain unchanged. We quote the following prices:

BEANS.

The bean market is beginning to show some signs of life. As predicted in last week's report, beans have already become firmer, although the change is not sufficient as yet to alter quotations. We quote the following prices:

Beans, mixed, per bush		1 40
" prime, "		1 50
" handpicked, per bush	1 65	1 75
" water-stained "		1 00

HONEY

The honey market contains no new features for the week. Prices are unchanged and trade is quiet. Current reports regarding the shortage of the coming honey crop owing to the late Winter having killed off a large percentage of the bees, seem to have been well founded. We quote the following prices:

Honey, extracted clover, per lb	0 06½	0 07½
" sections, per doz	1 50	2 00

Fish.

The fish market is becoming more brisk as the season advances, with trout and white fish moving more freely than last week. Mackerel are down 3c in price, while lake trout are 3c easier. Although navigation has opened, supplies of fish from the upper lakes have not begun to come plentifully as yet. Lake herring are on the market for the first time this season. Our quotations are as follows:

Green Fruits.

There has been a brisk demand for green fruits of all descriptions, especially pines, bananas and strawberries, during the week under review. The orange trade has improved during the week, navels being now relied on largely, although desirable sizes are not to be had. Valencias are nearly out of the market; fruit dealers say stocks have not kept particularly well. Stocks of oranges from Verdilli and Messina, Italy, will arrive shortly for the Summer trade. Lemons are in good demand; stocks of November cut lemons will be on the market next week; the first fruit steamer from Mediterranean ports has arrived in Montreal and her cargo of lemons will be sold at auction on Saturday, May 21. These lemons are considered the best Summer lemons available, being cut regularly in November of every year, cured and stored. They are sorted and the finest quality is shipped the following May to America. There has been a marked advance in pineapples owing to increased demand and the fact that arrivals on the local market have been comparatively light during the week under review. Ruling prices for pines in New York are still higher. Florida tomatoes have also shown a considerable advance, the main reason being the fact that it is now between seasons, the Texas crop not having arrived as yet. Strawberries eased 2c during the week, but have again recovered their former strength, so that last week's quotations rule again this week. Our quotations are as follows:

California navels, per box	2 75	3 50
Messina lemons, new, 300's, per box	2 75	3 00

Vegetables.

The vegetable market has been quiet during the week under review. Potatoes are not so scarce as they were, farmers having been able to deliver supplies since the completion of seeding operations. Reports of stocks being used up in the country appear to have been slightly exaggerated, although the fact remains that potatoes are scarce. Canadian onions, red cabbage and beets are out of the market. Parsnips and carrots are now within very small compass. Greenhouse rhubarb has been largely supplanted by out-of-door stuff, and is easier in price. Asparagus and cucumbers are easier in price by 50c and 90c, respectively. Green cabbage and waxed beans are each 75c higher. A brisk demand for green stuff continues. The market for Bermuda and Egyptian onions is fair and quiet, dealers being pretty well stocked. Our quotations are as follows:

Cabbage, per doz	0 75	1 00
Potatoes, per bag	1 25	1 35
Potatoes, per bag, car lots	1 00	1 15

Seeds.

Now that Spring seeding is practically completed, quotations in clover and timothy are withdrawn from the market. This is an unusual season for corn, supplies suitable for seed stocks being scarce and likely to become exhausted earlier than usual. For this reason intending buyers will do well to stock up early. We quote the following prices on corn:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The wheat market does not exhibit much change for the week, except that Manitoba wheat is higher, Manitoba No. 1 hard being 1c firmer; northern No. 1, 2 1-2c firmer, and northern No. 2, from 3 to 3 1-2c firmer. Oats are 1-2c easier. Our quotations are as follows:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, May 19, 1904.

Groceries.

IMPROVEMENT in all lines of groceries has been marked this week. Everything seems to be moving briskly. Some jobbers report, of course, that things are quiet, but all the big merchants are busy and collections have been good all over. The activity of sugar has featured groceries this week, it having advanced another 5c. A larger volume of goods is moving everywhere than last year at this time. There has been a heavy trade in canned goods for future delivery, with perhaps one exception, tomatoes. Spices are in good demand. Tea is quiet and firm. The coffee market in Brazil is reported slightly weaker. To the surprise of most people eggs advanced slightly yesterday and no doubt will remain firm until supplies increase. In dried fruits currants still hold the strong position indicated last week, and from abroad it has been learned there has been a decided advance for good sound fruits. In green fruits great interest is being taken in the two first auction sales of Mediterranean fruits, which take place Thursday and Friday, May 19 and 20. New potatoes are selling comparatively freely at $7.50 a barrel, and asparagus is bringing $1 for very small baskets. The trade in canned goods might be described as quiet. Jobbers have been making extra purchases, anticipating the Summer sea shore and country trade. The disposition would seem to exist amongst buyers to limit purchases to as small a quantity as possible. The scarcity of corn is still commanding considerable attention. In molasses lower prices may be expected. Of course all lower grades are governed by Barbadoes molasses. This crop seems to be in excess of former years; there is, however, a good distributing demand to wholesale houses. From abroad it is reported that lower grades of Muscovado molasses from the east end district of Porto Rico, which have generally come to Canada, are being pressed for sale in the U. S. Regarding coffee, there is a general opinion despite the alarming talk regarding the failure of the crop that very likely there will be plenty of coffee to supply the demand. However, coffee is going to be interesting. All kinds of fish are coming in freely, and prices have fallen considerably. Lake trout is in, and white fish, also dore, brook trout, and dressed bull-heads. Fresh halibut has dropped to 9c.

SUGAR.

Continued strength in the foreign markets for raw beet sugar, coupled with the advance in price for refined in New York, has strengthened prices locally, so much that refiners have marked 5c per hundred advance on all grades. A fair demand has been noted from all sources and a moderatly active business is doing. This places extra granulated at $4.35. We quote:

Granulated, bbls.	$4 35

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand has been steady for syrups and molasses, and the prices of the past week have been maintained. Lower grades of the black strap order seem to be scarce, and as early arrivals are expected from Barbadoes, all grades may be expected to weaken. The crop at Barbadoes seems about 75 per cent. larger than that of last year, hence it is only reasonable to expect a weakening of prices. We quote:

COFFEE.

Coffee is still interesting and the same uneasiness is felt in the market. From Brazil reports point to poor crops. Receipts at Santos are reported larger than anticipated. The last estimates of the next Java crops, as reported by Jas. Cook & Co., of London, Englan are as follows: "Government (Java) 66,000 piculs; (Liberian) 15,000 piculs; private (Java) 132,000 piculs; private (Liberian) 120,000 piculs." Reports show that at Rio and Santos stocks are a trifle larger than at the same date last year, and are daily showing a decrease. In Europe stocks seem to be about equal to the same date last year. Deliveries have been small for about three months past. Experts report that buyers will be wise who have a full stock of good roasting coffee bought before the crop of 1904-05 arrives, and the probabilities are that such stock will be found very desirable property. We quote:

invoice way, yet there has been a constant demand from wholesale grocers and tea jobbers for small purchases for immediate requirements. The consumption throughout the country is steady in almost every section, and stocks held are not large. The general feeling is that there is a healthy outlook for tea. The cables from Japan and China point out that prices will be normal, and the war is not likely to affect the shipments of tea. Indian teas still remain with a strong tone, although no definite quotable change can be reported for any particular grade. Ceylons are strongly in sympathy with the position of Indian teas, with a slightly weaker tendency, yet the low stocks reported from abroad of Ceylon tea would indicate a very strong position. Shipments from Colombo are still on a very moderate scale and deliveries are said to be in excess of the imports. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

Not the slightest notable change has taken place in canned goods, and the demand remains steady. Buyers are cautiously looking after old stocks in order to get them cleared out in time for the new. The stock of cheap peas is rapidly diminishing. Salmon is still maintaining its strong position, and occupies a large interest in the trade. With the best consuming months in the year yet before us, it is likely that present prices, while high, will be maintained. The damage to the asparagus beds in California seems to have been helped out in some way, and an easier feeling exists, notwithstanding there is still a heavy shortage in the pack, and prices will rule high. The damage was largely confined to one operator, who is reported to have stated that he hopes to make a pro rata delivery on his contracts. Outside of the lower grades of canned peaches, California fruits remain quiet. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Decided interest has been manifest in currants, and a first-rate volume of business has been done at full quotation figures. The market is firm at the offered basis, with an upward tendency, without pressure from any quarter. The market in Greece has again advanced through the week, and advices from that quarter indicate the probability of higher figures. The statistical position of currants is decidedly favorable.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre in their weekly resume report: Currants—This article retains its prominence in the list of dried fruits, the strong position indicated last week being confirmed by an advance of 1s 6d per cwt. for good fruit. Sultanas—The absence of demand has for the present arrested the upward tendency of prices; crop reports still come forward confirming the probability of a small yield. Shelled Walnuts—Continue steady at the advance, notwithstanding the approaching hot weather has curtailed orders for importation. Almonds—The better grades of shelled valencias are now exhausted in first hands, and stocks on this side being light should strengthen the position. Filberts—Remain as last reported—absence of demand with prices steady. Dates—Although the London market has stiffened, holders have not changed their prices here. It is somewhat remarkable that the consumption has not been stimulated with prices probably the lowest on record. We quote:

sold on Friday. It is likely the steamer Jacona, having 60,000 packages, will also have her cargo disposed of on the same day. Naturally there is considerable interest being taken in these sales, as a large number of American buyers will be present. Cranberries are no longer in the market, and sweet potatoes are no longer available. New potatoes are quite a luxury at $7.50 a bbl., but seem to be in good demand. Cabbages are selling freely from $2.50 to $3 a crate. Strawberries are remaining firm at 16c to 20c. Peanuts have gone up in price slightly. We quote :

Fresh fish are coming in in large quantities now, and from Lake Superior white fish and trout have arrived in splendid order, and they have been selling freely at 8½c. Fresh mackerel sold freely at 10c; brook trout at 18c; the dressed bull-heads bringing 8c freely. The closed season for dore was over on Sunday last, and large quantities have come forward, the demand being active at 8½c. Fresh haddock has dropped half a cent a pound, and halibut is selling at 9c. Next week fresh Gaspe salmon is due and is looked forward to with great interest by the trade. Country Produce.

EGGS.

Eggs advanced in price half a cent yesterday, no doubt in sympathy with the strong prices being paid in the country. Then there was a slight decrease in the receipts, the number of cases being 1,961 on Monday. The demand for local consumption was very good all week, and an active trade was done at 15½c for first-class stock, 14c per doz. for second.

BEANS.

Improvement seems to have forsaken beans altogether, and quiet but steady describes the market. Sales of choice primes have been made in a jobbing way from $1.45 to $1.50 a bushel, and primes at $1.40, while car lots of choice primes were quoted at $1.40 and primes at $1.35.

HONEY.

Honey remains the same, with prices unchanged. White clover is quoted at 13½ to 14c. Extracted white clover remains at 8½ to 9c in 10 lb. tins, and 7 to 7½ in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat remains at 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

A good trade has been done in potatoes, and the market remains steady at 95c to $1 a bag, ex track, and in a jobbing way at $1.05 to $1.10 ex store.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

There has been some demand for maple goods during the week with steady prices. We quote :

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

The drop in flour reported last week, has been firmly maintained, although the western millers have been reported to have cut prices still more. The big millers do not expect that flour will remain low very long, and are not selling any more than immediate requirements of customers demand. Considerable quantities are being exported, but these cargoes were no doubt purchased at the advanced prices which existed some time ago. We quote :

Winter wheat patents	5 10 5 25
Straight rollers	4 85 5 00

FEED.

The feed market remains unchanged, the demand has been steady and trade is comparatively brisk, although naturally the increase of grass fodder in the country places has decreased the demand for dried food. We quote :

" shorts	21 00
Manitoba bran, in bags	19 00 20 00

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., May 18, 1904.
Office of The Canadian Grocer,

THE annual meeting of the New Brunswick Wholesale Grocers' Guild was held this week and the following officers elected: A. H. F. Randolph, of A. F. Randolph & Sons, Fredericton, president; Andrew Malcolm, St. John, vice-president; Geo. E. Barbour, St. John, secretary; A. I. Teed, St. Stephen; J. Harris, Moncton; W. C. Cross, of Hall & Fairweather, and S. Jones, of Jones & Schofield, St. John, additional members of the executive committee.

Business is active, though in some lines market is depressed, and there are those who are looking for low prices. The three weak lines are flour, California raisins and cheese. In flour, Ontario grades seem more firm than Manitobas. Cheese has proved weak, quite a few old being carried over. Eggs have also fallen off very quickly in price. On the other hand, sugar continues to move upwards. Molasses is firmer and advices in regard to rice, which has been so low, point to higher figures. Quite large stocks are held.

The Toronto fire has been not without its effect here, our insurance agents having advanced rates and demanded improvements in our water service and fire department. While the advance is considered excessive and has resulted in a reduction of insurance in tariff and increased insurance in non-tariff companies, the action will have some good effect. It is expected we will have at least two chemical fire engines, something needed for a long time, and already the city has taken steps to get expert opinion on its water supply and distribution.

Oil—This is rather a quiet time. In burning oil a large cargo was landed from a tank steamer last week; there is but a light demand. Lubricatings are not as active; prices are quite firm. In paint oils, linseeds, while unchanged, are easy. Turpentine tends to higher prices. Fish oils are a light stock, but prices are rather easier.

Salt—Upwards of ten thousand bags of Liverpool salt were landed ex the Manchester steamer this week. The next regular steamer will arrive in about four weeks. Lower prices are always quoted ex steamer. The quantity of fine salt imported is not large, Canadian salt supplying the demand. Shipments are being received much more promptly than last year.

Canned Goods—There is little to report. Salmon, while firmer, is unchanged and a fair stock is held. It looks as if the trade would have vegetables enough to carry them through. The stock of fruit is not large, but the Consolidated seems able to supply any needs. In pineapples, Singapore is quite largely sold. Oysters are very

VI.

THERE'S one thought that does me more good than all the others that ever came to me. It is this: there's only one thing to be done at a time.

Nothing new about this, but think what it means when things pile up ahead and one begins to think there's more to do than can be done—and begins to hurry, which is next to the worst thing in the world, and to worry, which is the worst thing.

"One thing at a time" takes all the tangles out of a day's work, all the perplexity out of a day's thought, and puts into the day's living that self-confidence that is worth everything else.

It properly begins when you get up in the morning and it keeps you from trying to solve seven of the day's difficulties while tying your cravat—which is a bad thing, for the seven remain unsolved and the cravat carries all day the same kink in it that mars your temper.

Begin with your breakfast—make it a "FORCE" breakfast and treat it with the respect due to the one thing you are doing at that time.

The rest of the day you'll find it easier to firm. Lobsters are quite high. Meats and domestic fish are unchanged.

Green Fruit—Dealers are very busy. Valencia and California oranges have to be quite largely repacked. Prices are rather higher. Lemons are low. In bananas the quality received is good; prices are firm. Pines are light sellers. Strawberries arriving are not in very good condition. Native rhubarb is now received and prices are lower.

Dried Fruit—The cut in raisins found our dealers with fair stocks, though seeded were rather light supply. Dealers are not buyers, however, preferring to work off present stock. Prunes keep low, with a fair sale; large sizes never sold so cheap before. Apricots and peaches show light business. Evaporated apples are firm, with small sales. Currants are firm. Dates are low. Onions are rather easier; quality this season is but fair. Peanuts keep high. Shelled walnuts are very low.

Sugar—No change is noted this week. Holders are making a fair profit, something expected for a long time. Foreign sugar has been quite freely received. Those who handle it receive the protection of the guild without it costing them anything.

Molasses—Some very nice Barbadoes is being offered at low prices. In Porto Rico, except the stock held by one house, the supply of new goods is light. Price is rather firmer. The situation is watched with interest. Prices that have been quoted are below present stock, and some are finding difficulty to fill orders taken.

Fish—Fresh fish are having more attention. Gaspereaux are, so far, below average catch. Shad are offered, but as yet the supply is light. A few salmon are seen; the price is still high. No salman brought in are better than St. John harbor salmon. Dry fish are scarce, and full prices are asked. In pickled herring there is no business and few fish. Smoked herring are scarce and very high. Very nice smoked Gaspereaux are offered.

Flour, Feed and Meal—The price of Manitoba is again lower. Ontario brands keep firm and business is light. Feed is quite firm. Oats are rather higher. Oatmeal is unchanged; the price is thought to be too high. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans are dull at a rather lower price. Barley shows a light sale. Split peas are still high, and a very light stock is held. In seeds, dealers are trying to clean up stocks.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, May 17, 1904.

TRADE throughout the country continues rather quiet but better prospects are anticipated in the near future. All around business in the city is reported by the jobbers as being quite satisfactory under the prevailing conditions.

Sugar—The market holds Montreal granulated unchanged, quoting it at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows at $4.25. But we may look for an advance, as Wallaceburg sugar has advanced 5c and is now quoted at $4.85 in barrels and $4.75 in sacks.

Canned Fruits—The market is now firm. Pineapples are quoted 2 lb. whole at $3.75 a case of two dozen, 1¾ lb. sliced at $3.75 a case of two dozen, 1½ lb. sliced $7.20 a case of four dozen, and 1¾ lbs. grated $7.60 a case of four dozen.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are firm with the exception of California apricots, which have advanced quarter of a cent, and evaporated peaches and pears are higher. Peaches have advanced ¾c to 1¼c a lb. Oregon prunes, large sizes, are still very cheap, 70 to 80 at 5¼c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6¼c, and 40 to 50 at 6¾c.

Green Fruits—The market is firm. Pineapples are quoted at $5 a case, Florida tomatoes at $4 a case, oranges $3 to $3.50 a case, California lemons $4 to $4.50 a case, cucumbers $2 a dozen, rhubarb at 5c a lb. Bananas are still very scarce and are being quoted at $3 to $3.50 a bunch, XX are quoted at $4 a barrel and XXX at $5 a barrel.

Rolled Oats—The market is firm. 60 lb. sacks are quoted at $2.25, 40 lb. sacks at $2.30, 20 lb. sacks $2.35, 8 lb. sacks at $2.65, and 5 lq. sacks at $2.85.

Flour—The market is much easier. sacks at $2.65, and 5 lb. sacks at $2.85.

Peanuts—The market remains firm as yet, but an advance is expected as the stocks throughout the U. S. are very light and the new crop will not be in before the 1st of November.

Eggs—The egg market is somewhat easier than it was last week and eggs are now jobbing at 14c.

Provisions—The market in cured meats and lard continues firm. Our quotations are as follows:

Hams, per lb	0 13½
Shoulders, per lb	0 08½
Picnic hams per lb	0 09
Breakfast bellies, per lb	0 13½

STORING GASOLINE.

GASOLINE from some cause or another has obtained a reputation as one of the most dangerous of oils. Investigation will show to the unprejudiced mind that this is partially undeserved. Gasoline, however, is very volatile and it is imperatively necessary that it be stored immediately in a perfectly air-tight receptacle.

It is claimed that gasoline will evaporate from a wooden barrel or ordinary tank at the rate of 50 per cent. per month. This is all loss, not to mention the attendant danger of fire, for it must be conceded that when unconfined, gasoline is highly inflammable and extreme caution must be used in storing it. Gasoline storage to-day has been brought to the highest possible degree of efficiency, both as regards safety and convenience, as well as economy and cleanliness.

The firm of S. F. Bowser & Co., of Fort Wayne, Indiana, U. S., have for the past 19 years devoted their time and energy to developing the best and latest ideas in tank construction. The long distance outfit, which they are offering to automobilists is not, therefore, an experiment, since they have built pumps of this description for a number of years. Appreciating the growing demand for safe and convenient gasoline storage, they have perfected a long distance gasoline storage outfit, and covered it with an iron-clad guarantee. Simple and durable in construction, it provides, without doubt, the most convenient and satisfactory system ever devised for providing storage for gasoline. The attractive little booklet, "Roll of Honor," shows that the Bowser long distance outfit has been installed in all parts of the country, which in itself is an evidence that it complies with the most rigid requirements regarding the storing of gasoline.

The tank is made of heavy sheet steel and is designed to be buried in the ground any desired distance from the building. It is riveted and soldered, and then finished with three coats of asphaltum, which, combined with the galvanizing, makes the outfit rust proof, and it will last practically a lifetime.

The pump is designed to be located at the most convenient point on the store floor and connects with the tank by piping. The pump is entirely of metal and pumps and measures a gallon, half gallon or quart as desired into the customer's can without the use of measures or funnels.

The outfit is shown in Messrs. Bowser & Co.'s ad., which appears on page 146 of this issue. They state they will be pleased to send catalogue and full information free to any merchants who handle gasoline.

TRADING STAMPS MUST GO.

APPARENTLY the blow has fallen on trading stamps in Montreal. At the meeting of the City Council on Monday, an amended by-law prohibiting their use was passed, and will go into effect as soon as the Mayor signs it. It has been explained already in The Grocer, that on May 1 a former by-law on this subject, adopted a year ago, was to have gone into effect, but owing to some slight flaw, technically, it was found to be defective in two or three points. The old by-law would have infringed on the individual rights of merchants and others to use stamps, if they wish to do so at their own expense. All is covered by the new by-law, which stops the organized distribution of such stamps, not by a merchant to customer, but by merchants to other merchants, in return for certain considerations. The text of the new by-law is as follows:

"Section 1.—No person, firm or corporation in the City of Montreal shall give, sell, distribute or receive any trading stamps or coupons, nor shall any person employ similar means nor resort to similar devices, which may be construed as equivalent to or as having the same effect as the said trading stamps or coupons.

"Section 2.—No person, firm, company or corporation shall, in the said City of Montreal, carry on or pursue the trade of such stamps or coupons, or other similar devices, or their equivalent, or that which may be construed as having the same effect.

"Section 3.—The prohibitive provision contained in Sections 1 and 2 of said by-law No. 301 shall not apply in the City of Montreal, to any merchant or manufacturer who places in or upon packages of goods sold by him, or delivers to the purchaser of such goods, sold or manufactured, tickets or coupons to be redeemed by such merchant or manufacturer, either in money or merchandise.

"Section 4.—Any person infringing any of the prohibitive provisions contained in Sections 1 and 2 of said by-law No. 301, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.), and in default of payment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

"Section 5.—This by-law shall be considered as forming part of said by-law No. 301 to all intents and purposes."

Mr. James E. Wilder, proprietor of the Traders' Advertising Co. Green Cash Receipts, being interviewed, stated that the action of the City Council in amending the by-law would in no way interfere with continuing business, and that conditions now in Montreal were the same as they were in the City of Quebec a year ago, where the Traders' Advertising Co. have a branch. About a year ago the council of that city passed a by-law similar to the one passed by the council in Montreal. An injunction was at once served by the Traders' Advertising Co. to prevent the by-law from being enforced. The business has been carried on in Quebec the same as usual during the past year, and will be continued in Montreal until the highest courts of Canada decide against it. Several judgments of late have been rendered in the United States, and in every case they have been in favor of the trading stamp companies. The Act passed allows any person or company to give trading stamps or coupons, providing the party giving them redeems same himself. The only question to be decided by the courts is whether the third party has a right to redeem stamps given out by another. The Traders' Advertising Co. claim that any Act to prevent a third party from redeeming such stamps or coupons is null and void, and they claim it would be as reasonable to pass an Act prohibiting a bank from honoring a cheque drawn on them by another party.

An injunction was granted the Traders' Advertising Co. on Tuesday to prevent the enforcing of the new city by-law.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA.

THE gradual development of reciprocal trade between Canada and Australia is instanced by the cargo of the steamer Aorangi which arrived in Vancouver a few days ago with the largest cargo of Australian produce ever imported into Canada. One item alone was over 5,000 cases of onions, for which there exists at present an excellent market, both for British Columbia trade and for shipment to the Yukon. The Aorangi also brought 300 boxes of Australian butter, 20 crates frozen rabbits, 25 barrels cocoanut oil, 32 bags green coffee, and 200 boxes Australian grapes.

MONTREAL.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

WITH ocean navigation open only one week, and lake navigation about the same time, the activity in freights generally is just beginning. Little sail tonnage has been reported for the early season in Montreal. Shippers seem to be looking for tonnage for long voyages in the lumber trade, and it is reported that terms are not attractive to vessel owners and suitable vessels offer sparingly. Very few charters have been reported this week in Montreal. Lake traffic, however, seems to be exciting considerable interest. Strong rates will be noticed by the table for general cargoes and timber.

Inland Grain Charters.

Steamship Knawaka has been chartered for a cargo of 75,000 bushels of corn at Chicago, to go to New York via the St. Lawrence route. She has a charter from Norfolk, Va., and needed a cargo for ballast, and it will take her twenty-five days to make the journey.

Large quantities of grain have been chartered at Fort William to Montreal on barges at 5c a bushel. A number of lake boats have also been chartered to carry grain to Parry Sound, and thence by rail to Montreal at 5½c per bushel.

Plenty of grain is in sight by the C. P. R. for their own steamers, as all grain space is booked for May.

There will be plenty of western American grain down shortly since the railways have settled the grain rate war between Missouri River points and Chicago. The present rate, 5c on wheat and 4c on other grain, will remain in effect until the new rates are checked off, and the latter will not go into effect until June 1.

Cardiff, a Port of Entry for Canadian Produce

By E. Biermann.

PEOPLE have often heard of the startling growth of ports and cities in the new world, but very few realize that in the Old Country there are examples of towns which, favored by natural position, have grown and developed with quite equal rapidity. Such a case is that of Cardiff.

The progress of this port during the past few years has been almost phenomenal, the percentage of increase both as regards trade and population being the largest in the United Kingdom. The exports during 1903 reached the enormous total of over 20 million tons. The registered tonnage of vessels cleared was over 8,000,000, thus placing Cardiff first in the world for foreign exports.

Unfortunately the imports of Cardiff have not, up to now, kept pace with the exports, having, so to speak, been overlooked in the general rush and expansion of the latter. However, as soon as the natural advantages of position and the great facilities which the port offers are sufficiently known and recognized, they are bound to attract a large share of the imports to the United Kingdom.

During the last few years Cardiff has been well alive to the importance of fostering an import trade. In the years 1902-3 this question has been seriously considered, and a deputation waited on Lord Strathcona for the purpose of pointing out the exceptional advantages possessed by Cardiff as a port of destination for a Canadian service of fast steamers. We have, already, the Lord line of steamers, with a fortnightly service between Montreal and Cardiff in the Summer season, and between Baltimore and Cardiff in the Winter. Whenever this service is not available, goods for Cardiff may be shipped at through rates via Avonmouth or Liverpool.

The facilities for doing an import trade at Cardiff are all that can be desired. Specially constructed transit warehouses, capable of storing any quantity of goods, are erected at every dock. Extensive cold storage is also provided alongside the Roath dock for meat and other perishable merchandise. The charges for storage and handling goods are low. The dues on vessels and cargo are as light as at any other port in the Kingdom.

The population of South Wales and Monmouthshire — the immediate and natural ground for Cardiff's trade—according to the last census return taken in 1901, was 1,546,100. Adding the average rate of increase since that year, it is estimated that Cardiff has a population of close on 1,700,000 within a radius of about 30 miles. At least eighty per cent. of that population is engaged in coal mining, iron and tinplate making, and kindred industries, and is solely dependent, as regards foodstuffs, on imported supplies.

The Bute dock authorities are now erecting a low water pier at Cardiff, and another will shortly be erected at Weston - Super - Mare (Somersetshire). This will enable Cardiff to supply a further large population in the south-west of England, bringing up the total within the 30 miles radius, to close upon 2½ millions.

From its geographical position Cardiff is, moreover, the natural ocean port for Birmingham, the Midlands generally, and also the intervening counties. Taking Montreal as the exporting point, we find the distances compare as follows: Montreal to Birmingham, via Cardiff, 2,87¼ miles; Montreal to Birmingham, via Liverpool, 2,906 miles. The railway rates to the Midlands are in favor of Cardiff by something like two or three shillings per ton.

Taking all these points into consideration, there is a further population of several millions, to whom Cardiff can rightly claim to be the ocean port and the natural centre of distribution.

Seeing that the port was ripe for a large development of the fruit and produce trade, some 18 months ago the experiment of importing large quantities of fruit direct to Cardiff, and selling it by auction, as is done in other landing ports, was tried. This experiment has proved so successful that to-day thousands of packages of goods are sold where formerly not hundreds could be sold. Last season a single firm found no difficulty in distributing 2,000 to 3,000 barrels of apples weekly in the immediate neighborhood of Cardiff. There is also a good outlet at Cardiff for a fair quantity of Californian apples, pears, and other fruits, as well as grain and produce generally.

GROCERS AT HORSE SHOW.

AT the Montreal Horse Show, held last week, a special class for retail grocers' delivery horses and wagons was an interesting feature, and nine competitors entered the contest. The turn-outs were the regular delivery horses and wagons employed by the various merchants competing, and all of them were certainly a credit to the proprietors. Competition in some respects was keen and the three judges who, by the way, were New Yorkers, spoke creditably of all. Their decision resulted as follows:

Class 12.—Horses, property of retail grocers, to be shown in single harness and delivery wagons as used in local deliveries; horses to count 50 per cent., cart and equipment 50 per cent.; horses to be owned and in use by exhibitor at time of entry. First prize, $25; second prize, $15; third prize, $10. The entries were:

Belle, b.m., 15.2, 5 years; exhibited by W. J. Brown, Montreal.

Dolly, r.m., 16, 5 years; exhibited by T. K. T. Stone, Montreal.

French Topsy, blk.m., 16, 7 years; exhibited by Ewan Bros., Montreal.

Tom, b.g., 15.0 3-4, 7 years; exhibited by J. B. Vanier Frere, Montreal.

Frank, b.g., 16, 7 years; exhibited by L. N. Ostigny, Montreal.

Prince, gr.g., 15.0 3-4, 9 years; exhibited by John Robertson & Son, Montreal.

Piton, blk.g., 15.0 1-2, 7 years; exhibited by Beauvais, Lalonde & Cie., Montreal.

Billy, b.g., 16. 8 years; exhibited by N. Chartrand, Montreal.

Kate, br.m., 15.3, 8 years; exhibited by Ald. N. Lapointe.

Belle	1
French Topsy	2
Dolly	3
Prince	4

The winning turn-out was Belle, owned by Mr. W. J. Brown, St. Catherine street, with Ewan Bros.' French Topsy second, T. K. T. Stone's Dolly third, and John Robertson & Son's Prince fourth.

Ald. N. Lapointe and Mr. N. Chartrand, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, had two decidedly creditable entries; in fact, all grocers entering deserve honorable mention for their turn-outs.

The arrangement for this special prize for retail grocers was largely due to the efforts of Mr. S. D. Stewart, Montreal representative for Heinz Co., Ltd., Pittsburg. In former years grocers' horses and turn-outs were bunched with the general delivery horse class, but through Mr. Stewart's efforts a separate class was provided this year. It is needless to say that his efforts were duly appreciated by the interested trade.

A LEADING OTTAWA WHOLESALE GROCERY FIRM

THE growth of Ottawa within the last decade has been equalled by very few Canadian cities. It is not many years since Ottawa was spoken of only as a lumbering centre; now with its seventy thousand population it has become one of the greatest industrial centres in the Dominion. Appreciating the phenomenal and healthy growth of their city and the need of an up-to-date and progressive grocery firm, the subjects of this sketch, Provost & Allard, opened up business at the corner of Sussex and Murray streets. The growth of their business was so rapid that in less than six months they had to remove to their present premises, which are now beginning to be too small for their present increasing business. Plans are being prepared for the enlarging of the warehouses, which it is expected will be completed by the coming Fall.

Mr. A. E. Provost.

Provost & Allard carry one of the best assorted stocks of fancy groceries in eastern Canada. They also handle a great variety of smallwares, pipes, cutlery, novelties and grocers' sundries of all kinds. A representative of the house is going abroad next June and will spend a couple of months visiting the principal manufacturing centres in England, France and Germany, selecting and buying goods.

The success of this firm is an illustration of what honesty, push and perseverance can do in this great Canada of ours. It ought also to prove a great incentive to the young man behind the counter to aim for the top and not be content until he has reached it. Both members of the firm started life without a penny.

A. E. Provost was born about 38 years ago. He received his education at the Brothers school in Ottawa. In 1879 he entered the employment of the Citizen office and served his time as a typesetter, a business which he followed for six years. He studied stenography and for 20 years acted as assistant to M. A. Horton, Hansard reporter. In 1883 he formed a partnership with his brother, C. J. Provost, and bought out the retail grocery business of C. J. C. O'Keefe, Of this business they made an unqualified success, and Mr. Provost has often since remarked that there is no school for the prospective wholesaler like the retail counter—the best place to learn the wants of the public.

A. Allard, though still a young man, having been born in 1858, was educated in Brothers' Commercial Academy. He is called one of the elders of the grocery trade in the capital, his connection with the business extending for a period of thirty years. He is considered one of the best wholesale grocers in Canada, and has certainly proven himself to be so—for his old employers at least. During the last quarter of a century he directed the affairs of three different grocery and wine firms, all of whom became wealthy. He is an untiring worker, quick to decide, and firm in his decisions.

THE INTRODUCER OF CEYLON TEA IN AMERICA.

HEREWITH is a portrait of the gentleman who practically "made" Ceylon teas in America, Mr. William McKenzie. This gentleman was a successful coffee and latterly a tea planter for thirty-five years in the Island of Ceylon. In 1894 Mr. McKenzie accepted the position of commissioner from the Ceylon Planters' Association to represent them in America, and to use his efforts to bring the tea product of that island to the notice of the people of Canada and the United States.

The planters believed that it was only necessary for the public to try Ceylon teas to be convinced of their superior merit, but to bring about such a trial was and is one of the great problems before any firm or company desiring to market their goods.

When Mr. McKenzie first arrived in Canada, in 1895, practically all the black tea consumed came from China. Of the many packets on the Canadian market, only one contained Ceylon tea, and this was a very small affair. Many Canadians in fact had never heard of Ceylon tea. The revolution that has taken place in the tea trade in the ten years that have elapsed shows how well the work was done.

Last year Canada imported a trifle less than a million pounds of China Congou, which will decrease this year. In fact the importation of that tea has sunk from twelve million pounds to a few hundred thousand, and Ceylon tea has taken its place.

In 1899 the first green teas were made in Ceylon, through the repeated requests of Mr. McKenzie, as over half the consumption of tea in Canada and the United States is green tea. In that year less than 50,000 lbs. came to Canada,—the total export of the island in green tea. Last year there were 15,000,000 lbs. of Ceylon and India green teas exported to Canada and the United States. An attempt is now being made to produce teas of a similar character to Formosa Oolong, as 20,000,000 lbs. of those teas are consumed in the United States. If those are produced as successfully as the black and greens have been, there is no doubt that Mr. McKenzie will find a way of bringing them before the public just as he has the black and green teas of Ceylon, in which case his mission will have been accomplished.

Friends of The Grocer will be glad to know that Mr. McKenzie considers this paper has been the most valuable means he had in developing the demand for Ceylons. He took a full page and talked the merits of Ceylon teas for many months to the grocery trade only. When they became familiar with the tea he began a campaign to the consumer through other newspapers, but still maintained strong page advertisements in The Grocer, which was the only trade newspaper used in Canada. So strong was this campaign in The Grocer that within five months after it began a large wholesale house which was extensively advertising a packet of "pure China, Japan and India tea," withdrew all their blocks and advertised "Ceylon tea" exclusively.

It was recently pointed out by one of the best informed men on the tea situation that when Mr. McKenzie began his campaign Ceylons were as low as 2¾d on the London market for low grown teas, and to-day they are getting 7d. The improvement is entirely due to the campaign inaugurated and so successfully and energetically carried on by Mr. McKenzie.

MR. J. ALEXANDER GORDON, MONTREAL.

THE GROCER takes pleasure in presenting to its readers in this issue a portrait of Mr. J. Alexander Gordon, of J. Alex. Gordon & Co., brokers and commission merchants, Montreal.

Mr. Gordon has been established since 1877, on his own account, under the above firm name, having been for several years previous a member of the firm of Hart, Gordon & Co. Before entering the latter firm he was associated with his father, Mr. James Gordon, who was the first commercial broker in Montreal. The firm of J. Alex. Gordon & Co. are to-day the oldest and one of the most prominent brokerage and commission houses in connection with the grocery trade, in Montreal.

They are selling agents for the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., and for the Canadian Consolidated Canners Co. Among the many firms represented by them may also be mentioned: Juan Ferchen & Co., Denia, Spain, dried fruits; P. A. Burlimi, London and Patras; Armsby & Co., California, dried fruits; Gordon, Grant & Co., Trinidad, sugar; Leacock & Co., Barbadoes, molasses. As tea brokers, J. Alex. Gordon & Co. are representatives of some of the leading houses in Ceylon, India, China and Japan, as well as of several large London tea houses. In salmon, they are agents for a number of the largest packers and best known brands of the Pacific coast.

Mr. Cecil T. Gordon is associated with his brother in the representation of the various agencies, and the interests of the different firms represented are looked after in the most careful and satisfactory manner. The reputation established by the Messrs. Gordon in their dealings with the trade is of the highest, and a very large business is transacted annually.

SANITARY BREAD.

THE subject of bread, its adulteration, system of marking it to protect the maker, and the chances of short weight, is at present occupying a great deal of attention. A short time ago The Grocer contained a short article on the question of sanitation in connection with the placing of stickers on bread. Alderman Dagenais, who, by the way, is a doctor, practicing in a very thickly populated ward in the city of Montreal, has strenuously taken up this matter of bread stickers, and it is now before the Health Committee of the City Council of Montreal.

In all movements of this kind, it is interesting to compare history in other older and larger cities. London, England, is at present agitated over a similar bread difficulty. In London the Public Control Committee of the County Council has been endeavoring to propose the repeal of the Bread Act of 1822. It is suggested that a more modern measure should be drafted,—a measure similar to that in force in Montreal perhaps, which provides that all bread except fancy bread, should be sold in loaves of 1, 2, 4, or 6 lbs., and that the weight of the loaf should be impressed upon it in large figures. The measure would also impose a penalty for selling short weight loaves, unless it were proved that the deficiency came from the fact that they had been kept for 48 hours. It is also proposed that the inspector of weights and measures should have power to test the weight of loaves, either when on sale in the shop, or in the course of delivery.

The same reason which brought this agitation about in London is common in all Canadian cities. It is this: A considerable quantity of bread is retailed in small shops, many of which sell articles which do not improve the flavor of bread, such as paraffine oil, disinfectants, and vermin-killers. Take shops of this nature in a city like Montreal, where thousands of loaves are sold per day, and it is only reasonable to believe that plenty of bread arrives at the homes of the people in a very unsatisfactory condition. We have seen bread in shop windows in Montreal in the midst of all kinds of goods, and frequently the boy, or the woman, or the man, serving the oil, the rat poison, or the candles does not think it worth his or her while to wash the hands before serving the bacon, butter, cheese or bread.

A similar difficulty to that in London has arisen in Montreal, as the council would like to regulate the delivery of bread and, if possible, to accentuate the necessity of personal cleanliness of the deliverer; further to prevent it from exposure to dust and dirt in the course of delivery. Who has not seen the dirty-handed bakery driver seize a loaf of bread from his cart and throw it carelessly against a musty, old, dirty coat, and thus carry it to the customer? It has always seemed remarkable that people who have once seen this kind of thing can continue to deal with such a baker, for it is a very fair argument that a person who is dirty about one thing is most likely unclean about others.

In what condition the bake-house of such a baker must be would be hard to define. Several remedies have been suggested—one is to wrap tissue paper about the loaves. But then we must go further than that, for the original lack of cleanliness is where the harm is done, viz., in the dough, in the mixing of the yeast, and in the flour. Everything should be most rigidly clean.

The question of adulteration is a vital one. In England the old alum evil has been stamped out, but can the same be said in Montreal? The laws are strict regarding adulteration in the Province of Quebec, but there is no doubt they are not enforced as rigidly as in the Old Country. Then, to be reasonable on the other side, it is a difficult matter to regulate purity when baking powder and other ingredients, for which the baker is not responsible, have to be used.

The question of weight is a difficult one to regulate, and it is the opinion of very capable bakers that you cannot make a loaf of an exact weight to a certainty, if it is made crusty. In Scotland, the two pound loaf is strongly stamped, but there the crust is only at the top and bottom, and the bread is more steamed than baked. In Montreal the nasty practice of pasting stickers on loaves is something unpardonable. Why should there be stickers on bread? The whole mass of users of bread have made no demand for any such designation, and the city council are at present discussing the advisability of using little perforating stamps instead.

However, on enquiry it all comes back upon the grocer, and it is not the intention to hurt the feelings of the retail grocer by attacking stickers, for we understand it is the grocer who demanded the sticker, or at least something of the kind, in order that he might be protected from the law against short weight among bakers.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. J. L. Bowes, of the J. A. McLean Produce Co., Toronto, has gone to England on business for his firm. He sailed from New York on the ss. Carpathian.

Mr. John Sloan, of John Sloan & Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, has gone on a two months' trip to Europe. During his absence the business is being conducted by Mr. Frank Sloan.

Mr. C. H. Hinman, of the Postum Cereal Co., manufacturers of grape nuts and Postum cereal coffee, Battle Creek, Mich., has been in Toronto for the past two weeks calling on the wholesale and retail trades.

Mr. Suggitt, the secretary of the Leeds, Eng., Retail Grocers' Association, is about to visit Canada with the object of investigating Canadian mercantile methods and looking up new ideas in the grocery trade.

Mr. C. L. Farnworth, the energetic representative of Dalley's blacking, of Hamilton, Ontario, was a welcome caller at The Grocer office in Montreal last week. He is hustling for a good article, and his territory, which is east of Belleville, is certainly well covered.

Mr. Wm. Mooney, manager of the city order department of the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co.'s branch at Winnipeg, has been laid up for the past two weeks with a severe attack of quinsy, but is now around again attending to his duties as well as ever.

Mr. Geo. Mann, Montreal manager of the Salada Tea Co., has been confined in the general hospital, undergoing an operation to his eyes. The Grocer is pleased to learn that he is recovering rapidly and will be out in a few days.

Mr. H. W. Bender, the genial New York representative of MacLaren Cheese Co., Toronto, has had a very extensive trip, having visited Chicago, St. Paul, Butte, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Detroit and Pittsburg in the interests of his firm. Mr. Bender says the demand for his company's products is large and constantly growing, a circumstance that speaks volumes for their excellence.

Mr. Norman McLeod, of McLeod & Co., Calcutta, paid a visit to Toronto the past week. He speaks very favorably for the future of Indian teas, stating that the demand is steadily increasing every year, and that the plantations are now on a paying basis. He expects to see teas a little higher. New markets are being constantly found. Russia, four years ago, practically bought no tea from India, and to-day it is one of the best customers, showing the great popularity of teas grown in India.

Mr. Norman McLeod, of McLeod & Co., Calcutta, was a visitor to the trade of Montreal during the past week, in the interest of Indian teas. The firm of which Mr. McLeod is a member, are owners of several large tea estates in India, and are large exporters. Besides the tea industry, they do an enormous business in jute, and Mr. McLeod has closed some very large contracts with several Montreal business houses. Messrs. S. H. Ewing & Sons are Canadian representatives for McLeod & Co., and Mr. W. H. Halford introduced Mr. McLeod to the trade.

Mr. Arthur J. Hodgson, of Hodgson Bros., formerly president of the Board of Trade, Montreal, and a member of one of the largest dairy produce firms in the city, has just returned from a trip abroad, where he went as a delegate to the Chambers of Commerce in Great Britain. He believes that a royal commission composed of men from the British Islands and from the self-governing dependencies of the Empire, should be appointed to enquire into the fiscal question, and that such a step, if backed by the Canadian Parliament, would contribute in a very great degree towards the realization of an imperial policy, the consideration of which has so occupied the British mind during the past year. He said the business men of Great Britain had their eye on Canada, and he knew of no less than four large manufacturing concerns who had expressed their intention to establish plants in Canada. He also stated that he was informed from various sources that the Duke of Sutherland was very likely to be the next Governor-General of Canada.

Mr. John Lorimer, of Lorimer & Co., wholesale druggists, Britannia Row, Essex road, London N., called at the office of The Grocer this week. Mr. Lorimer is a keen, careful Scotchman, who is a member of one of the largest firms of its kind in London. The title, wholesale druggist, does not fully explain the importance of their business to the grocery trade. They are manufacturers, and while Mr. Lorimer is here visiting Canada on a health restoring trip, he is busily engaged in promoting trade. The Grocer was very glad to acquaint the visitor with some of the most reliable and responsible agents in Montreal, who would likely handle their specialties in this country. Their firm sell baking powder, flavoring essences, Worcestershire sauce, rennet essences, relishes of various kinds, condiments, vinegar essences, quinine wines, malt extracts, and in fact an amazing variety of grocers' sundries which could be easily carried by any general store in the Dominion. The name of the new agency will probably be announced next week.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Jas. Rutherford & Co., Montreal, report having the first shipment of Japan teas to arrive by first steamer.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, who are now agents for the sale of Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa in Onatrio and the west, have been meeting with wonderful success in the development of the sale of this world famous article. They are having a large shipment come forward by one of the first boats arriving at Montreal and will be glad to get into touch with any buyers who are wishing to stock Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of a car of pineapples, also of a car of Messina blood and oval oranges.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, have received a direct shipment of pineapples from Jamaica this week.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, report a very heavy Spring business in the Northwest Territories and British Columbia in "Tartan" fruits and vegetables. This shows that "Tartan" brand is a winner wherever known.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, report very large Spring business throughout the Northwest Territories abd British Columbia. J. A. Henderson, who succeeded the late W. B. Croy, having left the western trip to take a partnership with Bickle & Greening, brokers, Hamilton, the rounds in the west will be made by Sinclair Balfour, Jr., son of the head of the firm.

NOTES.

Geo. Foster & Sons, wholesale grocers, Brantford, are building new offices in the front portion of their warehouse on Colborne street.

J. Burns, grocer, Brantford, has recently doubled the size of his store at 32 Dalhousie street. His grocery establishment is now one of the largest in the city.

J. W. Bickle & Greening, brokers and commission merchants, Hamilton, have located in new quarters at 62 King William street, where they will have exceptionally good storage facilities.

ONTARIO WHOLESALE GROCERS' GUILD MEETS.

AFTER a year's existence the Ontario Grocers' Guild held its first annual meeting in Toronto on May 17. The guild exists for the purpose of remedying grievances in the trade and for social objects, and at the meeting in the Board of Trade a resolution expressing great satisfaction at the work accomplished during the year was passed.

Among those present were: George Bristol, J. F. Eby, William Logan, James Ince, Frank Sloan, J. I. Davidson, Arthur Pafford, F. W. Humphrey, Thomas Kinnear, and Hugh Blain of Toronto; H. Y. Telfer, J. M. Dillon, John Marr and John Garvey, Collingwood; A. Olive, Brantford; M. Carson, Kingston; G. Glassco, F. Osborne, P. W. Steele, James Watt, Jas. Somerville and H. C. Beckett, Hamilton; H. McLaughlin, Owen Sound; T. B. Escott and S. Screaton, London; J. F. Smythe, Windsor. Messrs. H. N. Bate and F. J. Castle & Co., of Ottawa, were not able to be represented, and forwarded regrets.

The meeting discussed the relationship of manufacturers and brokers to the wholesale grocery trade, and appointed a committee to deal with some complaints. It was recommended that all houses represented in the guild should allow their travelers two weeks holiday in August, and a plan to withdraw all travelers from the road for at least a week during the Christmas season was also discussed. At the close of the meeting the following officers were elected: President, George E. Bristol, Toronto; vice-presidents, T. B. Escott, London, and W. G. Craig, Kingston. Mr. H. C. Beckett of Hamilton will advise the association concerning the changes in freight rates on goods. The next meeting of the guild will be held in Toronto.

PEACH CROP IN ESSEX COUNTY.

IN March grave fears were entertained that the peach orchards of Essex County, Ontario, had been wholly destroyed. If this fear had proved well grounded, it would have meant disaster for a most important industry in Southwestern Ontario. Some five years ago Essex peach orchards, which had just reached full bearing age, were wiped out by the frezing cold winter, accompanied by bare ground. This year, a second plantation should give its first full crop, and if another wipeout had occurred, the result would have been more serious than can well be imagined. But fears formed in March have proved at least partially groundless. Essex orchards have not been completely destroyed, although very serious damage has been done. The state of affairs is fully described in a report received from J. L. Hilborn, the well-known fruit grower of Leamington: "So far as our own orchard is concerned, trees under three years old appear to be in good condition, as a rule, but the bearing trees are killed far worse than I had thought for, until the warm weather proved how serious the damage was. We still expect to have quite a lot of peaches, but the greater number of our bearing trees are dead. The majority of the peach trees in this part of Essex County, at least, are undoubtedly dead."

A FLOOD OF CHEESES.

Some prominent cheese exporters who have just returned from England had copies of some verses which aptly describe the situation abroad supplied to them.

OH CHEESES!

I wish they wouldn't ship 'em:
They are coming every day;
I'd pay a half a cent a pound,
If they'd only stay away.

There are cheeses on the sidewalk,
And cheeses in the door,
Cheeses on the stairway,
And cheeses on the floor;
I suppose they'll keep on coming, as long as they well please,
But I'm getting mighty tired of the blooming smell of cheese.

I really cannot sell 'em
They are coming in too thick,
And every time I think of cheese
It makes me simply sick.

There are cheeses in the office,
And cheeses on the scales;
Cheeses in the basement,
In boxes, sacks and bales.
I wish that I could bribe them not to send in any more,
For I can't help thinking of 'em and
It makes me very sore.

I wish that I could use 'em
For grindstones and for wheels,
I know that this will make you laugh,
But you don't know how it feels—

To have cheeses all around you,
Think cheeses in your sleep,
Taste cheeses when you eat your meals—
It's enough to make you weep.

TOURIST TRADE.

NOW that Canada is being sought more and more by tourists the world over the material benefit to be reaped by Canadians from catering to tourist trade is becoming an increasingly attractive item.

Almost invariably tourists leave a lot of money in the country, as one proof of which one has only to instance the large number of prosperous Summer resorts in Canada whose only reason for existence is their Summer population. Perhaps the biggest share of the spoils under ordinary circumstances goes to grocers throughout the country. Such being the case, the wideawake grocer will welcome to his locality the greatest possible number of tourists for the longest possible time.

One of the most efficacious means of attracting tourists to a country is to induce its farmers and citizens to make their farms and individual establishments as attractive as possible, to perfect the roads and improve the general appearance of the country.

Talk to the farmer along this line, if persevered in, will ultimately bring money and lots of it into the grocers' pockets. Happy man is he if he can persuade his country customers of the truth of the statement that of all the branches of industry which the farmer can combine with farming, probably there is none more profitable than the keeping of Summer boarders. It is a spot cash trade with good profits and quick returns. When the ground is ready, the good seed must be sown in the way of suggestions as to the best ways and means of catering direct to the wants and tastes of tourists once they are attracted to the country.

The Grocer is in receipt of an attractive little brochure gotten out by D. R. Jack for distribution among the farmers of the Province of New Brunswick. Mr. Jack is a member of the Executive Committee of the New Brunswick Tourist Association, an organization for the promotion of tourist travel throughout the province which has for some years carried on a very successful campaign.

In his little booklet Mr. Jack gives a large number of valuable hints as to the best ways for the farmer to cater to the wants of the tourist, just the sort of suggestions the grocer should make to his customers in endeavoring to further tourist trade to their mutual advantage.

YOKOHAMA BOARD OF TRADE.

THE following are extracts from the latest report of the Foreign Board of Trade, Yokohama, Japan :

"The tea season of 1903 was notable for the high prices paid for both first and second crop leaf, but more particularly for first crop, this higher range of prices having been made possible by the removal of the duty in the United States. First arrivals of the new leaf appeared on the market a few days earlier than in the previous year, and these were eagerly bought up by speculators (or a speculator) and shipped by the first steamer with the object, apparently, of placing the shipper in the position of being the only holder of new teas on the other side during the few days' interval between deliveries of the first and second steamers; the result of this policy was that first arrivals on this market varied in price from yen 12.00 to yen 20.00 per picul over the rate of the previous season.

"It was, of course, impossible for sellers to maintain these prices, but holders in the interior were undoubtedly encouraged by them to demand more for their teas than they would otherwise have been willing to accept, and when the market settled down to regular business, prices were still yen 10,00 to yen 12.00 per picul over the previous year, and were maintained at this figure practically for the whole of the first crop.

"The quality of the first crop pickings was about up to the average, the market ruled very steady, and by the end of June settlements at this port were about piculs 20,000 more than at the same point of the previous season.

"Arrivals of the second crop were disappointing in quality; the liquor at first drew unusually dark, but later arrivals showed an improvement in this respect. The leaf, however, was dry and had the appearance of being roughly prepared. Prices for second crop leaf ruled from yen 4.00 to yen 7.00 per picul higher than the previous season, but later on, pickings in the lower grades more nearly approximated the prices ruling in 1902.

"Total settlements for the year at this port were about piculs 195,000, against piculs 180,000 for the previous year.

"The favorable conditions ruling on American markets in 1902 encouraged the increase of small firing establishments in the interior, and it is estimated that about piculs 55,000 to piculs 60,000 were fired in Shizuoka Ken during this season. This business was divided between about thirty firms of varying importance, and the most of the teas were shipped direct to America, but some found purchasers among the foreign firms of this port or were shipped under their names. In the normal course of things the season under review must have proved anything but encouraging to small native consigners, but the late enquiry consequent on the outbreak of war may have helped out those who were able to wait long enough."

A HINT TO THE HENS.

THE United States department of agriculture has recently been working on the problem of cheapening the price of eggs in Winter, says a Vancouver exchange. The solution depends on inducing the hen to moult early and lay eggs during the Winter instead of taking a rest during the colder months. The experts in the department claim to have discovered a secret that will prove of value to chicken raisers and consumers of eggs. The idea is to force early moulting by judicious feeding, so that the new plumage of the hen will be grown before cold weather begins. The hen must have her new Winter and Spring suit before she will get down to the practical business of laying eggs.

The tests that were made in Rhode Island by the Government experts were conducted about as follows: Along in August chickens were put on a light diet. Food was withheld except in small quantities, which quickly reduced the weight of the fowls and stopped their laying. This starving process was kept up for about a fortnight, and then the hens were fed liberally on mush, beef scraps, corn, wheat and oats, rations that were rich in nitrogenous matter and that promoted the growth of muscle and feathers. In thirty days after the test began the Rhode Island Reds had a complete coat of new feathers and within a week more half of them had begun to lay eggs regularly, while the hens that had not been subjected to this treatment were just beginning to moult and egg production had decreased materially. White Leghorns were a little slower in coming round with their new feathers and fresh eggs, but otherwise the results were the same.

CATALOGUES, BOOKLETS, ETC.

The Grocer is in receipt of an illustrated list of rebuilt printing presses, paper cutters and miscellaneous machinery, issued by the Toronto Type Foundry Company of Toronto, Montreal, Halifax and Winnipeg.

WHITE SWAN PRODUCTS AT WORLD'S FAIR.

The Dominion Government Commissioners who visited Toronto recently in connection with the preparation of the Government's exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair, selected Greig's White Swan Breakfast Food, White Swan Barley Crisps and White Swan Self-Rising Buckwheat Flour as the most representative goods of their class, and ordered quite a large lot to be sent to St. Louis to form part of the Government's exhibit of Canadian products.

RUSSIA A SMALL SOAP USER.

Russia, according to the official census, has 558 soap factories. The consumption of soap in Russia is estimated at 1 1-3 pounds per capita annually, compared to 13 1-4 pounds in the United States. This small consumption of soap is due largely to the high price of raw materials which makes soap an expensive article, while at the same time the import duties limit the use of foreign soaps to a comparatively small amount. Vegetable fats are also subject to considerable import duty, so that Russian soaps are made almost entirely of tallow and grease. The only vegetable oil used in anything like notable quantities is coprah oil.

THE COMING ALMOND CROP.

INFORMATION that has come to hand concerning the coming almond crop is vague and uncertain as yet. Judging by the amount of bloom borne by the trees, however, a most abundant crop might have been expected, there having been a greater amount of flowers than has been seen for many years. These early prospects were soon spoiled, for, owing to the continued drought experienced last Winter a very large proportion of the blossom and young fruit fell from the trees.

Notwithstanding this damage, the crop would still have been equal to that of last year had it not been for a great deal of unusually cold and wet weather experienced in the countries of growth during the last month. According to some reports this has caused considerable damage to the immature fruit, and it is stated that as a result the yield of the new crop will be about twenty to twenty-five per cent. less than that of last season.

Facts about

CEYLON

"The Spicy Isle."

The Island measures 271 miles at its extreme length, and is 137 miles broad in its widest part. It is nearly the size of Ireland. Its population exceeds 3,000,000.

It is in this Island that the best grades of tea yet produced are grown---teas which are steadily displacing China and Japan Teas. These teas are cured black or green.

The grocer who promotes the sale of Ceylon Teas is moving with the tide.

The Most Unique Farm in North America

By C. D. C.

IN a peaceful countryside about thirty-five miles from Montreal, northwestward along the Ottawa River, and within a stone's throw of the Lake of Two Mountains, is situated the most unique farm in North America. Here a tract of land covering some eight hundred acres is owned and cultivated by the famous Trappists, or Reformer Cistercians of Old France.

Getting there is by no means easy. A portion of the way from Montreal, as far as Como, is supplied by the Canadian Pacific Railway. At this point utter barrenness strikes the eye, and an impelling desire to return to the city overtakes you. The latter feeling, however, is soon dissipated. Three or four Indians standing along the platform accost you in broken French and offer to row you across the river to Oka for a consideration. The pull over is a strong one against a heavy tide, but the Indians know how to beat about the wind, and land you most unexpectedly at a well-built wharf. Everything looks fair at Oka the Catholic people have built a magnificent monastery there. The Trappists' farm is fully four miles and a-half further away.

The Trappist Farm.

Directly you set foot upon the ground of this farm, you are met by a man of beautiful countenance, gowned in a long white robe, with black scapulary about his neck. His salutation, "Are you tired, you must have something to eat," at once places the Trappist monks high in your estimation. It appears that one of their vows is to feed the hungry, no matter whom they may be, without money or charge of any kind, and a very excellent vow it is, as all tourists will admit.

The meal with which you are regaled leaves nothing to be desired. No meat is eaten on the farm; to make up for this lack, the table is piled high with honey, maple syrup, eggs, milk, cheese, potatoes, water-cress, other vegetables, and fruit of almost every description. All the foodstuff used is produced within the four corners of the Trappist farm —even the bottle of cider with which you wash down the good things, is made on the premises. The Trappists make an especially fine wine, which they sell but do not drink themselves, as it is part of their vow to be total abstainers.

Two years ago the Trappists' monastery was destroyed by fire, and with it went the wine presses which they had imported from France, hence they have not been able to make wine during the last eighteen months. Nevertheless they sold fifty thousand gallons last year of their excellently prepared wines.

Their Cheese Industry,

however, is the most famous and they name amongst their customers such noted families as the Percivals, the Goulds and the Vanderbilts of New York, as well as hundreds of other wealthy people of the United States. How they make this cheese is a secret. They do not care to tell how they make it, nor how much they make, but simply state that they cannot fill all the orders which are sent to them. To begin with, they culture only the rarest cattle, having on their farm about a hundred choice Jersey and Guernsey stock, and in addition to this they buy large quantities of milk from the surrounding farmers. The cheese is of a cream color, and is harder than the famous French Camembert cheese, but softer than the ordinary Canadian cheese, and has an elasticity which is exceedingly pleasant to the taste. The flavor is strong and rich, copious with nourishment and perfectly delicious in any climate. The limitations of the cheese industry may be easily understood when it is known that they made only 82,000 lbs. last year. There are two other farms of a similar nature, excepting the cheese department, one at Mistassinie, Lake St. John, and the other at Lonsdale, Rhode Island, U.S.. neither of which is nearly so extensive as the one at La Trappe.

There are beautiful streams running through the Trappists' farm, in which many varieties of the finny tribe abound. The fish are sometimes used for food, but this is the nearest approach to meat which is taken by the monks. It is amazing to notice how ducks and birds and animals all over the farm are unafraid of anyone. "You see," said the Abbe, "we never kill anything, and none of the natural creatures are afraid." Lawyers and doctors and paupers and gamblers and drunkards have no place here.

Constitution.

The lay brother is supposed to be one who has not studied as much as the others, and he is supposed to devote his time chiefly to labor of the most severe nature. When it comes to religion, however, all are Catholics, only the lay brothers give less time to spiritual exercises and more to manual labor; both classes share in all the privileges and observe all the rules and austerities of the order. It is the province of the Superior to decide to which class a candidate shall be admitted. Fifteen is the age fixed to the novitiate of the choir monks and twenty to that of the lay brothers. In both classes, however, those who by reason of age, or for other reasons, cannot enter the novitiate, may be received as "Oblates," without giving up all right to return to the world. Candidates for the novitiate spend a short time in the monastery in secular garb. If they persevere and are deemed worthy they receive the holy habit and begin their novitiate.

Besides the regular conditions prescribed by the sacred canons, a candidate must show himself disposed to seek his sanctification by the means adopted in the order. He must also be endowed with good sense, good health, character and reputation, and be free from debt. At the end of two years the novice takes simple vows, thus binding himself for life. At a period of from three to five years later, after additional trials and renewed proof of fervor, the simple vows are exchanged for solemn vows, and solemn profession is made.

Postulants and novices are expected to compensate the community for their maintenance, during the period in which they remain free to leave the monastery, but the Superior may make certain concessions to those who earnestly desire to enter the religious state but are not able to comply with this condition. Just imagine, for instance, a classical scholar, a master of seven or eight languages, conversant with all the histories of Europe and other nations, educated to a degree almost finer than any of our universities could give him, laboring with his hands like the commonest hod-carrier on the street! This is what may be seen at the Trappist farm. These self-sacrificing men toil with picks and shovels in the hot sun, as a part of their duty to the world. The objects of their order are to sanctify the members by means of retirement from the world, by prayer, mortification, silence and labor; to convert sinners by the force and example of a life of penance; to draw upon the Church and her children an abundance of Heaven's graces. It is a peculiar fact that the order is a cloistered one, and absolutely beyond the control of the Archbishop. The order is approved by the Church, but the Abbot-General resides in Rome.

History of the Trappists.

It was away back in 1098 that the order was founded by St. Robert of Molesmes, a Benedictine monk, who in that year established at Citeaux a new monastery wherein the rule of St. Benedict was to find stricter observance. Fifteen years later St. Bernard entered the novitiate at Citeaux, and his piety and genius gave such an impetus to the nascent order that he is looked upon as its second founder and greatest glory. Lapse of time brought loss of fervor and laxity in the observance of rule. One of the leading reformers of the order was Armand Jean de Rance, Abbot of La Trappe. The Trappists have been at their farm near Montreal since 1881. It was only in 1892, however, that his Holiness Leo. XIII. gave his sanction to the new constitution, reaffirming the rigors of the primitive rule, but admitting certain modifications made necessary by changes in custom and temperament.

Nearly all the monks are Frenchmen and French is the chief language spoken, very few being sufficiently conversant with English to speak it well. The present secretary and treasurer of the farm is a great master of languages and can converse freely in almost any tongue. Many of the monks are artists and musicians, but their long, graceful hands have become calloused with toil. Yet they are cheerful, healthy and happy.

Scientific Farming.

Over 1,500 fruit trees are carefully pruned and nurtured. Grape vines yield abundant quantities of the choicest grapes grown in the Province of Quebec. The fruits include peaches, pears and many other fruits difficult to culture in the northern zone. Nothing seems too hard for these devoted monks to undertake. Sacrifices seem to make them stronger, and the cultivation of the soil is done on the strictest lines of agricultural science; so much so, that they have students at a small college of agriculture, where instruction is given after the fashion of the Trappist fathers. The students of the agricultural college are paid for by the Government, and young men have a very happy life while they are learning farming, and generally gain in weight on the excellent food and fresh air available. Special boarders are taken, men only, during the summer months, and it is an ideal resort for nerve-racked city folk, who want to tone up the system. No one is asked any questions, absolute privacy is permitted, no quarreling or harangues disturb the quietness of this Utopian spot, and Thomas Moore would no doubt have been glad to have called there. The Trappists have, moreover, one of the finest henneries in Canada, in which run-ways and feeding rooms are built on the latest scientific lines. Their apiary is another interesting department, and honey of the finest quality can be obtained on the farm.

Routine of Life.

From September 14 until Easter Day the monks live on one meal a day. During the Summer they have two meals a day, and in addition, partake of light refreshment during the morning, known in monastic parlance as "mixtum." It must be remembered, however, that the Superior exercises very judicious paternal care in granting extra nourishment to those whose health may require it.

A new monastery is being erected now, and while special masons have to be employed to do the actual labor of the stone work, all the labor of carrying material up the scaffold or to the premises is done by the monks themselves. They also have a small saw-mill, where they cut up large quantities of wood and lumber, and a blacksmith's shop where they repair their own vehicles and shoe their own horses. The cheese factory is the largest building on the farm, and no one is permitted to enter the cheese-making department, where the secret process is carried on. They have their own postoffice, which is conducted by the monks. In fact, there is a distinctive life and character, together with memories and traditions about the place, all of which combine to give a tone of romance and interest difficult to describe. Another interesting fact about some of these monks is that while celibacy is a rigid law of the order, they have among them certain members who have at one time been married. What great terror may have overtaken these men, no one knows but themselves. At any rate, they have now turned their backs upon the world, and as good reputation is absolutely a part of the original vow, no imputation could be cast upon any of the monks' characters.

Community is Law.

The Trappist monk is never alone. He is with his brethren at work and at prayer, when he dines and when he sleeps. All the strength of unity and good example combine to beautify his life, and patience and fraternal charity are the fruits of his constant efforts. If only Dickens had seen these monks he could have written some wondrous stories about them. One can imagine how he would have said regarding some of their faces, "that he would have liked to see them at Christmas time."

The labor of the Cistercian never ceases. He finds in fatigues and humiliations of toil a salutary mortification which he believes is necessary for his religious life. No labor is too trying or too humble. When indoors he is busy with household occupations, when outdoors he devotes himself to the care of flocks and herds, the planting of grains and the gathering of the harvest. The choir monks spend about four hours every day at work, while the lay monks employ the whole day. In Summer an hour is allowed for rest at midday; in Winter this rest is not permitted, but to make up for it, they retire one hour earlier. Seven hours are allowed for sleep. In the morning half an hour is devoted to mental prayer, and a quarter of an hour each evening. During hours unoccupied by the office and by manual labor, the choir monk devotes himself to the study of the Holy Scriptures, giving on an average four hours a day to his spiritual and intellectual improvement. Greater freedom in this matter is allowed to those whom the Superior destines for advancement to the holy priesthood.

Nearly all the products of the Trappist farm are shipped by steamer from Oka, and pass through Montreal en route to the various destinations in the United States and Europe. It is expected that the cheese industry will continue to grow, and more butter will no doubt be made, although up to the present butter-making on a large scale has not been attempted.

Fresh and Cured Fish

The Most Novel Codfishery.

ON Saturday last Black Bros. & Co.'s fleet sailed for the Canadian Labrador loaded with men and supplies for the season's operations. This company has a lease of Great Macatina Island, in the Straits of Belle Isle, and here they conduct one of the most novel codfisheries in the world. The fish are taken in traps, of which the company have eight in operation. These traps vary somewhat, but a simple one is described as follows: It is of netting some sixty feet square with a bottom of the same material, with a door or opening on the land side. It is held in place by anchors, and is kept afloat by casks, buoys and corks. A leader or fence of finer netting some 240 feet in length stretches from the trap to the shore—the codfish school here in pursuit of the caplin. The latter, coming in contact with the leader, enter the trap, closely pursued by the codfish, from which, however, the latter, on account of the size of the mesh, are unable to escape. The caplin leave about the second week in June, and for the balance of the season the codfish are taken by hand-lining. This business was established about ten years ago by the late Capt. Howard, of gatling gun fame, and was acquired last season by Black Bros. & Co. of this city.

Fishermen Scarce in Nova Scotia.

The development of Nova Scotia industries is drawing from the "sea force" a number of men who can get less hazardous and more remunerative work ashore. Accordingly, a petition was sent recently to the Canadian Government by a number of fishing operators, urging that 500 Scotch fishermen be imported to man the Nova Scotia fleet.

The Government has not yet taken action, believing that the men would return to work owing to the high wages paid this season. They, however, have not done so. It is now too late to get foreign crews this season, but if the exodus continues a colony of fishermen will be brought from Scotland next year to check the decadence of the bank fishery, which requires very large crews for profitable prosecution.

The same condition prevails in Newfoundland, where fewer men than ever will be engaged in codfishing this season. Hundreds have abandoned fishing for easier work ashore, and wages paid are larger than ever. The catch of bank cod by the Nova Scotia fleet of last year was 135,000 quintals, a decline of 105,000 quintals from the average.

Salmon Prospects Poor.

British Columbia cannerymen are looking forward to a short pack this season. Preparations for a third pack are all that are being made. Many of the largest establishments in the province are likely to be completely closed down during the season, when in other years they would be busiest. The B. C. Packers' Association, it is understood, will abandon trap fishing on the American side for the year, and while experiments will be made along the southwestern coast of this island in the way of there testing this method of catching fish, there will not be the amount of preparation as might have been witnessed under favorable circumstances.

Ridiculous Duty on Fish Brine.

Fish dealers and importers from New York, Gloucester and Boston continue to discuss the objectionable duty on brine, which is being assessed under a recent ruling of the general board of appraisers in the United States. Owing to additional pressure being brought to bear upon the board of appraisers it is expected that the decision will be reversed in the near future.

Boneless Codfish.

Jno. McLean & Sons, Mahone Bay, N.S., are organizing a company for the manufacture and sale of boneless codfish. A large factory will be built shortly at Mahone and operations undertaken on an extensive scale. Their especial care will be taken up with Markland Brand, and it is understood this industry will be started by several firms along the Atlantic coast of Nova Scotia.

Butter Package and Export.

THE following letter has been received by The Grocer on the subject of butter package and export: Mr. Editor: In this week's issue of The Grocer I notice a few remarks on butter package for export to Great Britain. Some twenty-five years ago the father of the writer exported choice dairy butter packed in 28-lb. tubs to Hull, England, on which he realized 20 and 24c per lb. This is the way he did it: He got a cooper to make special tubs; these he distributed among the very best farmers or butter makers in the neighborhood. As soon as he got a certain number of tubs together he shipped direct to England. The price paid the farmer was 12 to 15c per lb. Why cannot the same be done to-day? I think it can, provided dealers go about it in a proper manner and ship only to responsible houses. NOW AND THEN.

Cheese Making in 1904.

Reports from the cheese making instructors who have been touring the Province of Ontario show that owing to the lateness of the present season the amount of cheese made during the first part of May does not compare with that made during the same period last year. Cheese making is well under way, and better results may be expected from now on. Many of the factories have profited from suggestions given last year, and are putting in modern machinery, better drainage, etc. The greatest difficulty experienced has been in securing labor.

Going to England.

Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, and Prof. G. E. Day, farm superintendent at the Ontario Agricultural College, sail on June 10 for England. One of the objects of their visit to the Old Country is the purchase of thoroughbred stock for the college farm. They will probably extend their trip to Denmark in order to investigate the bacon industry, which, it has been stated, threatens to become a keen competitor of Canada in the British markets.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision market last week was rather dull, not from any definite cause, merely as an off week in the routine of ups and downs. There are no variations of prices, although lard is a trifle steadier at the prices quoted. Fresh meats have been moving in fair volume. We quote this week:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Roll bacon, per lb	0 09½	0 10
Small hams, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Medium hams, per lb	....	0 12½
Large hams, per lb	0 11	0 11½
Shoulder hams, per lb	0 09	0 09½
Backs, per lb	0 13½	0 14
Heavy mess pork, per bbl	16 50	17 00

" common	6 00	6 50
Mutton	7 00	9 00
Lamb	10 50	11 50
Veal	6 00	8 50

Butter—There is no diminution in the quantity of butter being offered to the wholesale houses. Prices for this week have dropped off a shade as a result. It is reported that eastern creameries are receiving almost a cent more for their products than last week, but in Toronto there is no sign of improvement in tubs, and a week or two will see the last of large dairy rolls. Prints are in fair demand at 12 to 14c. Our quotations are:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 16½
Dairy rolls, large	0 11	0 13
" in tubs	0 11	0 13

Cheese—The condition of the cheese market is far more satisfactory this week. The May cheese is all bought up and at prices 1 1-2c higher than two weks ago, when board prices were 6 3-4c. On Saturday these went up to 8 1-16c and 8 1-4c. Holders of old cheese may be responsible for this stiffening of prices, in buying up all the new and holding it. There is not very much of the new offered, and the operation would not be very difficult. The result is that old cheese is slightly advanced and new is 1-2c higher. Prices are:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large, old	0 09½	0 10
" new fodder	0 08½	0 08½
" twins	0 08½	0 09

Montreal and Quebec.

Provisions—Briskness has been noted in the provision market and the receipts have increased considerably, there being in one day 191 barrels of pork, 395 packages of lard, 572 packages of tinned meat and 1,102 boxes of ham and bacon. From abroad it has been reported that Canadian bacon is advancing. In spite of this fact the market for hogs locally is much easier. The sales of good solid stock were made at $5.35 a hundred. The fresh killed abattoir dressed stock brought the same price as last week of $7.25 to $7.50. Other lines continued fair and active. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00

Butter—Quietness still rules in the butter market. In country points full prices are being paid, and an advance of 1 1-4 to 2c per lb. has been paid in the Townships since last week's quotation. This, of course, has been caused by the appearance of full grass creamery butter at 17c. This, however, is not fully established locally, and it is only reported that the basis ruling is from 16 3-4c up. There is no demand for butter from abroad and no shipments are going forward.

Cheese—Cheese buyers seem to be in a mild sort of panic, for they readily concede higher prices, even though no demand is in sight for orders. Country cost to-day would indicate a price of about 8 1-2c for Ontarios and for the Townships 8 1-4c and about 8c for eastern, provided they are to be let out without a loss. There has been a decrease in the make for the past week of nearly 50 per cent. and this is given as a sensible and strong reason for the strengthening of the market. Conditions in the Old Country seem to be about the same as last week. The cheese arriving here seems to be of better quality and prices are likely to advance.

CHEESE EXPORTS.

Notwithstanding the dullness of the market in cheese generally, the exports for the past week have increased, and some new reasons have been given for the aggravated depression of the British cheese market. One cause is the remarkable increase in the shipments of American cheese, which sold in the Old Country market at exceedingly low prices. A great many of the cheese sold from the United States were small in size, which some of the buyers over there prefer to the large ones. The high prices which had prevailed in the last two years stimulated the commercial instincts of the American makers to get after that trade. The production, therefore, has been accelerated beyond the absorbing capacity of consumption, or in other words, the glut of supplies has demoralized the market. This, however, will soon be cleared, as consumption in Great Britain will set in, with increased force very shortly, and this, coupled with the falling off of manufacture in Canada, will probably Provisions—Market is dull. Pork and beef have a very light sale. In pure lard prices are rather lower, having receded somewhat from the rather higher prices quoted. The lower prices earlier led at the time to quite large buying. Sales are not large, hams and rolls are unchanged. In fresh beef even prices are quoted. Dealers have received last shipment of western dressed beef. During the Summer stock will be brought down alive. Veal is still plentiful. Lamb is not yet quoted by the pound. Pork finds little sale.

ORANGE CULTURE.

UNDER the title, "Orange Culture in California," a graphically illustrated account of this important industry is contributed to The Booklovers' Magazine for June. After noting the three centres of orange cultivation in the United States—Florida, Louisiana and California—the writer says: "In no country of the world has the cultivation of the orange developed more rapidly or more successfully than in Sunny California, the land of strange contradictions—of eternal snows on its lofty mountain peaks, of endless Summer in its sheltered valleys. Nearly 100,000 acres are devoted to orange culture; and with Nature at her best, and rarely giving less than 300 sunny days to every year, the groves seldom fail to yield an abundant crop."

The article deals with the growth of the trees from seed, and details the subsequent planting out. "Ordinarily, the orange tree, a beautiful evergreen, reaches a height of from 25 to 30 feet. It is of remarkably graceful proportions, the trunk being straight and the branches symmetrical. The blossoms are of a delicate white color and deliciously fragrant, giving sweet promise of the luscious fruitage concealed in their hidden depths."

The orange tree is long lived, remarkably prolific and very uniform in its bearing. "Orange groves in full bearing frequently yield handsome returns on the investments made. A crop of five acres recently sold for $1,575 on the trees. Some orchards yield as much as $1,800 per acre. Ordinarily, a carefully cultivated orchard of ten acres ought to yield a sure annual profit of from $1,200 to $2,000. In full bearing the average orchard yields about $150 per acre. Good orange land may be bought from $50 to $150 per acre. Groves, including all the water rights and privileges, have sold as high as $2,500 per acre. About $50,000,000 capital is invested in California groves. Records of the State's product show that the shipments in 1888 were less than one million boxes; in 1889 they had reached four and one-third; in 1902, a little more than eight, and in 1903 eleven and a half million boxes.

GRAIN INSPECTION BILL.

THE new Grain Inspection Bill which was introduced in Ottawa on May 16 by Sir Richard Cartwright has already aroused an undercurrent of interest in trade circles, and in view of its possible far-reaching results we may expect to hear its pros and cons thoroughly discussed by Canadian grain dealers, flour millers and grain growers during the next few weeks.

The principal feature of the new bill is that it hands over the responsibility of selecting standards for the inspection of Canadian grain to inspectors appointed by the Government. Heretofore this work has been done by the Grain Standards Board. The board will still exist, although its duties are restricted to the preparation of commercial grades which, as a matter of fact, are fixed at rather long and irregular intervals.

Undoubtedly the promoters of the bill have had in view the unification and improvement in the standard of Canadian grain. If Canada is ever to become the "Granary of the British Empire" she must preserve inviolate the high reputation which Canadian grain has won in the markets of Great Britain. A Canadian grain certificate must be on a par with Dominion of Canada legal tender, and more, since a one dollar bill is only redeemable in gold to the value of one dollar, while a grain certificate may make a difference of hundreds of dollars in a shipment of grain. Last year the Province of Ontario alone raised one hundred and ten million bushels of oats. The total production of wheat in Canada during the same year is estimated at 85,000,000 bushels. How necessary that every bushel exported should turn out exactly as represented by certificate. The immediate effect of a single shipment improperly graded might be inconsiderable, but dissatisfaction is sure to spread and Canada cannot afford the risk.

Up to the present no complaint has been heard against the work done by the Grain Standards Board. Its personnel has invariably been made up of men thoroughly informed on all branches of the grain business. When trouble has arisen it has usually been due to negligence on the part of grain inspectors, who allow, for instance, Manitoba wheat No. 2 northern to grade as No. 1 northern, although not having the requisite qualities to justify calling it the latter grade, or No. 3 Ontario oats to grade as No. 2 in the same way.

Grain men say Peter is being robbed to pay Paul. Instead of the present situation with respect to the grading of grain being bettered, grain inspectors, on whom the burden of the blame rests for irregularities in the past, are to have their administrative powers increased. It is a question whether any but grain experts are in a position to give final judgment in the matter of grain inspection. Others may be familiar with the fundamental requirements of the grain trade; it takes, however, more than a dilettante to know whether a certain grade is suited to the English trade, or whether a sample of barley has the necessary characteristes to make the best malt. Surely a man who has learned the grain trade from the bottom up is better able to set standards which will suit the requirements of the grain trade, and at the same time be in accordance with the Grain Act, than the average Government appointee, whose only reason for official existence is often "Government pull," even allowing that the latter knows somewhat about grain, else he could not pass the Government examination for grain inspector. There is perhaps no department of the public service of Canada which warrants such close scrutiny as that of grain inspection, and it is because this is realized by many of the largest grain interests in the country that vigorous protests are being raised against the new bill. After its second reading the proposed measure will be referred to a special committee empowered to hear complaints, and there is every reason to believe that such will be vigorous. Owing to the lobby system, however, prevailing to such a marked extent in Ottawa, there is no telling whether these protests will avail anything unless a strong fight is made by millers, farmers and grain dealers throughout the country.

TRAVELERS' HOLIDAYS.

IT is a pleasure to note that at the recent meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild a uniform holiday of two weeks for the knights of the grip, to be taken in August, was among the recommendations passed. This is something that The Grocer has regularly advocated for some years, and it is a satisfaction to know that the principle of "two weeks off all round" has the endorsation of such an influential body as the Ontario Grocers' Guild. It is to be hoped that the Quebec wholesale trade will follow suit, and that it may be arranged so that the Ontario and Quebec travelers will enjoy their holidays at the same time, each secure from any fear of a rival butting in.

The travelers are a fine body of men and no class better deserve a holiday or can put it to better use.

A SERIOUS IMPERFECTION.

MAYORS and city councils are time and again accused of laxity in the discharge of their duties and indifference to the interests of their respective municipalities. These charges are usually so well founded that the public has come to look on municipal councils as pretty poor business concerns. Oftentimes they advise their councils to imitate the boards of trade and follow the footsteps of such progressive institutions as the Manufacturers' Association.

Mayor Urquhart of Toronto has reversed all this. He has given an example of progressiveness that is truly welcome in this age of degenerate municipal officials, and he has not only shown his own value, but has brought both the Toronto Board of Trade and the Toronto branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association into an unenviable light.

A short time ago Mayor Urquhart informed the secretary of the Toronto branch of the Manufacturers' Association and Mr. J. F. Ellis, president of the Toronto Board of Trade, that a Mexican trade commissioner would shortly be in Ottawa to negotiate with the Dominion Government for Atlantic and Pacific steamship services between Mexico and Canada. Mayor Urquhart suggested that the commissioner be invited to Toronto. Receiving no response, he offered to extend the city's hospitality to the commissioner. Then he was calmly informed that the manufacturers were too busy to consider the question.

This incident certainly reflects on the manufacturers. Doubtless they are busy, but it does not follow that their organization should thereby be incapacitated from dealing with such a proposition. The same thing is true of the Board of Trade.

We do not wish to minimize the worth of either organization or the ability of their respective secretaries, but it seems to us that the day has come when the work of both bodies should be placed on a higher plane. The day of the clerical secretary is over. Modern conditions demand an experienced executive head, who shall be unhampered by technicalities and shall have a close grasp of the great trade questions of the day.

Surely the time has come when such an organization as the Manufacturers' Association and the leading boards of trade, representing tens of millions of capital, should have their interests placed in the hands of as highly paid officials as the manager of any great banking institution with only a tithe of the capital. A $20,000 a year aggressive secretary or manager for the Montreal, Toronto or Winnipeg Boards of Trade could inaugurate broad plans for the development of local and Canadian trade that would make him worth his salary many times over.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR BONUSES.

ONTARIO towns and cities seem to have gone crazy on the bonus question, with the result that no factory will to-day locate in any town unless it is assured of a huge bonus. Naturally, towns desirous of becoming industrial centres have had to seriously impoverish themselves. Moreover, when once they have started the bonus evil they are unable to draw back. Tax exemptions, additional bonuses, free water, free dock facilities are added to the list, and the question arises, "Is the game worth the candle?"

Economists and thoughtful men tell us that the farmer is the backbone of the country. This is readily proved. Man's great and lasting need is food. He can get on without almost anything except the food he eats. All else, all the great fabric of society, depends primarily on the abundance of the food supply, and because it is to the farmer that man looks for his food, therefore it is true that the farmer is the backbone of the country.

This importance of the farmer seems to be forgotten by these would-be industrial centres. They imagine that their greatness will depend primarily on the number and strength of the industries they can attract to their confines. Of very few towns is this true.

If a municipality is bound to spend money to promote its growth and importance, we would suggest that, instead of applying it all to bonusing industries which are at best but doubtful propositions, it would spend a part or even all of it in helping the farmers. Better roads, instruction in agriculture, better market facilities, inducements to improve the standard of products, are all means to this end. In how few towns are these objects sought after! And yet, how extremely beneficial they would be to all concerned.

If a town is dissatisfied even with this expenditure of its superfluous cash, there is another channel which might be utilized which would ensure quite as certain results as if the money were applied to bonusing factories. This is the attraction of tourist traffic. This work can be accomplished by the distribution of tourist literature and by beautifying the streets and parks of the town, and by taking good care of the tourists when they arrive. The merchant stands to benefit by both these expenditures of the town's cash. The higher the standard of living of the farmers, the more cash to their credit and the better facilities for reaching market, on the one hand, will be of direct advantage to the proprietor of a store. On the other hand, the presence of free-handed tourists will be decidedly beneficial during the Summer months, and will serve to keep business alive during an otherwise stagnant season.

Mr. Creelman, the very clever agriculturist, stated some time ago that the Canadian farmers could double their present incomes on their present farms with the same amount of labor if they could be taught how. Many of them are improving. Such an improvement would mean that every customer of to-day would spend just double what he does now in purchases from our readers.

The Heritage of Canada and Canadian Cities*

THIS is the keynote of the initial address delivered by G. B. Ryan, the new president of the Guelph, Ont., Board of Trade, at its opening meeting for the year 1904-5, held on Tuesday of last week. The Grocer has the honor of publishing in this week's issue an outlined report of Mr. Ryan's speech, which reads as follows :

"I look upon the Board of Trade of any city in point of importance as a very close second to the City Council; it is generally composed of the cream of the business men, a body of men who are responsible to a great extent for the success or failure of the place.

"The City of Guelph possibly never displayed more real life than at the present time. Evidences of prosperity are to be seen everywhere, but the place we will hold among the cities of Canada ten years hence will very much depend upon the class of business men who will handle her business affairs between now and then. If they are live, up-to-date, progressive, and at the same time cautious, we will hold a very important place among the Canadian cities.

"I have great faith in this country of ours; there is without doubt a great future before her. Canada is now on the up-grade as never before; she is going ahead with leaps and bounds, at a pace little dreamed of by the most sanguine of us a few years ago. We have only within the last few years become conscious of our strength. People from different parts of the world are just finding out our rich resources, and are fast pouring into our country. I think I am safe in saying that no other country in the world is prospering in proportion to her population as we are to-day. Only a few years ago, as you know, thousands of our young men were leaving Canada every year for the United States. Five years ago we succeeded in inducing 712 of our American cousins to make their homes in Canada; last year no less than 49,000 cast in their lot with us, mostly going to our northwest. Three years ago only 42,500 from all parts of the world located in the Dominion; last year 128,900 came to Canada, and it is estimated that in the last five years from the United States alone settlers' effects to the value of $19,000,000 and $25,000,000 in cash came into this country, and from present indications this year will far outstrip the last. I hardly think the most optimistic of us realize what the growth of this country will be in the next few years. When you remember that in the last eight years our railway earnings, the total amount in our banks, and the revenue of the Government have doubled, may we not ask ourselves what this development may be in the next ten years ? Has it dawned on us what this great prosperity may mean to Guelph ? This part of Canada, for at least many years to some, will be the great machine shop for the northwest. As hundreds of thousands of people locate there, our present factories will have to be enlarged and re-enlarged and many more built, and one of the great questions for Guelph to settle is : Are we going to get our share of this great prosperity, or will we stand idly by, with our arms comfortably folded, while the trade drifts to other places? This certainly is one of the questions the Board of Trade should keep well to the front.

RETURNED
JUL 20 1904

G. B. Ryan, new President of the Guelph, Ont., Board of Trade.

"There are two ways this city can be made grow, first, by the enlarging of our present factories and establishing others, and every reasonable inducement should be offered manufacturers to locate here, such as free sites, fixed rate of assessment for a time, and possibly we might go as far as to make loans where well secured, but I am almost persuaded that the day for bonus giving has gone by. Second, by making it very easy for people to come from a greater distance than they do now to do their business in Guelph. This can be done by tapping the outlying districts with electric roads. Fifteen years from to-day electric roads will be running in many places little thought of by us now. Will they come our way, will they be bringing business into Guelph, or will we find ourselves sidetracked, and the territory that naturally belongs to Guelph cut off by roads carrying trade to other places ? This certainly will very much depend upon whether the men that are handling the business affairs of Guelph are to be broad gauge or narrow gauge men. If they are to be the latter, men who cannot see past 'the now,' men who never make a move until they see a dead sure thing, men who lay no plans for the future, men who are prepared to mount every progressive train that may leave the city and screw on the brakes for all they are worth, then we may expect, when people of other cities are walking on their paved streets, to find the mud still sticking to our shoes. I would much prefer taking my chances in a poorly situated town or city in the hands of good live business men, than in a well situated place controlled by men who allowed the moss to grow on their boots; to a very large extent it's the men that make the place. If we expect strangers to come to our city we must let them know we have something special to offer, we must make our front door swing open easily, we must be prepared to offer all that any other city of our size can offer for at least the same money, or, if possible, more for the same. Our city must be well spoken of, it must be known as a clean, healthy and pretty place, our educational system must be the very best, and at the same time our taxes must be in proportion to what we have to offer."

In conclusion, Mr. Ryan said it was a great pleasure to be able to report that Guelph manufacturers were in such a flourishing condition at the present time that many of them had found it necessary to enlarge their present buildings in order to keep pace with the increased business offering, and as well that other factories are being built.

J. Frank Crowe & Co. have now their permanent address at Wm. Muir & Sons' old stand, Lower Water street, Halifax, N.S.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, May 26, 1904.

Groceries.

TRADE in groceries has shown marked signs of improvement during the week under review. Trade in all lines is reported as satisfactory and collections are improving. Farmers are now through with their seeding and have more leisure to lay in supplies of groceries. Even if the actual demand is not increased materially the moral effect on the retailer of a brighter market is always good. He is more susceptible to the influences of the grocery traveler than when trade is slack. Canned goods are still moving freely, particularly canned fruit, and a scarcity of corn and peas is reported. The sugar situation is phenomenally strong, prices having advanced 10c per 100 lbs. since last quotations. Syrups and molasses show an easier tendency. Teas are in good demand at firm prices, with low grade teas tending high on account of the recent English budget, and vice versa with respect to high-grade teas. The tone of the coffee market is steady with Rios in better demand. Rice shows an upward tendency, as well as peppers.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market continues brisk, with demand for canned fruits noticably increasing. Canned meats have met with good demand during the week under review. Canned corn is exceedingly scarce and high, some sales having been made during the week as high as $1.35. Peas are also scarce. Peaches are firmer. Lobsters continue scarce and firm in price. Sardines are also firm. We quote California ripe olives for the first time this week. Our quotations are as follows :

SUGAR

The market has more than maintained the strength indicated in recent advices and we have this week to record two advances in Canadian refined sugars, following similar upward movements in New York. On Thursday last, May 19, just after we went to press, the market advanced 5c, and we have to record a further similar advance effective on the morning of the 25th inst. Great firmness prevails and all indications are favorable to continued strength. New York authorities persistently recommend jobbers to make every effort to carry a full line of stock. The margin between raw and refined in the United States is now only about 80c per 100 lbs., so that even should the price of raws now remain stationary there appears to be no reason why refined should not appreciate further. Local prices have advanced fully ½c per lb. from lowest prices recorded this year, namely, from $3.95 to $4.45, basis f. o. b. Montreal for Montreal granulated. For about the same period quotations for centrifugal sugars have advanced fully 65c per hundred lbs.

Raws during the week under review have made further advances of from 1-16 to ⅛c, and we hear of three sales of Cubans for late May or early June shipment, basis 96, at 2⅝c c. and f. Holders now talk of 2⅝c for basis 95, and indications are that this price will materialize, which will mean a full duty-paid price of 4c, thus verifying predictions which have been made for some time. Europe has advanced 3¾d per cwt. for the week, 88 per cent. going to 9s 7½d basis f. o. b. Hamburg for May-June shipment, equal to $4.04 for 96 test centrifugals. There are rumors of purchases of beet by American refiners on basis of 10s c. and f. New York, but as yet these are unconfirmed. We hear, however, of sales to New Orleans refiners at 9s 9d c. and f., which is equal to parity of $3.97 for 96 test centrifugals duty paid.

For the first time in several weeks receipts at Atlantic ports were less than meltings, thus reducing stocks for the week by nearly 12,000 tons. Receipts were 27,404 tons, meltings 39,000 tons, and total stock in all hands 190,392 tons, or 69,000 tons less than for the corresponding week last year. Eleven more central factories ceased operations in Cuba during the week, the total number working at latest advices being 118. Stock in U. S. and Cuba together were 418,392 tons, a reduction of over 10,000 tons for the week, and a decrease of 206,832 tons as compared with the same period of 1903. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,021,392 tons, or 206,971 tons less than for the same time last year. It will be observed that the deficiency in stocks is represented almost entirely by U. S. and Cuban figures, European stocks being about on a par with last year. There has, however, been considerable increase in European consumption which has fully offset the large production last year. For six months from September to March, or say since the bounties were removed, the consumption in Europe has increased 451,343 tons, or about 24 per cent. These figures are from the Journal des Fabricants de Suite, and cover France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Belgium, Holland, and the United Kingdom. The consumption in the United Kingdom shows a small falling off for the same period, while that of the others has greatly increased, and it is estimated that by Sept. 1 next the world's consumption will have increased fully 1,000,000 tons, which will hardly be offset by the increased production of cane sugar. Present indications are unfavorable to a full realization of Cuban estimates, and owing to excessive heavy rains which have set in early this year it now appears doubtful if the crop will exceed if anything that of last year, which was 998,878 tons. Since January 1 the consumption of sugar through U. S. four ports has increased by nearly 100,000 tons over corresponding period last year, while receipts for the same period show only slightly over the same increase.

It is estimated that the available supply of Cubans at present remaining unsold for U. S. refiners will not exceed 100,000 tons, which on the present basis of meltings would be about three weeks' supply, and it will thus be necessary for American refiners to provide for requirements from Europe and other sources, on which they will have to pay full duty. The latter is certainly one of the strongest features of the situation.

We revise quotations for local refined, showing an advance of 10c per 100 lbs. over last week's figures.

Special cables from Cuba dated May 24 advise that harvesting is at a standstill, except at ten centrals, in consequence of the heavy rains throughout the island, and that estimates of the sugar crop have been reduced to 1,050,000 tons. The present conditions are extraordinary, as there were 118 centrals grinding last week, while at this time last year there were 90, and the year before 23. In October last the estimate of the present Cuban crop was 1,130,000 tons, based upon normal weather conditions. Since then no change has been made in the estimates, as it was thought better to wait for positive indications from Cuba, which have now come to hand. The visible production to date is but little over 900,000 tons, and with only ten centrals grinding it is not probable that more than 100,000 tons can be produced during the balance of the campaign, especially since the weather is so unfavorable. The estimate of the Cuban crop will probably be reduced to 1,000,000 tons.

We have to note a further increase in the strength of the raw market. The news received from Cuba that all the sugar factories with the exception of ten have been obliged to close, and the reduction in crop estimates, have caused much interest and excitement in the trade. It is now evident that refiners must import beet largely from Europe before October 1, as there does not appear to be sufficient cane available before that date. There are unconfirmed rumors of sales of Cuba centrifugals, for shipment at 2.625c c. and f. basis 95 test, and of non-privileged centrifugals, to arrive, at 2.31c c. and f. basis 96 test, each of which would be equal to 4c duty paid for 96 test. Indications are that refiners will soon pay these prices if they have not already done so. Offerings are light, including a cargo afloat at 2.625c, c. and f. for 96 test.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market in syrups and molasses is slightly easier than last week. Plenty of West Indian, Barbadoes and Porto Rico molasses is on the way, and the majority of wholesalers now have sufficient on hand to meet the demands of local trade. Stocks of New Orleans are getting low; supplies coming in are small, and will continue so in degree until the test trouble is settled. It is thought that the next shipment of molasses from New Orleans will be higher in price. Our local dealer suggests the possibility of a cheaper grade being brought on the market, which will just pass the test. It must be remembered that the Ontario market in molasses is of secondary importance to that of Quebec, where the relative consumption is much greater. We quote the following prices:

TEAS.

The feature of the tea market is the high tendency in low-grade teas and the lo wtendency in high-grade teas. Business in spot has improved considerably during the week under review. Owing to the increased demand for tea for price in England since the recent budget, one Toronto firm shipped 135 packages of tea back to England last week, where they can realize a much more profitable figure than in Canada. The general demand for tea is good. Any actual depreciation in value of higher grade teas on account of the English duty is so far distant, and the actual position so strong, that buyers are endeavoring to cover their wants for the next four or five months.

Latest cables from Yokohama say the Japan market is weak, except for choice grades, supply increasing good crop quality. A previous cable said, "expect low prices for Canada." Reports from London dated May 6-12, say the sales of Indians opened with good demand at fully previous rates; as they progressed there was a little irregularity, but differences in appearance or cup accounted for any quotable alteration in prices. There was a marked absence of anything approaching really fine quality in offerings and ordinary descriptions up to 7d per lb. continued in demand at about the previous week's rates. Medium to fine showed some irregularity, and as many of the arrivals possessed less attractive cup, quotations were lowered accordingly. This was particularly noticeable in the case of broken pekoes between 8 and 10d per lb., and such when met sold at comparatively full value.

A large number of estates have sold their final invoices and supplies in first hands must be getting very limited. Deliveries are on a satisfactory scale, and indicate smallness of duty paid stock held by the trade.

In Ceylons good competition and a fairly steady market were reported. Commonly, best invoices when quality was maintained, sold fully firm. Advices from Ceylon speak of an early closing of the late heavy flush, in which case the output for the month may turn out under what was expected, while at the same time the quality should improve. Javas passed with steady tone. Our quotations are as follows:

COFFEES.

A steadier tone is noticeable in Rios during the week and a better demand is reported. Prices for weeks have fluctuated 1-4c up and down the scale in New York at the will of speculators, having been quoted anywhere from 7 1-4c to 7 3-4c; this means the average price in Canada during the past two months has averaged 8c. New York advices say the coffee market is dull and quiet. Receipts at Rio de Janeiro, from July 1, 1903, to May 21, 1904, were 3,873,000 bags, as against 3,693,000 bags for the same time last year. Receipts at Santos for the corresponding periods were 6,096,000 and 7,786,000 bags. Our quotations are as follows:

EGGS.

During the past week almost as large quantities of eggs were received as during the same week last year. The increase in receipts was sudden and marked. It is difficult to dislodge a price once it has become firmly established, else lower quotations would rule immediately. At present prices, picklers are running a risk in every dozen they buy. Two weeks will be sure to see a much lower level ruling. Our quotations are as follows:

Eggs, new laid, per doz	0 15

APPLES.

The apple market continues fair and steady at quotation prices. It is unusual to expect a lively market in evaporated apples where green stuff is so plentiful as it is in the local market. We quote the following prices:

Fish.

The fish market continues to improve from week to week, with supplies from the Great Lakes increasing daily. Whitefish are 3c easier, haddock 1c easier, and lake trout are quoted this week at 9c. Pike are now on the market and are selling at 5c. Our quotations are as follows:

Green Fruits.

The Spring and Summer fruit season is beginning to open out now, and shipments of imported goods are continually increasing. Oranges are still in good demand, but scare and decidedly firmer in price, California navels having advanced 50c at the coast. Valencas are scarce and firmer and Sorrentos are now on the market; the latter arrived with the first ship cargo of the Montreal Spring shipment, which totaled some 35,000 boxes of oranges. Pines and bananas continue firm and in good demand. Florida tomatoes are scarce and firmer in price. Strawberries are 1c easier and are arriving freely. Lemons are easier in price. The Montreal fruit sale last Saturday is reported not to have been so successful as importers expected. Very little fruit went to the west, the bulk being bunched between Montreal and Toronto. No fruit went to the United States, with the exception of a few small shipments of oranges billed for Boston. We quote the following prices:

California navels, per box	3 00	4 00

Vegetables.

The vegetable market continues quiet. Old cabbage is out of the market and new cabbage is 50c firmer. Potatoes are more plentiful and 10c easier in price. Outdoor vegetables are beginning to arrive on the market, such as radishes, onions, asparagus, etc.; next week will see outdoor lettuce. Bermuda onions are slightly easier in price. Rhubarb is somewhat of a drag on the market. Imported green stuff generally is scarce and higher in price, owing to the fact that this is between seasons; the vegetable season in the extreme Southern States is over, while that in the Middle States, from which supplies come, is just beginning. Our quotations are as follows:

Potatoes, per bag	1 15	1 25

Seeds.

Latest bulletins on the prospects for the coming clover crop say that in the eastern half of the province the crop is fair to good, while in certain sections it is very good; in the western half it is from good to very poor. The most unfavorable reports come from the counties stretching from Welland along the Lake Erie front to Lambton and Huron, in many parts of which the crop is an absolute failure. Most of the loss has occurred with old fields, the more freshly seeded fields almost invariaby turning out well. The rains prevailing about the middle of May have given the crop a good start for the season.

The actual season for selling seeds is about over, with the exception of that for corn, millet and Hungarian, a most satisfactory market having ruled in these varieties up to the present. We quote the following prices:

Corn, Dent varieties, per bu. of 56 lbs	0 85	1 00
" Flint " " "	1 15	1 25
Millet, per bu	1 08	1 10
Hungarian, per bu	1 20	1 25

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market continues dull. Manitoba wheat northern No. 1 and No. 2 are each 1c easier. We quote northern No. 3 at 89 to 89 1-2c. Ontaroi grain remains unchanged.

Latest bulletins concerning the prospects for coming grain crops say the greatest damage to the Fall wheat was sustained in the Lake Erie counties. Next in order of injury come the Lake Huron and West Middlesex groups, the Lake Huron, Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario districts following with a somewhat lighter, but still serious, proportion of loss. The bright spot in the outlook for Fall wheat is the fact that since the beginning of May the weather has been most favorable for the recuperation of the crop, and latest reports to hand indicate that many of the fields are making an encouraging recovery.

The comparatively small acreage given to rye has also suffered severely from Winter-killing, although not to the same extent as wheat. The most favorable accounts regarding the condition of Winter rye come from the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Counties.

The month of May so far has been propitious for seeding, and up to the present sowing operations have been rapidly pushed forward, nearly the normal acreage being in seed as early as May 16. In many sections sowing has already been completed. Ploughing under and reseeding of Fall wheat has delayed matters somewhat and added to the work of seeding. Spring grains as a rule found a good seed bed, although some farmers in the West Midland Counties have complained of the ground being rather hard. A good tone, however, generally pervades the bulk of the reports coming to hand regarding Spring operations.

Weekly grain reports, dated May 24, are as follows:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, May 26, 1904.

Groceries.

STRENGTH and activity are features of the grocery market this week. Every one is busy. Sugar has dominated the market by having taken another advance of 5c. In fact sugar is the most interesting product of the week. Raws are very firm in New York, and the future of sugar would appear decidedly strong. There is a fair amount of West India sugar arriving here, and the market is strong in all quarters. From New York comes the news that American refiners have been giving Java sugar for July-August shipment considerable attention, for which sellers were asking 9s 10½d, c. and f. for centrifugals 96 degrees test. The anticipated advance in sugar came last Friday, and all grades were marked up 5c a hundred, which made a net rise for the week of 10c per 100 lbs. Another advance of 5c per 100 lbs. on the price of refined sugar took place on May 25. This makes a total advance of about 35c in the local market during the past month or so. The Halifax market also advanced, but Winnipeg remains steady. Syrup and molasses continue to maintain a decline, and it is understood that two-thirds of the crop are already disposed of. The market is active and there are some special cargoes expected in Montreal by schooner at an early date. Coffee still attracting considerable attention. The reports are still unfavorable regarding the growing crop. Green fruit is very dull, owing to the immense arrivals from all points. Canned goods are especially interesting as the new packs are at hand, and salmon is still a dominating feature of this market. Tea remains steady and the advance in Japan tea has been maintained. Supplies of finer grades of Indians and Ceylon tea were reported somewhat restricted. The market was irregular in these lines. Prices in pepper have declined slightly, and from abroad the new crop of white is quoted in invoice lots for May and July shipment, Singapore white at 19c, and Penang at 17c. Cloves are in a remarkably strong position. Owing to the small available stocks, it is reported that the supply visible in Europe and America does not exceed 40,000 bales. This will have to supply the demand until the new crop arrives about the first of the year. Tapioca has suffered a slight reaction, but this has not interfered with the strong position of the article. Advices from Singapore show that the production has actually been curtailed, and higher prices may be expected every day. The nutmeg market seems to have recovered from the depression caused by the failure of a large Holland house. Advices from Trinidad state that deliveries of cocoa are rapidly decreasing and are expected to be on a limited scale during the next few months. In June and July there might be a slight increase, but the change of leaves which was taking place when this advice was given, tends to make it uncertain. In most places there will probably be little picking until October. The week of issue contains three fast days, known as "Summer Ember Days," the demand therefore for fresh fish natural-

A FEW TICKLERS

If you should want anything to lead off with---to stir up a bit of extra trade, or as a kind of an advertisement, perhaps we can suggest something. At any rate you might find it a good idea to check over a few items we have to sell you. Best to order by mail in case our salesman may not get there soon enough, and these things are offered subject to being unsold.

PEARL TAPIOCA

(Sack Lots—2¾)

Now, because it's cheap, don't think the quality is poor. It's first class ---none of that damaged lot. If you need any at all soon, better get in early.

Pretty quick a demand will spring up for Canned Fish and one of the nicest of this line is Kippered Herrings---that is, if you get the right brand. We can sell you

KIPPERED HERRINGS

(Centreville Brand, cases 4 doz., $3.65 per case.)

This is the best brand we know of---kind that usually brings $4.00 a case, but we happened to get a lump of them right---funny how you run across these things, sometimes! Same with

($1.00 per doz.)

Elegant goods, each tin chuck full of solid meat. Can't say how long they'll last at this figure.

HERSHEY'S MILK CHOCOLATE

has them all beat every way---for eating, drinking, or for icing. Retails at five and ten cents---good-sized cakes. It's the greatest summer seller you ever knew of and pays you a good, fat profit. Since taking on this agency our sales for Chocolate have been enormous, simply because Hershey's is all right. Most anything we handle is all right anyway. We fight hard to buy and sell the best goods.

ly increased. The markets show very little quotable change.

SUGAR.

To know where sugar is going to end would be a problem. However, local brokers prophesy still further advances. The advance of ten cents per hundred of last week has had no tendency to stop the demand. In fact, the demand has been very active and steady throughout the week. Extra granulated is selling at $4.45, the market is decidedly strong, and with the raw market having such a decidedly strong tone all over the world, it would not be surprising to see prices for refined go much higher. SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A private cable from Barbadoes shows that the tone of the market for molasses has been weak, and the first cost price has declined one cent per gallon to 8c. The selling price at the island is quoted at 12½c, equivalent to 24c laid down here with duty paid. The report of the crop being 75 per cent. in advance of previous years is said to be somewhat exaggerated, and it is expected that 45,000 to 50,000 puncheons will cover the total crop this year. This cable referred to offered 1,000 puncheons at 16 3-8c per gallon, cost and freight, which would be equivalent to 23c per gallon laid down here. There seems to be little disposition to operate even at this low price, and only two cargoes have been booked for Montreal. We quote :

COFFEE.

No quotable changes are reported in coffee prices notwithstanding the great interest taken in this article. The small East India crop is considerably discussed in the trade, and the shortness of the Costa Rica crop, all combine to indicate that prices for home trade sorts are likely to continue dear all the season. The reported damage to trees in Brazil by drought, frost and neglect has been verified. The bear interests seem to point to lower prices, but this is only speculative and is caused by the observation of large visible supplies. Wise coffee merchants prophesy slowly and steadily advancing prices. We quote :

TEA.

Not much change has been noted in the tea market for the week. There has been a good demand for all kinds of tea with spurts of activity. At the same time there do not appear to be any large stocks in first hands, and jobbers are distributing in a general way. The London tea market is reported to be strong, and the prospects for the tea industry are said to be much brighter than in former years. Planting Opinion is an authority for the statement that sulphur has been used against the ravages of red spider; and, in fighting other pests, new and successful methods have been employed. No quotable changes have taken place in Japan teas, but the market has been very firm and first supplies are now coming in. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

Old stocks of canned goods are likely to be all cleaned out before the new pack comes in, and, with the exception perhaps of tomatoes, stocks of all kinds of vegetables in first hands are light. Corn is exceptionally scarce, and the four months of consumption between now and the crop available from the western states make the situation interesting for this article. There seems no inclination on the part of holders to shade quotations in order to make a market. The reported poor germinating power of the corn seed is given as one of the reasons for the possibilities of corn being scarce. The spot stock is light in all vegetables. Canned fruits, however, seem quite equal to the market requirements. Commission men and brokers are anxiously looking forward to the spot salmon market. It is quite evident that jobbers everywhere are carrying only a small fraction of their usual supplies, and old stocks will go out clean at full asking prices. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The advance in currants reported in the last issue has been maintained, but no distinct change has been noted. From London it is reported that very few shipments have taken place to that port from Greece. Further reports come forward from Smyrna, speaking of damage by frost. This applies especially to sultanas, and the crop is said to be likely much below the normal yield of the past few years. With the strong demand from grocers, it would appear unlikely that prices will see any relapse between now and the new season. A rising tendency has been noted in the valencia market.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre report : Currants—No new developments have occurred since our last and the market remains steady at the advance. Sultanas—Reports from Smyrna advise a more active market, with prices maintained on fine grades, but slight concessions on lower qualities. As the season advances it becomes more apparent that the crop will be much smaller than last year, some shippers claiming it will not result in more than one-half the quantity of 1903. It is, however, too early to form anything like a positive estimate. Filberts—Messrs. F. Baller & Co. report a better feeling in Messina, owing to buyers coming in more freely, both for spot stock and new crop. Singapore Pineapple—Messrs. C. & E. Morton, London, advise short crop, with advance in prices, and further higher tendency. Shelled Walnuts—Are quoted somewhat lower, owing doubtless to absence of buyers who are unwilling to take the risk of importation during the hot weather. We quote :

Green Fruits.

It is a good while since the green fruit market has been as dull as it is at present. Even with the auction sales from cargoes of two large Mediterranean fruit boats going on, dullness still holds. Never has there been so little interest shown in the fruit sales. There were few American brokers present, in fact New York was hardly represented. American buyers were not in evidence at all, and this was the principal reason for the weakness of the market. In former years American buyers took from 50 per cent. to 60 per cent. of the offerings at these sales. Lemons were exceedingly weak, in fact it was stated that it was one of the worst sales experienced in Montreal for many years. The prices realized were from 75c to $3.10 per box, and standard brands of 300 size sold at $1.75 to $2.50, and 360 at $1.35 to $1.75 per box. At ten o'clock Saturday morning 20,000 to 25,000 boxes of oranges ex steamer Fremona were sold. Prices realized were very poor indeed, and the heavy arrivals have practically made a stagnation in the fruit market. The principal Canadian buyers were: Messrs. Hart & Tuckwell, John Barrie & Sons, and John Caldwell & Co., of this city. McWilliam & Everist, Husband Bros., and White & Co., of Toronto; J. F. Wood, of Sarnia; H. Walker & Son, of Guelph; Ryerson Bros., of Brantford; C. E. Mountjoy, of London, Ont.; R. Dixon, and one or two others representing American firms. The last named did not make any purchases. Fish.

The demand for all kinds of fresh fish was heavy this week, owing to the three fast days intervening. Dealers were well supplied with fine stocks, and prices were considerably lower than those of last week. White fish, lake trout, and dore dropped half a cent each per lb. Fresh mackerel advanced a couple of cents, and salmon trout sold freely at 9c a lb. Brook trout was selling in some quarters as high as 20c, though 18c was the ruling price. Shad brought 20c each, and dressed cat fish (Barbotte) were selling at 8c a lb. Gaspe salmon, which were expected early in the week, have not yet arrived, but no doubt will be on hand before the end of the week. There is a steady demand for all kinds of fish, and plenty of variety is coming forward. We quote :

Country Produce.

EGGS.

There is an easier feeling in the egg market. The receipts were close on to 1,600 cases Saturday, which was practically a usual quantity for the past week,—thus the easiness can be understood. The local consumption had decreased, and the accumulation of stock on spot hinted at a decline in price. However, the prices did not change actually, although they may any day. Good stock first-class new laid sold at 16c, and second-class at 14c to 14½c per doz.

BEANS.

No change in the bean market has taken place and the demand is steady with no change in prices. Choice primes sold at $1.40 to $1.45, and primes at $1.35 per bushel, while car lots at choice primes were quoted at $1.35 and primes at $1.30 a bushel.

HONEY.

Honey remains the same, with prices unchanged. White clover is quoted at 13½ to 14c. Extracted white clover remains at 8½ to 9c in 10 lb. tins, and 7 to 7½ in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat remains at 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

No marked change has taken place in the potato market. The demand is limited and the market is comparatively quiet, choice stock selling at 90c, and ordinary stock at 85c per bag ex track. In a jobbing way some business is doing at $1 a bag ex store.

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Firmness has been noted in the flour market, but no actual change in prices has taken place. Improved enquiry has been noted from foreign sources for Manitoba Spring wheat grade. Millers report that bids were generally higher. We quote :

TRADE CONDITIONS IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, May 23, 1904.

THERE were only one or two fine days last week, the weather for the most part being wet, cold and in some districts foggy. Business, however, was up to the average, and May throughout has been a fair month for trade. The country generally is looking well, and notwithstanding all that has been said about the backward weather, farm work is probably as far along as usual at this date. It is not often that seeding is over by May 24, but reports from Prince Edward Island are to the effect that some farmers have about all their crops in the ground. The apple trees in the Annapolis Valley are now in bloom, and grass and vegetation generally looks promising. All the industries of the province are being successfullv prosecuted, and every man willing to work is earning good wages. The colliery at the Joggins which has been in financial difficulties, is now being operated under a receiver, and the full staff of miners are again employed in the pit. Payment of five weeks' back wages has been deferred, but arrangements have been made to ensure full remuneration for all future work. Work on the Halifax and Southwestern Railway is being pushed forward and trains over the line will be running by September. This will make the life of the traveling man on the western shore more enjoyable, as he will then be able to spend Sunday in the city when he so desires. Business is very good in the shore district this Spring. The lobster fishery has been very remunerative and cash seems generally plentiful.

There is a lot of stir at the town of Springhill. Quite a lot of building is going on and a waterworks system is being constructed on which the contractors at present have 400 men employed.

Conditions in Cape Breton are better than at any time since the first of the year.

Flour, which declined a couple of weeks ago, is now more firmly held, although jobbing prices are nominally unchanged. Sugar is very firm, there having been two five-cent advances during May, and it is expected that another advance will be announced this week. Porto Rico molasses has firmed up about a cent, but there is a weaker feeling in Barbadoes.

Dairy produce is weak. There is practically no demand for fodder cheese, of which the factories here have considerable, as they held at so high a price at the first of the month that dealers contracted for western goods. Butter is dull and the demand weak. The outlook in these commodities is not encouraging for producers, as the export demand is stagnant.

Eggs have been scarce during the last week, as picklers have been operating largely and bought up about all the supplies. They have been jobbing here at 14c, but to-day dealers offered 15c.

Royal yeast has been advanced 5c per box, and Gillett's lye 10c per case, in single case lots.

Bananas are very scarce. The United Fruit Co. of Boston has cut down all Halifax orders of late and made only partial deliveries, while very few have come north by the direct steamers. The market has been well supplied with American strawberries of only fair quality, which have sold at 20c per box. Apples are about over for the season, there being a few nonpareils selling at $5.50 to $4.

Potatoes have taken a drop. Enormous quantities have been shipped from here and from Prince Edward Island to Boston, but the decline there has led to a weaker home market. People who know say the supply on the island is still large. Jobbing prices here dropped to 65c per bushel last week.

Manitoba Markets.

Winnipeg, May 25, 1904.

TRADE throughout the country is now showing up to better advantage and things on the whole are resuming a more normal condition, and the general appearance of business in the city is quite satisfactory.

Sugar—The market has now advanced and quotes Montreal granulated at $5 in barrels and $4.90 in sacks, and yellows at $4.40. Wallaceburg is now held in advance of last week's quotation, and the market quotes it at $4.90 in barrels and $4.80 in sacks.

Canned Vegetables—The market remains firm, and corn is still quoted at $2.50 to $2.65 a case.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—The market is firm. Evaporated apples are quoted at 7 1-2c a lb. Oregon prunes are still bringing good prices, as follows: 70 to 80 at 5 1-4c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6 1-4c, and 40 to 50 at 6 3-4c. California apricots are still holding at the 1-4c advance, and evaporated peaches and pears at the advance of 3-4c to 1 1-4c a lb.

Cornmeal—The market is now firm, quoting cornmeal at 90c per half sack and $1.75 per sack.

Rolled Oats—The market remains firm. 80-lb. sacks at $2.25, 40-lb. at $2.30, 20-lb. at $2.35, 8-lb. at $2.65, and 5-lb. at $2.85.

Canned Fruits—The market is quite firm. Pineapples, which are now on the market, are being quoted: 2-lb. whole pineapple, $3.75 a case of two dozen; 1 3-4-lb. sliced, $3.75 a case of two dozen; 1 1-2-lb. sliced, $7.20 for a case of four dozen, and 1 3-4-lb. grated, $7.60 a case of four dozen.

Green Fruits—The market is a little easier. Strawberries are quoted at $4 a case of 24-quart boxes, tomatoes at $4 a case, oranges at $3 to $3.50 a case, bananas $3 to $3.50 a bunch, pineapples $2.50 to $3 a dozen, rhubarb 4c a lb., cucumbers, per dozen, $1.75; green onions, per dozen, 30c; radish, per dozen, 45c; asparagus, per dozen bunches, $1; lettuce, per dozen bunches, 40c, and new cabbage, per lb., 5c. Apples are very scarce, XX $4 a barrel, XXX $5 a barrel.

Flour—The market still holds the price of No. 1 patent at $2.55.

Eggs—The market quotes eggs a little higher, and they are now jobbing to the trade at 17c.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver, B. C., May 20, 1904.

MR. ALEXANDER MacLEAN, the newly appointed Canadian trade commissioner to Japan, is in the city spending a few days before the sailing of the Empress of India, by which steamer he leaves next Monday for Yokohama. Yesterday Mr. McLean was at the rooms of the Board of Trade to meet business men, manufacturers, and others interested in trade with the Orient. Mr. McLean desires to be as well posted as possible before leaving, and to that end is anxious to hear the views of those who may have some interest in Oriental trade or who are thinking of launching out in that line.

Yesterday he had a discussion with some of the lumbermen on the lumber trade, and he will place himself at the disposal of all who wish to discuss matters tending to promote the expansion of Canadian exports. There is a vast field opening for Canadian products and manufactures both in Japan and China, and the feeling in the business community here is that the appointment of a special commissioner is a step in the right direction of promoting the growth of our Canadian market in the Orient.

While there is a very considerable amount of activity in business in the City of Vancouver, and the number of people arriving here to locate is perhaps larger than in past years, the general feeling among the retail trade is that business is dull. At least nearly every retail merchant, not only the grocers, but the dry goods and clothing merchants, express that sentiment. Some of them go so far as to say that it is duller in their business than for several years past. Seeing that there is fully as great, if not greater, activity in building lines than last season, it would at first seem that the retail men are a little out, but they should know. The trouble really seems to be—too many in retail trade for what is to be done.

On the other hand all lines of manufacture and the wholesale trade report business good. The wholesale grocers are very well contented. The business they are doing with the interior of the province and which includes also a growing trade with the Territory of Alberta, is very fair. Northern trade is promising. In fact one wholesale grocery manager said: "We have booked some nice orders, and are constantly booking more for delivery north. The goods are not moving out very quickly yet, as the through transportation is not yet sure. Through bills of lading have, however, been in force from Vancouver to Dawson since the 15th of May, so that the railway company and not the shipper or consignee is responsible. That means the railway company cannot charge $2 per ton storage, if the goods are hung up for a while."

The date fixed for through bills of lading was May 15th, but the fact is that the opening of navigation in the northern water route to Dawson is delayed by the ice still hanging in Lake Lebarge, below White Horse. It is, however, expected that by the time the first shipments on through bills reach White Horse, the course will be clear. The steamer Amur, which sailed north from Vancouver on Sunday last, took out a large cargo consigned direct through to Dawson.

News from Dawson reports that the stocks there are really not short in any line. There was some expectation that the supplies of canned meats might be low before opening of navigation, but they have not been. Of course fresh dairy produce and fresh vegetables, particularly onions, are in demand, and of those lines the chief part of the northern shipments by the Amur last Sunday and by the Princess May, which leaves to-night, consist.

There were some sensational reports published by the daily press here this week of the prices of potatoes going sky-rocketing, and that there was a shortage of that necessary tuber. The absolute fact is, however, the very contrary. There are plenty of potatoes. There are more now offering than can be disposed of, even with the imminence of northern shipments. In proof of that is the case of an unfortunate granger from Ashcroft who still awaits a purchaser for two cars of the famous product of Ashcroft, which he rushed down here on the strength of a short market. Potatoes are offering from all sides.

There is an explanation of it. The method of getting potatoes ready for northern shipment is expensive, in that all have to be sorted, and only really good stock is shipped, every potato being selected and uniformity of size watched as well as quality.

Now it takes three or four tons of potatoes to get out one for northern orders. With Ashcrofts at not more than $25 per ton on the local market it is not surprising that such careful selection, and equally careful packing, puts up the northern shipments to $40 per ton, which is about what dealers are getting. But that is a long way from the general market quotation. The residue of the three or four tons picked over for one ton sent north, is sold at even less than the market quotation for Ashcrofts. And of such stuff are some daily newspaper yarns. But some retailers bought on the strength of the yarn, and paid high for the potatoes, too.

Potato quotations at present are: Ashcrofts and other upper country stocks, $23 to $25 per ton, and lots offering. Lower Mainland stock, $16 to $18, and few buyers. The plentiful supply of last year's stock has prevented any importations of new potatoes from California this year. So far as reported there has not been a new potato sold here yet this season. There have been a few brought in to Victoria, but they are high.

Local apples are now down to the last car of red apples from the Coldstream ranch in the Okanagan. This car arrived this week and passed inspection splendidly. It is being sold at $2.25. Some Ben Davis stock from Oregon is selling at $2, and it is also pretty good stock.

California will continue to supply our strawberries for some days yet. The price has come down to somewhere near buying, being less than half of the first stock arrived. It is quoted to-day at $2.10 per crate of 15 boxes, which is the California size of packing. Hood River, Oregon, will likely get into the market about the first week in June.

The first cherries arrived from California this week. They were good stock and well ripened. The variety is black tartarian, and the price for a 10 lb. box is $2 wholesale. Oranges have gone up 25c per box for all grades of navels. The season for navels will last another thirty days. A few seedlings are offering at $2 and $2.25 per box. Bananas are moving freely at $3 to $3.25. Three cars have arrived in the week.

In produce the egg market has begun to receive from eastern sources, with a few from Manitoba as well. Two cars were received this week. The eastern egg is perhaps a little better stock, better selected, more quickly gathered, and shipped under more satisfactory conditions. Then the eastern eggs are shipped carload rates, while small lots of a few cases from Manitoba have to pay the local rate. Prices are for eastern stock, 22½c, and for Manitoba perhaps a cent or two less.

Butter is coming in freely enough now from local sources as well as from the east. In fact the eastern stock drags just a little from the fact that all local creameries have put the price down to 25c, at which the trade will buy in preference to the eastern stock, which is now quoted at 23c. Cheese is lower, being quoted at 12c for April eastern make. Two part cars have been received. One was somewhat delayed in arriving, being here but little ahead of the second, which was shipped later. A small stock of California new cheese, twins, has all been sold off, and at present prices no more will come in against the eastern stock.

In groceries, the price of dried peaches is noted as being quoted 2½c higher in 'Frisco. That makes the local price ready to go up to 11 and 12c here, the prevailing figure having been 10c previously. Apricots are also again higher, being at least 13 to 13½c per lb. Ontario evaporated apples are scarce, the market being nearly bare here now. The price is 8½c, while the California evaporated apples bring 7c.

In raisins there is an oddity. Loose muscatels, three crown, are worth more than four crown, because the packers are taking the former grade for seeding, a big trade being done in California seeded raisins. The quotation for four crown is 7¼c, while the trade is asked to pay half a cent more for three crown, and of course takes the four crown by choice.

In canned goods, corn is short and higher in sympathy. It is now held at $1.25 per doz., and dealers say they should be getting $1.40. Peas and beans are quoted at $1.10 and $1.15, with tomatoes at $1.55. Flour is even weaker than last quotations, being available in small lots at $5.80 per bbl., and shaded for car lots or large orders.

Sugar prices have undergone no change. The B. C. sugar refinery has, however, put on the market a new grade which it calls "Fruit Sugar," specially designed for fruit preserving. It is finer than granulated, but not so fine as bar or powdered sugar. It is put up in 10 lb. cotton sacks and the trade pays 6c per lb. for it. With ordinary granulated at 5c to the trade, it is doubtful if the new grade will go very quickly. The consumer is used to granulated and will hardly pay the extra cent, even if the retailer sells it at cost, which is almost sure to happen.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, have this week an attractive line of new season's make of marmalade, jams and jellies, from the St. George Preserve Works, Paisley, Scotland. They are quoted at extremely low prices and will certainly appeal to the observant business man.

Jas. Rutherford & Co., Montreal, report having the first shipment of Japan teas to arrive by first steamer.

Hot weather is at hand and probably the most cooling drink that can be obtained is Montserrat lime fruit juice. Evans & Sons, Montreal, are the agents, and their announcement elsewhere explains fully the reasons why they should be generously patronized.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal, has a line of teas for sale this week. Snaps are available in various lines.

Hires' Root Beer still continues to make people immune from heat, and is selling well for the season opening. The hot weather should invite buyers.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, are offering very fine Barbadoes sugar.

Buyers of New Orleans molasses may procure the same from H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto have just passed into stock a shipment of the well known "Shell" and "LaVierge" brands of castile soap. Buyers would do well to get their quotations.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, have something special to offer in a 4-string broom, to retail at 25c.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, are offering some very attractive lines of sardines at prices that will interest prospective buyers.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, are making a special price on selected Valencia raisins for the balance of the month.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, are making some low quotations on West Indian and Barbadoes molasses in both bbls. and hf. bbls.

Warren Bros. & Co., Toronto, have received a carload of roasting coffees that are exceptionally good value.

John Sloan & Co., Toronto, report big sales for Hershey's milk chocolate.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. A. Archambault, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, has just returned from a short holiday, looking browned and well after his rest.

Mr. E. Nicholson, of the Nicholson & Bain Co., commission merchants at Winnipeg, has returned home from Chicago after being away for two weeks.

A joint meeting of the fruitgrowers of Clarkson, Ont., and the wholesale fruit dealers of Toronto, was held on Thursday, May 26, at 11 a. m., at the offices of McWilliam & Everist, Church street, Toronto, at which matters of mutual interest were discussed.

Members of the grocery trade generally will regret to hear of the sudden death of the wife of Mr. Wm. Ratcliffe, grocer, Toronto, which occurred during the week. Mr. and Mrs. Ratcliffe had just returned from a trip to California where Mrs. Ratcliffe fell victim to pneumonia, to which she soon succumbed.

During the week a number of prominent produce merchants have been welcomed back on 'Change, Montreal, from a trip to England. These included Mr. John McKergow, of the A. A. Ayer Co., Limited; Mr. A. J. Brice; Mr. Arthur Hodgson, of Hodgson Bros.; P. W. McLagan, of Lovel & Christmas, Ltd.; Mr. D. A. McPherson, and Mr. A. W. Grant.

Mr. S. Vernon Kay, of Kay Bros., of Stockport, England, was in Montreal this week in connection with the appointment of a new agent for some of the specialties manufactured by this well known firm. The house has been established since 1786, and the Mr. Kay who is visiting Canada is a grandson of the original founder. He appointed Leeming, Miles & Co. agents for several of their specialties, one of which will be extensively advertised during the Summer months, and which is called "Vampire Fly Catcher." This fly catcher should appeal to the general public as it is a unique novelty, and at the same time one of the most practicable fly catchers that has been seen in Canada.

Association News.

FEDERATION ACCOMPLISHED.

Federation of four local trade associations in Montreal was successfully accomplished last week. These associations included the grocers, boots and shoes, dry goods and the butchers. At a special meeting held Wednesday, 18th inst., the constitution was read and formally adopted, and officers were unanimously elected. The greatest harmony seemed to exist. There was one problem which seemed to occupy the attention of everyone present, and that was the early closing movement, coupled with the difficulty of dealing with employes and merchants who were not members of the association. However, this subject is to be reported upon by a committee at an early date. The following officers were elected: J. O. Gareau, president; A. Leduc, vice-president: C. Watson, second vice-president; J. A. Beaudry, secretary: C. Levallee, treasurer.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Beaudry invited the delegates present to join him in refreshments.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N. B., May 23, 1904.

BUSINESS was somewhat interrupted this week by the holiday. Dealers report large sales with payments fair. We have had considerable rain. The lumbermen say they have hardly water enough, and fear a large quantity of logs will be hung up. The farmers, on the other hand, say it is too wet. The season in every way is late. Our harbor fisheries are very valuable, and this is the busy season. Gaspereaux in particular are caught right in the harbor. When salted and packed they are called "Alewives," and several thousand barrels are packed, besides the very large quantity sold fresh. These are very largely sold for bait. Some are sold smoked. There are also large quantities of shad and salmon caught. In shad the best fish are what are called the Fall shad, caught later in the season.

In markets many are changing their opinion in regard to flour, and are giving up the idea of low prices. Cream of tartar, which was reported lower, is firmer. Rice, of which there is a good stock held and quite a quantity afloat, is rather higher and reported very firm In spice there are few changes. Ginger is low. Cloves still quote high. Nutmegs, which have ruled so much lower than former years, are still low, and the old profits are a thing of the past, the lower cost leading to cutting of price.

Oil.

There is little out of which to make a market report. We have a new oil company called the Canadian Oil Co.; who have taken over the business of the Sun Oil Co., and the King Edward Oil Co. This last company was only here for a very short time. The Canadian Oil Co. is a Canadian concern, who have their own Canadian and American refineries. Besides handling burning, lubricating and paint oils, they are large handlers of paints. In prices no changes are reported. Linseeds are still low.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt prices are firmly held. It is sometime before further arrivals are expected. There is a steady sale. In fine salt the fact that Liverpool factory filled is quoted well below Canadian fine, leads to some sale, but in fine sale there is a large sale for the higher priced grades, as Canadian cheese and dairy salt.

Canned Goods.

Except a few American tomatoes brought here early in the year, the market has been supplied with Canadian. It looks as if all lines would hold out. Corn is a light stock. In salmon, market is well supplied. Packers are looking forward to a light pack. There are ample fruits. In domestic fish, a few new finnan haddies have been seen. Full prices are asked. In all lines very few were carried over.

Green Fruits.

Oranges are higher. At this season they need repacking. Lemons are still low. Bananas received are very good, but supply is not large. Apples are about out of the market. Pines are held at full prices, with sales light. Strawberries arrive quite freely. Prices are rather easier. Rhubarb is lower. The market is now supplied with local grown.

Dried Fruits.

In raisins the market is easier, owing to the low prices quoted on the coast for Californias. The supply of seeded is light, but quite a stock of loose raisins is held. Currants are firm. Dates are still low. Prunes are low and in spite of reports small sizes are still offered. The Egyptian onions received this year have shown quite a range in price. The quality has not been equal to former years. Peanuts are still high.

Sugar.

Dealers are holding good stocks and the higher prices are firmly held. Dealers outside the Guild are selling quite a quantity of foreign granulated.

Molasses.

The situation is still one of much interest. Practically all the Porto Rico which has arrived this season is held by one firm. The Porto Rico market is firm and present prices quoted here look low. Other members of the trade are receiving some stock via American ports. Large quantities of Barbadoes are being sold. The price is low and the large difference between it and Porto Rico is attracting attention.

Fish.

There is a fair catch of gaspereaux and shad are beginning to come in quite freely. It is still early for salmon, though a few are seen. The price is very high. Dry fish are still scarce and high. In pickled herring there is little sale and very few are held. Smoked are very scarce.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

In flour, particularly in Ontario grades, the feeling is firmer, and many feel they have seen the lowest price for at least some time. In feed, prices are firm. Oats and oatmeal are unchanged. Cornmeal is at least not higher. Beans are very dull. Market is easy. The sale for barley and peas is light. Seeds have had a fairly good season, prices having ruled low, particularly for alsikes.

Biscuits And Confectionery

Confectionery in the Grocery Stock.

MODERN methods of manufacturing and packing choice confectionery render its sale in the grocery store not only possible but profitable as well. The equipment necessary is quite simple. A silent salesman and an attractive stock of daintily boxed confections, placed in a prominent position in the store, are all that is required.

The advantages of handling confectionery are many; its disadvantages few. For one thing, it attracts other business. A person who steps into the store to purchase a box of candy will probably see something in the fruit line or in the staple stock of groceries, which he or she is led to buy. This is one of the principles of modern business methods, and is carried to a high degree of perfection in the departmental store.

Another advantage derived from handling a good class of confectionery is to be found in the advertising it gives the store. Let a store once get the name for being the headquarters for a certain choice line of chocolates, for instance, and the amount of advertising it will thus receive will be of material benefit. The store will share directly in the advantages of the manufacturer's advertising of the chocolates, as well as in the local house-to-house advertising of neighbors and acquaintances.

A third advantage is to be found in the raising of the store's standard. A neatly arranged confectionery department, stocked with high-class goods, will certainly do much to attract a better class of trade and will give the store an advantage over the competing store which pays little or no attention to its confectionery department.

Other advantages might be enumerated, but these should prove sufficient to give the retailer an idea of the advisability of carrying a stock of high-class confectionery. It is, of course, by no means advocated that the dealer should throw out all his cheap candy. The latter stock is of too much importance for that. What is intended is that the grocer should supplement this regular stock with higher-priced and better confectionery, and make it the important section of his candy department.

There are to-day several manufacturers of candy who have a reputation for turning out first-class goods. These are daintily packed in fancy decorated boxes or packages, and are guaranteed to be all that their makers claim for them. When different brands and different kinds of boxes are grouped together, the general effect is excellent. All grocers who have not yet made up their minds to stock these lines should seriously consider the advisability of doing so before Summer comes.

Every Summer the tourist trade grows in importance, and Summer visitors to our Canadian towns are just the people who want good confectionery and plenty of it. Let the grocer be advised to secure as much of this tourist trade as possible.

Inventor of Ice Cream.

A French chef who prepared a snow-like dish for the Duc de Chartres in 1774 is said to have been the first to make that cool luxury known as ice cream. Lord Bacon was possessed of the knowledge that there was a process of congealation by means of snow and salt; but to him this was a scientific fact, and he little dreamed of the idea that in after years this congealation would prove such a delightful refreshment. Iced drinks and water ices were known to the Parisian epicures fully a century and a half before they were introduced into England. These dainties, it is thought, probably came from the Far East by means of some traveler, who probably had tasted sherbet.

DECLINE IN THE EXPORTS OF FRENCH WINES.

(From United States Consul Covert, Lyons, France.)

THE Wine and Liquor Review, a Paris weekly publication, recently sent a number of questions to French business men residing abroad, asking their reasons for the decline in exportations from France, stating that since 1893 the falling off had reached nearly 700,000,000 francs ($135,100,000). The replies, briefly stated, are:

In Italy improvements in wine culture and an increase in protective duties have shut out the better brands of Bordeaux and Burgundy. Higher customs duties have produced the same results in Spain, Greece, and the Transvaal. Purchases of wine have fallen off in Naples on account of the impoverishment of the aristocracy. In Florence the decline in the consumption of fine French wines is attributed to the removal of the rich foreign colony from that city to Cairo.

"The great English market," one correspondent writes, "no longer receives our Bordeaux wines since Australian wines are so cheap and are more acceptable to a people who are becoming iron-bound in their imperialism."

As a result of the increased competition of Italy and Spain, and also of the growing importance of the imports into England from Australia and California, France has been hit in the business in which she enjoyed a monopoly—the wines of Bordeaux and Burgundy.

English wine dealers are charged with selling other wines—a mixture of several brands—as high grades of French wines, thus throwing discredit on the best products of France.

"On account of numerous middlemen," another writes, "the prices of pure French wines are so high that the great consuming middle classes cannot afford to drink them."

French Wines and Brandies in England.

After bitterly complaining of Californian and Australian competition, a London correspondent gives the following table of the sales, in round numbers, of French wines and brandies to England:

Year.	Wines.	Brandies.
1897.....	$2,116,225	$6,500,000
1898.....	2,357,745	5,400,000
1899.....	2,737,425	9,500,000
1900.....	2,670,175	5,760,000
1901.....	2,548,640	6 720,000

All who write from England are evidently alarmed at the competition of California wines. They say that France is invulnerable, but she must satisfy the demand for a good table wine at a fair price, such as can be had from California and Australia. One correspondent says that "Italy with its Chianti, Spain with its Rioja, Germany with its Rhine wines, and, above all, Australia and California with their imitation Bordeaux and Burgundy have materially injured the flourishing market of France."

CROP REPORTS.

Some enterprising crop students in the district of Montreal, and especially in parts east of the city, have reported flattering prospects in regard to this season. Potatoes have all been planted and early Spring work has been hurried along in readiness for the sowing of grain, and it is expected that there will be a much larger seeding of wheat and oats than for several seasons past.

WAR AND DRUG PRICES.

The price of camphor has been steadily increasing since the first announcement of the war. Cod liver oil is also affected by the war, and the price is very stiff indeed. No low prices are expected. Carbolic and picric acid are necessary ingredients in the manufacture of modern high explosives, and the laws of war have therefore had their effect on increasing the prices. Anise seed and cinnamon bark, as well as the oil of these drugs, come from the seat of war, and the supplies are therefore likely to be limited. Lycopodium has advanced in price, and the reason given is that Russia is using this chemical in signal service, as it enters into so many chemical fires; this explanation would appear reasonable.

AUCTION SALE SYSTEM.

THE auction system of marketing live stock advocated by the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, seems to be gaining ground steadily and surely. This month at Calgary nearly four hundred head of pure-bred cattle have gone under the hammer at the sale conducted by the Territorial Breeders' Associations, and several district sales are being established in Ontario. The Scugog Agricultural Society and the Port Perry Board of Trade are now arranging for an important sale to be held at Port Perry on June 16, 1904. These sales will be held at intervals, and if sufficient encouragement is extended to them, they will probably be held monthy to sell by auction of all kinds of farm animals, including stockers, fat stock, dairy cows, pigs, etc. Several very prominent breeders of pure-bred stock are consigning excellent animals to the first sale. A number of buyers from the Toronto stock yards will be on hand. This will be a great convenience to the farmers and stock raisers of the district, bringing the buyers and sellers together for disposing of surplus stock. In England and Scotland nearly all stock is sold in this way in the market towns on stated days, which proves a great advantage to the seller and convenience to the buyer.

CASEIN WANTED IN BRITAIN.

MR. HARRISON WATSON, of the Imperial Institute, London, writes W. W. Moore, chief markets division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa: "I am sending you a small sample of casein, a by-product of milk, as used in this country by paper makers and manufacturers of certain kinds of paints. There is some consumption of the article and I understand that most supplies come from South America. The casein varies considerably in quality, but must be free from fatty matters and strong smell, otherwise it would in the case of paper-making be detrimental. Casein is put up in bags containing either 1 1-2 or 2 cwt. (112 lbs.) and sometimes in casks holding 2 to 3 cwt. The quality sent is worth about £28 to £30 per ton, c. i. f. London, Liverpool and other ports. This is, I understand, the buying price. I also send another sample which is quoted £35 ex wharf Liverpool, and I hear of other quotations varying from £40 to £50, depending on the quality. I am unaware whether Canada is exporting any of this kind of casein or whether prices would be profitable but if any of your correspondents are interested let them communicate with this office and I will place them in touch with importers who supply the casein to actual users as required."

A grocery department has been added to Hulet's emporium, Norwich, Ont.

The premises occupied by Mr. Eastman, baker, at Almonte, Ont., have been sold to Mr. Frawley, who will convert it into a grocery store and embark in that line of business.

E. Lafrance, grocer, Quebec, has removed from the corner of St. Augustia and St. John streets to 320 St. John street.

GREEN FRUITS

The Fruit Crop.

THE fruit division at Ottawa sent out a request for information as to the damage to fruit trees from mice and frost during the past Winter, and has received a large number of replies from all parts of the Dominion.

The damage from mice has been most serious in Ontario and Quebec, particularly to nursery stock, and it is safe to say that not less than 25 per cent. of all stock "heeled in" outdoors has been destroyed. The young trees in all parts of Ontario and in the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Valleys suffered, according to their location. Several correspondents estimate their loss at 50 per cent. of all the trees of three years' growth and under. The injury, however, was almost nothing where young orchards had clean culture throughout the season.

The damage by frost, though exceedingly serious in Ontario and Quebec, will not affect to any great extent the amount of fruit put on the market this year, except in the case of plums and peaches. Apples and pears were seriously injured along the northern border of the fruit belt. The Baldwin, Greening, Ontario, Spy and Blenheim have been killed in places where they are usually considered hardy. Top-grafting only very slightly increases the hardiness of the variety. None of the large apple-producing section were seriously injured.

The Flemish Beauty pear again proved one of the hardiest of good varieties. In both pear and apple orchards the trees suffered much less from frost and more from mice when grown in sod or cover crop. Plums were killed in some of the heavy plum-producing sections, and in all probability the buds are so seriously injured everywhere as to render a heavy crop this year improbable. Reports from the Essex peach district show a damage approaching that of 1899; 50 per cent. of the trees will be killed outright. The Niagara district is not so severely injured. The Crawford type proved particularly tender. Cherries are injured severely in bud. Small fruits escaped with less injury.

New Fruit Warehouse.

Work on the new warehouse to be erected on Macdonnel street east, Guelph, by Hugh Walker & Son, fruit dealers, will be commenced almost immediately. The dimensions of the new building will be 50x106 feet; it will be three storeys in height, with basement built on an improved plan for storing green fruit. Modern conveniences are being provided which will make the warehouse one of the most up-to-date in the province. The entire cost will be in the neighborhood of $10,000.

Seedless Fruits.

SOME time ago The Grocer recorded the appearance of a fruit novelty in the shape of a seedless apple. The nurseryman who is responsible for introducing the seedless apple has up to the present withheld information of his success until he has secured forty trees of his new variety. Expert pomologists have examined the new apple, and declare it to be very handsome in appearance. Details of the methods by which this achievement was attained have not been divulged, but when it is remembered that the million-box crop of navel oranges came from a single shipment of six slips the start that has already been attained with forty productive trees presages an early appearance of the seedless apple in commerce.

Grape growers have been working for years on the problem of a seedless grape, and, while rumors of success have appeared from time to time during the past decade, the Sultana and Thompson seedless varieties have during the past year established their reputation among the viticulturists. The Japanese plum, without a stone, is also reported to be a reality, although the seeds have not been obviated. Cherries without stones are promised in the immediate future. Seedless tomatoes are alleged to have been perfected by an Indiana woman, being grown from the stock of the tomato, which is replanted when it is at its full height. Watermelons of the same freak nature are also rumored from Georgia, but not much credence is placed in this report, though if tomatoes have been perfected there is no essential reason why similar success should not be attained with the watermelon.

Fruit Nursery for Newfoundland.

A Nova Scotia fruit grower is to make an important experiment in Newfoundland, in which the Government is taking considerable interest. Up to the present fruit trees have been exceedingly scarce, if not altogether unknown, in that island. There seems, however, little reason to suppose that the hardier varieties of fruit trees cannot be successfully cultivated. F. W. Ford, who has extensive nurseries at Lunenburg, Bridgewater and Milton, has entered into partnership with John E. Lake, of Fortune Bay, Newfoundland, and is leaving for that place with 15,000 roots and grafts of apples, pears, plums and cherries. A large nursery is to be established at Fortune Bay.

Apple Crop.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER.

Sir: Last Fall in my travels through the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia, I came in contact with the farmers of that country, who were then elated over the magnificent apple crop of 1903 and the prices being realized. Some farmers expected to receive $500, $800, $1,000, and as high as $3,000, and in a few cases nearly $4,000 for their crops. Nova Scotians appear to handle their apples in a far more businesslike way than the farmers of Ontario. A large number of them ship direct to Great Britain under their own special brands. Some farmers have been shipping in this way for twenty years and have built up a reputation for their brand, so that these bring on the auction mart often as high as 3s to 4s per barrel more than the average sale of the day. (This means 75c to $1 per barrel above the average sales.) Besides they claim to pay as high an export freight on apples per barrel to London and Liverpool as Ontario men do via Montreal. So there's nothing gained by living near the seaport.

All the farmers pick, pack and brand their own apples with their own name, the name of the apple, the quality, etc., let the quality be either XXX or XX, and every farmer to-day knows as well as the buyers and shippers a No. 1 apple from a No. 2. As you pass along the railway you see large apple warehouses built on the railway sidings, with the names of the owners painted on. Certain English houses have their agents in the country buying from farmers for direct shipment. Last Fall some shippers realized as high as $3, $3.50 and $4 per barrel for their No. 1 fruit. Some odd lots netted even more money. The farmers depend altogether upon their apple crop; if it fails, and it often does, they are in hard luck. Certain farmers are beginning to devote more attention to other crops, so as to avoid the possibility of such a set-back. Some farmers are turning their attention to the culture of peaches.

BY THE WAY.

Co-Operative Egg Export Trade in Denmark.

THAT co-operative marketing of produce has been reduced to a perfect system in Denmark cannot be gainsaid by any of her competitors in the British market. Many of them are beginning to realize that the only possible way of holding their own will be to introduce in a measure at least the co-operative methods which have proved so successful in Denmark. The following is a short account of the methods employed by the Danish Egg Export Association:

The Danish Co-operative Egg Association has a membership of 33,500 farmers, divided into 500 local societies, or circles, each circle being an integral part of the central company, and subject to the control and supervision of the central organization. Each circle has its own by-laws, but such by-laws must conform to the provisions of those of the central organization. Naturally, therefore, the by-laws of the 500 circles are quite uniform. Each circle collects, at its own expense, the eggs produced on the farms of its members and prepares them for shipment to one of the eight general shipping centres at its own expense. After leaving the circle (the local collecting centre) all expenses are borne by the company. Profit sharing is absolute.

By-Laws.

The by-laws of the co-operative company declare that the "principal object of the company shall be to build up the most profitable trade in Danish eggs in foreign countries." To this end the company guarantees to purchasers that all eggs delivered by the company shall be new laid and clean, each egg being stamped by the company's registered trade-mark for new-laid eggs.

No circle of less than ten members is admitted to membership in the company. Each circle on being admitted pays into the company 13 1-2c per circle member. Each circle admitted is obliged to deliver all eggs collected from its members to the company. Eggs over seven days old must not be delivered, under penalty of a fine of $1.34 for the first offence and double that for further offences. A circle must not keep eggs longer than four days after collection before sending them to a general shipping station of the company. The eggs must be delivered absolutely clean. Each egg must be stamped plainly both with the number of the circle and with the number of the member of the circle delivering the egg. Each circle must provide its members with stamping ink and rubber stamps bought of the purveyor indicated by the company.

Each member of a circle must forward all eggs produced, except those needed for home consumption and for hatching. Eggs must be carefully gathered every day and in hot summer days twice each day. Only artificial nest eggs must be used and the nests must be barred at night.

Each circle is governed by a circle board, consisting of an uneven number of members. This board provides for the expense of collection and superintends crating for shipment to central stations.

The eggs are shipped by the 500 circles to one of the central shipping stations in ordinary cardboard egg crates set in pine boxes of uniform size.

Grading and Testing.

The work of grading and testing is done mostly by women, who become very expert. The eggs are graded according to weight. There are six recognized classes, ranging from 6 1-2 to 9 kilograms per 120 eggs (1.43 to 2 pounds per dozen eggs).

The expert graders work behind a long table, upon which they have six wooden egg racks, or frames, each frame with ten dozen holes in which the eggs are placed. The graders can tell at a glance to which grade an egg belongs, and they distribute them very deftly. When a frame is filled with ten dozen eggs (which are taken directly from the boxes received from the circles), the frames are taken by a man and weighed. If the 120 eggs weigh too much or too little for the grade for which they are intended, eggs are taken out and substituted with larger or smaller ones, as the case may be. The frame of 120 eggs is taken into a small, tightly closed room and set on top of a hopper-shaped box, which is about two feet deep, the sides of which are lined with looking-glass. The bottom of this hopper-shaped box is about 8 by 30 inches. Four 16-candle-power electric lights stand up from the bottom, equal distances apart. The eggs, as above indicated, are placed over these lights and looking-glasses, thick ends up. The tester looks carefully at and through each egg, and if any be unsound they are rejected.

Packing and Shipping.

The eggs are then carefully and snugly packed, side by side, with nothing between them in four layers, in pine boxes 22 by 72 inches, 9 inches deep. Between each layer of eggs is a substantial layer of straight, clean rye straw; on the top layer of eggs another layer of straw; the thin boards are securely nailed on, the boxes are properly marked with the company's trade mark, the number of eggs and the grade indicated, and are then sent to the ship. All eggs are sold by the pound f. o. b.

Expenses.

The co-operative company pays all expenses from the time the eggs leave the circles until they are placed on board ship. The average expense is 6 ore (1.5 cents) per kilogram (2.2 pounds). In other words, the expense is a trifle over 1 cent per dozen.

The cost of collecting the eggs from the farmers and bringing them to the circle centres is borne by the circles themselves. This work is done by a collector selected by the circle board. The collector is usually paid so much per pound of eggs collected. The expense of this collecton is very low, perhaps on an average not more than 2 ore per kilogram (0.5 cent per 2.2 pounds) or something less than 0.5 cent per dozen.

The total cost to the farmer from the time the eggs leave the nests until they are on board steamer is therefore 1 1-2c per dozen. English buyers pay for the eggs f. o. b. Denmark.

VALUABLE DIRECTORY.

AN extremely valuable directory for the use of shippers and buyers has been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System. The directory contains an alphabetical and geographical list of every station on the system, a list of rail, boat and stage connections, the names of stations where stock yards and track scales are located, a list of shippers of staple commodities, and lists of manufacturers and dealers in every possible line of goods. These include bakers, boot and shoe dealers, dealers in building materials, carriage makers and dealers, crockery dealers, druggists, grocers, dry goods dealers, fruit dealers, grain dealers, hardware dealers, etc.

A steamer closed last week from New York for Yokohama with 200,000 cases of oil at 21 1-2c.

The advent of the new turbine steamer, which was launched recently at Newcastle, and designed specially for the lake trade of Canada, will no doubt attract special attention, as it will be the first vessel of the kind to be completed for Canadian trade. She will arrive in Montreal early in June, making the trip across from Newcastle under her own steam. Steamship men and shippers are particularly interested, as the Allan Line have already two turbine steamships of this type under way. It is said that if these boats can be made to work successfully, either large or small, it will mean a revolution in the steamship business.

Freights on molasses from Barbadoes are quoted as follows: 110 gallons to Montreal, $3.50; the same quantity to Quebec, $3.15. The reason for the marked difference in freights from Quebec and Montreal is assigned to the fact that schooners come to Quebec under their own sail, while in coming to Montreal they require to be towed, thus increasing the cost very materially.

Wheat Outlook in the West.

THE crop report of the C. P. R. just issued shows that a large percentage of the season's acreage in wheat in the Canadian West has been seeded. In a dozen districts sowing has been completed, while the average in others runs from 85 to 90 per cent.

F. O. Dowler, secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, says the growth of wheat is in advance of that during the same period last year. He does not expect the wheat acreage will be greatly in excess of that of 1903, but the total acreage will be increased by other grains such as oats and barley. Other estimates make the increase in acreage about 10 per cent., which would mean 240,000 acres more under wheat in the Province of Manitoba alone.

G. W. Hastings, of Winnipeg, manager of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, speaking of the western crop outlook, says the late season is certain to cut down the increase in the wheat acreage in Manitoba and the Territories, which from present indications will not be more than from five to ten per cent. While there is a good deal of new ground under cultivation, the amount of water in the fields has prevented many portions of the old land from being used.

In speaking of the wheat available in the West at the present time, Mr. Hastings states that there are still two million bushels in farmers' hands outside the elevators, and that the old wheat which will be exported during the present season will be considerably above the usual estimate, which is 2,500,000 bushels.

It has been contended that the district lying between Winnipeg and Port Arthur is unsuited to grain raising. This illusion has, however, been pretty thoroughly dispelled by facts. Sir William Van Horne is the owner of a 5,000 acre stock farm at East Selkirk. Three years ago he tried the experiment of wheat-raising and last year succeeded in shipping three cars of wheat, of 80,000 pounds each. It is predicted that much wheat will be raised and marketed from this section of the West in the years to come.

Orange Meat Coupons.

THE Frontenac Cereal Company of Kingston and Toronto have inaugurated the popular system of distributing coupons with every box of their "Orange Meat." WEST INDIAN SUGAR CROP.

It seems to be the general opinion among the West Indian planters and shippers that the present season's sugar crop will not go to the United States. They claim that the prices will be much better in Canada and Great Britain than in the United States. The reason for this they attribute to the treaty with Cuba.

Tobacco Monopoly in Austria.

THE manufacture and sale of tobacco is a State monopoly in Austria which nets the national treasury over $27,000,000 a year. The Government purchases the raw material, manufactures it into cigars, cigarettes, smoking tobacco and snuff, and sells to the consumer through licensed agents, who receive a fixed commission—averaging about 10 per cent.—on the proceeds of their sales.

The prices are uniform throughout the empire. There are in all fourteen brands of domestic cigars and eleven brands of cigarettes, the prices of the former ranging from 0.6 cent to 3.6 cents and those of the latter from 0.2 cent to 1.2 cents. Of smoking tobacco the State manufactures twenty-six varieties, which are sold at from 18 cents to $2.80 a pound. This tobacco is usually put up in packages containing from one to six ounces. The Government factories produce, furthermore, no less than twenty-seven different kinds of snuff. This commodity is also put up in similar packages. Common snuff is sold at the rate of 28 cents and the best quality at the rate of 74 cents per pound.

Since chewing is not a popular habit in Austria, the State manufactures but two kinds of chewing tobacco—both of the twist variety. This tobacco is especially cheap, twists weighing 1 3-4 ounces costing only 1.2 and 1.8 cents, respectively.

In the sale of all the various products of tobacco, the State adheres strictly to the post-office principle of allowing no discounts on large sales. Whether the consumer buys one cigar or a hundred, an ounce or a pound of snuff, the rate is the same.

The total amount spent for tobacco during the year 1902 was $44,574,000, or about $1.16 per capita. The amount expended by the State for raw material, salaries, wages, commissions, etc., was $16,922,000. The State manufactured in its thirty factories 1,307,000,000 cigars, 3,114,000,000 cigarettes, 526,756,000 pounds of smoking tobacco and 30,062,560 pounds of snuff.

Hints to Retailers.

WEIGHING PLUG TOBACCO.

After receiving a parcel of plug tobacco, it is always wise to take the tins out of the caddies, and weigh them separately. Very often evaporation is responsible for bringing the net weight considerably below that marked on the caddy, and it is always advisable to carefully check the weights before passing invoices.

MOISTENING DRY TOBACCO.

When plug tobacco has become dry by exposure to the air, the following remedy will usually prove effective: Steep a cloth in a solution of rum, sugar and water, wring out and wrap round the tobacco for some hours. A few applications of this will usually bring the driest tobacco back to its requisite moisture.

MIND THE ASHES.

Don't let your customer blame your brand of cigars because he doesn't know how to smoke them. Some men take considerable trouble to keep a lighted cigar free from ash, and will be constantly knocking the ash off. This is a mistake, as the ashes on the end of a cigar help to retain the flavor. Then the constant knocking often breaks the outside "wrapper," and this also spoils a good smoke.

Winnipeg Tobacconists Object.

The tobacco interests of Winnipeg are objecting strongly to the proposed amendment to the by-law regulating the sale of cigarettes and tobacco. This amendment calls for a license fee of $500, instead of $10 now charged.

Notes.

The McAlpin Consumers' Tobacco Company, Toronto, have had inquiries from a firm in Jamaica, wishing to obtain an agency for their tobacco.

Egypt's Cigarette Trade

THE many apprehensions existing as to the source of many of the so-called Turkish cigarettes and as to the origin and quality of the materials used, have induced the Egyptian Government to compile the following figures with special care:

The tobacco and cigarette industry of Egypt is regarded as of such importance that in tabulating the export and import returns, leaf tobacco and cigarettes are stated separately, while all other kinds of merchandise are consolidated in a single class. The total imports of tobacco during the calendar year 1903 amounted to 15,182,323 pounds, valued at $3,029,245. The amount imported in 1902 is not stated, but the value is given at $3,015,670, showing an increase for 1903 of $13,575. The exports of cigarettes, which constitute the only tobacco product separately reported, aggregated 1,168,640 pounds, valued at $2,076,475. The value of the exports in 1902 was $2,149,680, showing a decrease during 1903 of $73,205. From these figures it appears that Egypt consumes all but about 8 per cent. of her importations of leaf tobacco.

The reputation which Egyptian cigarettes enjoy in well-informed quarters as being manufactured from high-grade Turkish tobacco is sustained by an examination of the detailed import figures, from which it appears that of the total of 15,182,323 pounds imported, nearly one-half, or 7,355,211 pounds, came from Turkey. This tobacco was invoiced in the country of origin at $1,701,485, or about 23c per pound. It is probable that the actual imports of Turkish tobacco are much larger than stated, for the reason that considerable quantities are annually shipped from Turkey to Grecian ports, and thence transhipped to other ports on the Mediterranean Sea. This fact is reflected in the figures shown in this summary, from which it appears that there were imported into Egypt from Greece in 1903 no less than 4,954,087 pounds, valued at $675,550. It would seem, therefore, that about 80 per cent. of the total imports of tobacco into Egypt are brought in, directly or indirectly, from Turkey.

	Pounds.	Value
Great Britain	96,555	$25,170

The great bulk of cigarettes exported from Egypt go to Germany, which last year imported 536,355 pounds, valued at $975,200, out of a total of 1,168,638 pounds, valued at $2,076,475. Great Britain was the next largest purchaser, taking 215,094 pounds and the British possessions in the Orient absorbed 152,781 pounds. Austria took 73,913 pounds, but no other country imported more than half as many.

Following are the exports of cigarettes in 1903 in detail:

Tobacco Exports for 1903.

The principal exports of tobacco from Canada are in the shape of tobacco stems and cuttings, which are exported principally to Germany, where they are manufactured into cheap cigars, etc. Owing to the relative cheapness of labor in Germany the manufacture of cheap lines of cigars pays, whereas it cannot even be exploited in Canada. British Guiana, Newfoundland, Belgium, Germany, Holland, St. Pierre, Spanish Africa and the United States, also take considerable quantities of Canadian stems and cuttings, the total exports in 1903 being 540,980 lbs., valued at $28,755.

Canada's exports of all other tobaccos in 1903, with the exception of comparatively small quantities of cigars and cigarettes, amounted to 209,655 lbs., valued at $102,828. These went to Great Britain, Australia, British Africa, British Guiana, Newfoundland, Belgium, France, Germany, St. Pierre, and the United States.

THE KNOCKER AND HIS SAD TALE ABOUT THE FOOL GROCERS

By Knock M. Hard.

I MADE a little trip into the country this week to see if I couldn't get me a rabbit or two, and while up there I dropped into a grocery store in the town where I was staying. It's hard to get out of this grocery habit when once you get it, so I just naturally drifted in and began to compare notes with the groceryman. He told me a sad tale about a cut-price fellow that had played havoc with the grocers of that town while he lasted.

This fellow blew into town one day, rented a good store building, put up a sign that said: "Wilberforce & Company, Wholesale and Retail Grocers for Cash." In a few days a new stock of goods came in by freight. Part of it was from St. Louis, part from Chicago and part from Hannibal, Mo. When he got the stock assigned, "Mr. Wilberforce" got out a lot of dodgers and put an ad. in the town paper, and the way he cut the price of groceries would have made a patent feed-cutter sick with envy. The man who was telling the tale to me found his business on the dead run over to "Wilberforce & Co." and he talked it over with himself—mind you, with himself—and concluded there was nothing for it but to meet the prices. He did not go over and talk it over with his neighbors, but just with himself. Then his neighbors, the other grocers in town, they talked it over with and by themselves, and they each concluded to do the same thing. The result was that groceries were selling in that town at a closer price than you could buy them from a wholesale grocery house for spot cash, and they do tell me that's mighty cheap these days.

The result was that the whole town began to roast the old-time grocers. "A lot of robbers" they called them. "Been charging us four prices for our groceries for ten years and now when they have got a decent, nice competitor, that's honest, they come down to where prices ought to be. We'll do our business with Mr. Wilberforce." And so they did, and the grocers of that town looked sick for a while. One morning there was a new face over at Wilberforce & Co.'s store and Wilberforce himself was not to be found. On the front door there was a card that said: "Wilberforce & Co. have sold this stock of groceries to the undersigned." The undersigned was a man who had been running a coal and wood yard when he wasn't trading horses. Three or four days after a couple of strangers dropped into town and asked around for "Mr. Wilberforce." They really seemed to want him, and when somebody told them that he had sold out his store and could not be found, they looked as if their poorest friend had died and made both of them guardians for his nine children. Well, the upshot of it all was that they turned out to be credit men from Chicago houses, and when they told the story about "Mr. Wilberforce" having bought his stock on credit and then sold it out to the wood and coal man without notifying his creditors, the merchants of the town understood how "Mr. Wilberforce" could sell groceries at less than cost.

This is a pretty hard story of itself, but it is not all of the story. The wholesale people lost all their money because the coal and wood man had a bill of sale for the stock. The toughest part of the whole thing was, however, that the fool grocers of that town had got so in the habit of selling goods at cost while Wilberforce was in the field that they did not know how to get back again to respectable profits, and when I was there every one in the lot was trying to run every other one in the lot out of town by selling sugar twenty-four pounds for a dollar, and other things in proportion. What do you think of that? I talked to two or three of the grocers around there and told them what they were doing to themselves, and I got them to agree to get together and talk it over and see if they couldn't stop being lunatics. The rabbits ran short and I had to come home, but I think those folks will gain some sense.

Now, there is a moral in all this, namely, that the country ought to have a law that would compel the retailer to give five or ten days' notice to his creditors before he could legally sell out his stock in bulk. That kind of law would hurt no honest man, and it would protect honest merchants against those rascals who move into a town, start a store, ruin the business of every other merchant in that town and then sell out to some innocent party or to a confederate.

A NEW AGENCY.

THE premises of Renouf, the bookseller, at 2,238 St. Catherine street, opposite Victoria street, have been transformed into one of the finest modern wine houses in Montreal. The firm of W. & A. Gilbey, wine growers and distillers, known in the four corners of the globe as one of the largest wine and spirit concerns in the world, have opened this store under the management of Mr. Duncan Cameron. This house has 3,038 agents in Great Britain and Ireland, and upwards of 1,000 agents abroad. They certify that their annual sales amount to 15,000,000 bottles. Mr. Cameron, in conversation with The Grocer representative, stated that it seemed almost incredible, when some of the facts regarding the Gilbey house were related. For instance: The Government returns show that they supply every eleventh bottle of wine and every thirty-fourth bottle of spirits consumed in the United Kngdom. They pay to the British Government about $50,000 a week excise duty. They have their own distilleries at Glen Spey, Morayshire, Scotland, and Strathmills, Keith, Banffshire, Scotland, which enables them to export the finest Scotch whiskies at lowest rates. Having their own distilleries, they have special facilities for exporting their famous gin, "Old Tom," "London Dry" and "Plymouth." They export 147 brands of ports, sherries, clarets and other wines, as well as whiskies, brandies, rums and gins. Mr. "Dun" Cameron, as he is familiarly known in Montreal, is a capable, far-seeing business man. He has the best of social connections, and is known throughout Canada for his sterling social qualities, his enterprise and ability.

GERMAN TRADE AT HOME.

It is said that a million and a quarter sacks of sugar beet seed are produced annually in Germany, constituting at least three-quarters of the world's supply. Of this million and a quarter the Province of Saxony alone contributes 800,000 sacks. The production of sugar beet seed is an occupation separate and apart from that of the production of sugar beets for sugar manufacture. The professional seed growers produce a smaller quantity of sugar beets, while the professional sugar beet growers make no effort to raise beet seeds.

It pays to be particular what you sell. A first-class store soon gets a first-class reputation. A man who sticks to inferior goods is soon lost in the crowd.

There is only one best when it comes to Baking Soda. Every package bearing this trade-mark is a personal guarantee to all your customers. You run absolutely no risk in selling and recommending it.

REPRESENTATIVE CANADIAN GROCERS

Mr. Peter Macdonald—the Pioneer Grocer of Toronto.

MR. PETER MACDONALD enjoys the distinction of being the oldest grocer in the City of Toronto, having been established in business since 1857. Mr. Macdonald has seen his own trade develop from very small beginnings until it has become one of the leading retail grocery establishments in Toronto, and at the same time has witnessed the gradual evolution of the grocery trade from the time when it was in the hands of a dozen retail grocers and two or three wholesalers to the present multitudinous array of retail grocers and numerous spacious, substantial wholesale establishments which are to be excelled nowhere in the Dominion of Canada.

In conversation with Mr. Macdonald a representative of The Grocer learned that the first wholesale grocer with whom he did business was the late Wm. Ross, afterwards the firm of Reford & Dullen, who subsequently moved to Montreal. Other representative wholesale firms back in the fifties were: Smith & Keighley, and Howland & Fitch. The latter firm was situated on the site of McWilliam & Everist's present fruit warehouse, on Church street south, and was the predecessor of the present firm of Davidson & Hay. At this time the business section of Toronto was confined within the narrow limits of King, Wellington, Yonge and Jarvis streets. Yonge street, north of Queen, was considered out of the world. The principal residential district did not extend far beyond these limits, and a number of the business houses were situated in the midst of it, among them Mr. Macdonald's grocery, across the street from the store which is illustrated in the present article.

All this, however, has changed. The wealthier families gradually moved up town, and with the change Mr. Macdonald's trade became largely an order business. He has catered almost exclusively to the better class of trade ever since he established a reputation as a first-class grocer, and up to the present there are to be found on his books customers of many years' standing who rank among the oldest and most prominent citizens of Toronto.

Mr. Macdonald began in the grocery business with little or no experience, and a minimum amount of capital. In the early days success on such conditions was a matter of reasonable assurance provided a man kept his eyes open and attended to trade. Only the commonest grocery staples were on the market at that time, which made it comparatively easy to master details. Compared with the technique of the modern grocery trade it was simplicity itself.

Capital and Experience Necessary.

With the advantage of many years experience in the grocery trade, Mr. Macdonald does not advise a young man to enter the grocery business as he himself did. One has only to consult Bradstreet's weekly bulletins to learn the comparatively large number of retail grocers who lead a mushroom existence and disappear suddenly from the world of trade as if by magic. The demands of trade have grown too complicated for an inexperienced man to cope with. Moreover, the time has come when a fair amount of capital is absolutely essential. A grocer has to be able to take advantage of the market and buy at the proper time—in bulk if necessary—which he most certainly will not be able to do if he has not some surplus capital at his disposal. Mr. Macdonald's motto has always been "to buy sharp," and a very good one it is for the enterprising young grocer of to-day to have continually before him.

Mr. Peter Macdonald, Toronto.

At the same time Mr. Macdonald does not recommend the struggling grocer to allow heavy credits to pile up against him. Quite likely such a one will be in an embarrassing position when he finds himself face to face with a famine in a certain line, and no stocks laid in beforehand, but he is in a worse position if he is stocked up with goods and suddenly discovers he cannot meet his bills, for which there is usually but one remedy—a remedy, however, that very often breaks a man's spirit, even allowing that it is the result of carelessness—and spoils him for future success in business. The grocer who is shy of capital has a serious proposition to face. He had better, however, reconcile himself to the situation and pay as he buys. Ultimately the day will come when his financial and moral independence will serve as a support and safeguard in the trade against the toils and snares set to trap the unwily even in the grocery trade.

The city grocer must have capital, because he has to compete with the large departmental stores. This necessitates buying to the best advantage in the cheapest possible market with a close margin for profits. Mr. Macdonald thinks the days of the departmental stroe are numbered, as far as their grocery department is concerned. The whole thing is a fad and will run itself out. Latterly the better class of trade, if indeed any of it, has ever left the grocery for the departmental store, has tended to return to the legitimate grocery. It is nothing more than a case of "the chickens coming home to roost."

Tea and Liquor Departments.

The two most striking features of Mr. Macdonald's business have been his tea and liquor departments. In the early days trade in tea was one of the most important factors in a retail grocery business. Mr. Macdonald achieved an enviable reputation as a direct importer of teas from Glasgow via London, Eng. Every year, directly the new crop arrived on the European market, samples were forwarded to Mr. Macdonald, who selected what he wanted after thorough testing, which was done quite as scientifically as one sees it done to-day in any wholesale tea warehouse. After some years, package teas were brought on the market and by some means or other the trade were persuaded to take to them to the detriment of trade in bulk teas. This latter feature has become more and more exaggerated, but Mr. Macdonald managed to hold his own and his old customers continued to prefer his importations to anything on the market. Mr. Macdonald's advice is always to supply your customers with what they want. If you haven't it, it is surely in your best interest to endeavor to secure it from outside. Never allow a customer to depend upon an outsider.

The other department which gave big returns in Mr. Macdonald's business was his liquor department. Here again Mr. Macdonald imported direct. His Scotch whisky was known far and wide, and came unadulterated from the distiller at Campbelltown, Ayrshire, Scotland. The liquor trade grew steadily and became increasingly successful. Several years ago an alteration in the liquor law made necessary a separate store for the sale of liquors. About this time Mr. Macdonald dispensed with his liquor department.

One of Mr. Macdonald's hobbies is undoubtedly specialties. When asked as to what he had found especially valuable in his business, he said it was to have one's own special brands—and instanced his teas, his Scotch and his Wenona brands of flour, cornstarch, etc. "Have your own flour, your own bags, get the best material available in the market, and your customers will use none other."

Handling Pork.

Before the time of pork packing plants and provision and commission merchants, the grocery trade in Toronto was largely interested in the handling of pork and provisions. One grocer vied with another in his hams and bacon, which not only adequately met the demands of trade, but brought in big returns. Mr. Macdonald succeeded in establishing a connection in the provision trade which extended far beyond the City of Toronto. Many of his customers came from Guelph, and as far away as Collingwood and Sault Ste. Marie, and continued his patrons for many years.

The subject of this sketch has also made a feature of the jobbing trade. Until the last few years he made a specialty of selling teas, sugars, confectionery, etc., to smaller grocers in the city and suburbs, as well as out of town. These were the palmy days in the grocery trade. Profits were big and the business end was comparatively easy to manage. With the gradual change in the general character of trade, namely, a large increase in the number and variety of luxuries or fancy groceries, and lowering of prices in consequence of increased production and better facilities for transportation and handling, all this has changed. Imagine a grocer ever having to go all the way to Montreal to buy certain lines of goods, and bring them back with him on the next boat, or purchasing by the mail-order system. How a retail grocer of to-day would scorn the latter proceeding! There was no alternative, however, in the early days, in the comparative absence of the knights of the grip-sack.

Window Display.

Mr. Macdonald is very emphatic on two particular features in connection with the grocery trade, namely, the importance of window display and the value of trade journals. In his opinion "a grocer's windows are his best sellers to the transient trade." Very few can withstand the temptation of a tastefully dressed window. This applies not only at holiday seasons but throughout the year. Whenever a grocer has a certain line which he is anxious to place on the market he should make a window display of it, not in the crude and careless fashion adopted by some however. Care in window display means dollars in the pockets of a grocer. A regular customer visits him on the usual market day. She sees something new in the window and is almost certain to have her grocer send it up on trial—no matter whether she actually requires the article or not.

Trade Journals.

It is even more important, however, for a grocer to keep in close touch with trade conditions, and here is where The Canadian Grocer is of inestimable service. If he wants to get a forecast of the tea market, an idea of the sugar situation; or of what's doing in canned goods, all in a nutshell, he has only to consult his trade journal. I have not been without The Canadian Grocer for years, and have no hesitation in saying it is indispensable to a tradesman who desires to buy right, which is the one point on which much of a grocer's success depends. He must be able to buy sharp—to take advantage of the market at the right time—or he is no good.

The grocer is ordinarily too busy a man to keep in touch with the galaxy of newspapers and journals published nowadays, and The Canadian Grocer gives him within small compass just what he wants.

Advantage of Credit Business.

Mr. Macdonald is a firm believer in the advantage to be derived from conducting a grocery business on a credit basis. The city grocer who is well established in business finds it absolutely necessary to give credit. Modern conditions are such that the "order" trade has become a leading feature in the majority of large businesses. Of course capital is a necessary concomitant if a credit trade is to be pushed for all it is worth, and there are conditions where a credit trade cannot be carried on successfully, for instance in the poorer districts of a city. The most successful grocer, however, is he who is able to make the wisest use of credit and at the same time avail himself of the cash system whenever he finds it necessary.

Within the past month Mr. Macdonald has retired from active business, and friends and patrons of The Grocer, as well as his fellow tradesmen, seize this opportunity to offer heartiest congratulations and best wishes to him of their number, whose efforts in the business world have been crowned with success in the truest sense.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Disappearing Fish.

VARIOUS species of fish that formerly visited North Atlantic shores regularly every year in vast numbers have now almost disappeared.

The thinning out of mackerel in the North Atlantic and Gulf of St. Lawrence is to be traced to the use of destructive gear, precisely when the fish were schooling for spawning purposes. As the Americans were the inventors and principal users of the purse seine, they are responsible for the ruin of this industry on the Canadian coast as well as on their own. No Canadian vessels have been engaged in mackerel seining for some years, and in the palmy days of this fishery they never fitted out more than half a dozen seiners, although some years ago Gloucester used to have a hundred or more vessels seining in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The disappearance of the caplin from considerable stretches of the coast of Canada may also be attributed to destructive methods of capture. The disappearance of the gaspereaux or ale-wives may be attributed to the same cause. The disappearance to a large extent of cod from the immediate vicinities of the coast is doubtless due to the destruction of these small fish. The Canadian Government, however, by the adoption of wiser fishing regulations, and by an ever-improving system of fish culture, is doing much to remedy the evils caused by the reckless improvidence of fishermen. The department has now over twenty hatcheries in operation in various parts of Canada and more attention is being given every year to the artificial reproduction of salt water food fishes.

Salmon Exports Affected.

A VICTORIA, B.C., exporting firm is reported to have received advices from its Yokohama representatives to the effect that the Japanese Government has secured from Korea a concession granting fishing privileges along the entire Korean shore line. Importance is attached to the communication for the reason that it may have a bearing on the exports of fish from the United States, and particularly the Pacific coast, to Japan. This business was a large and particularly welcome one during the month of March, resulting in an advance in the price of pink salmon and the practical cleaning up of stocks in hand.

Just what the effect of the new fishing arrangement will be is uncertain, but the firm receiving the advice and the agents in Japan regard it as having adverse potentialities, as possibly curtailing expected exports from this country. The Japanese are great consumers of fish, and have been accustomed to depend upon Russia largely for their supplies, taking thousands of tons from that country. The war, of course, cuts off that source of supply, and the Mikado's Government has been negotiating with Korea for some time for the fishing privileges now secured.

Smoked, dried and salted fish have formed the principal demand in Japan, and the stoppage of imports from Russia in a manner compelled the use of other kinds, and was a principal factor in the placing of orders for canned salmon.

Great Future of the Halibut Industry.

"IT would be almost impossible to overestimate the value and extent of the fish resources of the Pacific Coast, particularly from the Columbia River north," says the Pacific Fisherman.

"While a great deal of capital and labor have been expended in developing the cannery business of the coast to bring it to its present position of the largest fish canning section of the world, very little has yet been done to develop the fresh fish industry. A great many reasons may be assigned for this, but the principal ones have been the perishable nature of the product and the great distance from any large market; but as necessity is the mother of invention, so necessity is often the mother of enterprise.

"The ever decreasing supply of certain of the better grades of fish foods in the East, particularly halibut and salmon, compelled the dealers to 'go West,' where it appears nature has given us such abundance of fish, particularly the two species referred to, that it would be impossible to make any perceptible effect on them for legitimate food purposes for a great many years.

"To get an idea of the abundance of halibut on the coast one has but to know of a phenomenal catch made by Capt. H. B. Joyce of the steamer Kingfisher, who in six days from the time he left Vancouver returned with 240,000 pounds. During last year the entire amount of halibut landed at Gloucester and Boston was 3,631,640 pounds, while one company shipped to Boston from the West about 10,000,000 pounds during the same year."

Scottish Herring Curers.

J. J. Cowie, the Scottish herring expert, has arrived in Canada with his staff of herring curers. The necessary barrels and salt have already arrived, and as soon as the new fishing boats are here active operations will be begun to test whether or not Canadian herring can be cured to equal the renowned Scottish herring.

Americans May Buy B. C. Salmon.

It is reported that in spite of the promise of the Government of British Columbia to Canadian canners that American canneries would not be allowed to buy fish on the Fraser River, unforeseen influences have forestalled the measure, and the only restriction now imposed is that fish caught in traps in British Columbia shall not be imported to the States—a measure not asked for. The Canners' Association is endeavoring to bring pressure on the Government to accede to its first request.

The Canadian Sea.

The Minister of Marine has introduced a bill providing machinery for asserting jurisdiction over the whale fishery in Hudson Bay, where for many years the industry has been monopolized by Americans. Ten years ago notices were sent to American ports on the Atlantic, where whalers outfit, that Canada claimed jurisdiction in the Canadian Sea. By the new bill the Minister of Marine is authorized to exact a license fee from whalers. Regulations are made with a view to preventing the wanton and wasteful slaughter of whales, and also in regard to the establishment of stations where oil and bone may be extracted. In accordance with the same policy, the Canadian Government will send out expeditions for the purpose of claiming jurisdiction and hoisting the British flag on various points.

Arrangements have been made at Ottawa for submitting a test case to the Supreme Court of Canada to decide the claim of the Maritime Provinces for a portion of the Halifax fishing award.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS and Cold Storage News.

Asparagus Crop Disaster.

FURTHER particulars regarding the destruction of the asparagus crop of 1904, in California, have come to hand. About 3,000 acres of asparagus are included in the flooded area along the Sacramento Valley. The entire crop has been lost in most cases, and in others the asparagus beds have been greatly damaged.

The outlook for the asparagus pack in California, owing to the flood and rust, is far from good for years to come. Outside of the flooded country there are about 4,000 acres of asparagus in California, but much of this is too young to be productive. About one-half of the crop used for canning has been destroyed, while much of the remainder has been reduced by rust.

New Potato.

THE French National Society of Agriculture has recently had its attention called to a new potato, which some French journals say will not only play an important role in agriculture, but will supplant the Irish potato. The technical name of the new vegetable is Solanum commersonii, but it is now beginning to be called the Uruguay Irish potato, as it comes from the banks of the Mercedes River, in Uruguay. The yield is said to be enormous, and it appears to be immune from any disease. This potato is cultivated like the common vegetable of this name, or, at least, has been so cultivated in the trials made in France since 1901.

Potato Famine.

There is almost a potato famine in Vancouver, B. C., at the present time and potatoes are likely to soar away up to a record price before the arrival of the new California and local crops. "The area planted in potatoes last year was smaller than usual, despite the increased growth of population, while the Fraser Valley potatoes have not kept well. Ashcrofts are practically out of the market. Choice potatoes are now held firmly at $28 to $30 per ton and owners are not anxious to sell even at those figures, as they are confident the price will reach $40 at an early date. There are very few Fraser Valley potatoes now obtainable, and they are of poor quality, large quantities having had to be thrown away."

Coffee Dyed Eggs.

British egg dealers are greatly interested in Lord Onslow's advice to use coffee to dye home eggs for competition with the tinted article from abroad. Colored eggs run a shilling higher per 100. The majority of colored eggs on the British market come from France, but Canada is her keenest rival.

Names Too Much Alike.

The Laing Packing and Provision Co., Montreal, is seeking to restrain another company from doing business under the name and style of the Laing Canning and Preserving Co.

They claim that the new company constitutes an infringement of the rights of the Laing Packing and Provision Co., long established, and allege that the similarity of names is such as to cause confusion. They are asking that the declaration and registration of the new canning and preserving company be declared null and void.

Fancy Price for Potato.

It is stated that the new potato, Eldorado, has been sold in England at the rate of $1,000 per pound. This potato was recently originated by a large seed firm at Essex, England, and is supposed to be very resistant to certain potato diseases prevalent in England. At this price the seed potatoes bring three or four times their weight in gold. The excessive prices are probably a craze, which will make some people richer and finally help to make many others poor.

Supplies for South Africa.

The Extension of Markets Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has received from the director of supplies, Pretoria, South Africa, a list of the successful tenderers for the supply of bread and flour, meat, groceries and forage at all the military stations throughout South Africa for twelve months dating from April 1, 1904. Canadian firms doing business with South Africa, in the lines mentioned above, would do well to communicate with these contractors with a view of furnishing a portion of the supplies that will be required. Their names and addresses will be furnished on application to W. W. Moore, chief Markets Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Low Prices for Canadian Produce.

The depression in trade conditions in England is likely to mean that Canadian exporters of provisions will have to be satisfied with much lower prices than they have been used to getting. While Canadian exports of butter, cheese and bacon may not be appreciably decreased, much lower prices than last year now prevail, and are likely to continue for some time.

In many districts English workingmen are only on half time, and it is impossible for them to pay the old prices. It is what the consumer is able to pay that regulates prices, and at present this means that little or no profit is to be obtained in bacon, butter and cheese.

Important Legal Decision.

Judgment has been given in favor of O. Wade, liquidator of the Pakenham Pork Packing Company, in his suit against J. Pakenham, J. Byer, J. Kendrick, R. Forsyth and the Standard Bank. The liquidator claimed that $50,000 of the company's money was paid the bank by the directors of the company in discharge of their own indebtedness. This contention has been upheld, but the details of the settlement are left to be arranged by the parties to the suit, subject to the approval of the court.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The dulness of last week has continued into this week, and the movement has been rather slow. The same condition has prevailed throughout the entire provision market, butter, cheese and eggs being anything but satisfactory. Nothing has occurred to change prices in any line. A fair trade has been doing in fresh meats. Fifty points' rise developed in the middle of the week in hind quarters. We quote the following range of prices:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Roll bacon, per lb	0 09½	0 10
Small hams, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Butter—The stock of butter forwarded is as large as ever, and the market dead. There is still some fodder butter offering, but the quantity is rapidly diminishing, and by next week will have disappeared entirely, it is hoped. That means, of course, that the quality is better, and with any encouragement of demand greater strength would develop. With nothing but packing butter supplied prices should stiffen up a little. Prices rule the same as last week, with tubs a little stronger. We quote:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 16½
Dairy rolls, large	0 11	0 13
" prints	0 12	0 14

Cheese—A strange condition exists in the cheese market. England sets the price in this country, and yet at last Saturday's board sales prices ruled that are not sustained or authorized by quotations in England. Buyers were paying anything from 8 1-4c to 8 3-4c, and there appeared to be considerable rivalry even at that figure. It means that dealers are forced to pay prices which from the present level abroad are a loss of a-quarter of a cent. Prices have gone up in Toronto, but have not by any means followed the big advance during the last two weeks in board quotations. England's demand during the past Winter has been much less than usual, and stocks on hand at the end of April are reported to be twice as great as last year. New cheese is offering in much smaller quantities than last year. Board reports for Friday and Saturday, May 27-28, are as follows:

Provisions—Activity has marked the provision movements, and a very firm feeling has been noted in live hogs. The tone has improved for fresh killed abattoir stock. Sales to jobbers were made at $7.40, and small lots at $7.50. For smoked meats, there has been an increasing demand from local and country buyers. We quote:

Butter—A steady tone has been held by butter all the week. No encouragement has been shown by English buyers, however. The exports are away behind what they were last year at the same period. It is generally believed that a lot of the buying is speculative and possibly for English houses. The creamery offerings in the townships were reported to be of excellent quality; in fact, a lot of it was said by good judges to be quite equal to June make. Then, when it is remembered that this butter costs less than 18c, it might be suggested that it would be good stock to put away. The market is in a queer state; for instance, there were certain lots of good butter available at 16 1-2c to 17c a lb., which is 1-4c to 1-2c below the parity with recent country cost. At the wharf yesterday there were sales of 500 packages at 16 1-2c to 16 3-4c, so that with due allowance for all circumstances, the prices should be: Finest creamery, 17 1-4c to 17 1-2c; finest Quebecs, 16 3-4c to 17 1-8c; lower grades, 16c to 16 1-2c.

Cheese—Irregularity again marked the cheese market. Holders were asking high prices, and buyers did not want to accept them. New cheese is selling almost on a par with old cheese, so that the upward tendency has been sufficiently effective to prevent spot accumulations. Old dealers do not believe that the advance will be maintained unless June cheese should start some speculators.

The advance quoted is now 2 1-2c per lb., and finest Ontario cheese could hardly be bought under 9c. In comparison with other years, dealers feel that this is not a bad price for early makes. The volume of production has been increasing very rapidly, and, though late in starting, the expansion has increased nearly 40 per cent. The aggregate offerings for the week ending Saturday, May 28, were 37,500 boxes, against 41,400 during the same week of 1903. For the season the receipts have been 127,900 odd boxes, against 205,200 for the corresponding period of last year. The shortage this year is about 60 per cent. The arrivals on Monday reached 13,400 boxes, and 3,000 boxes were sold at the wharf for 8 1-4c, which is a rise of 1-2c over the previous Monday price. Spot prices rule as follows: Best western cheese, 9c; best eastern makes, 8 1-2c to 8 3-4c; seconds brought 8c yesterday. The consumptive movement in the Old Land has set in, and the holdings have faded in quantity, but the stock in London is still too large to have much hope for an immediate improvement in the exports.

The total exports for the season of 1904 are 102,741, divided as follows: 21,897 through and 80,844 local; for the same period in 1903 shipments totaled 139,744; 1902, 111,642. The butter shipments to date for the year were 4,458; 1903 for same period 4,025; 1902, 23,806.

Provisions—Barrel pork and beef continue to rule low. Mess pork is being offered from Prince Edward Island, prices this year being well below last season. There is a limited sale. In pure lard our dealers have held quite full stocks, but have been disappointed in the market, lower prices being the cause. Sale is not large. In hams and bacon dealers try hard to get full figures, but sales are rather dull. In fresh beef, prices are firmer. Veal is coming to hand rather less freely. Mutton has but little sale. The lamb so far received is rather inferior in quality, and price is still high. Pork has been low and very little is now offered.

Latest reports of prices current in provisions in the London markets, dated May 16, and issued by T. Nesbitt & Co., are as follows:

The butter market is steadier, with an improved demand. Canadian bacon is selling more readily at advanced quotations. Canadian hams are in more request. Best eggs are in fair demand, with small sizes rather lower. Cheese is meeting with good demand at present low range of prices.

IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION.

The Supreme Court of Nova Scotia has decided that the Dominion Government has no right to grant trap net licenses to fish for mackerel on the Atlantic coast in Canadian waters, and that such licenses are illegal. This decision will not materially affect Dominion licenses elsewhere, as licensees will in their own interest desire to continue their licenses. The Government is now acting under agreement with the Provincial Government, and difficulty will only arise where litigation is invoked by the fishermen themselves.

TRADE WITH NEW ZEALAND.

T. De Schreynor, of Auckland, New Zealand, representative of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, is in Canada to promote the establishment of a direct steamship line between New Zealand and the Dominion.

Mr. De Schreynor says the transportation question just now is of vital interest to the people of New Zealand, and that they can use a great many Canadian manufactured articles which at the present time they are purchasing from the United States. If a regular service can be brought about between Canada and New Zealand, trade with Canada will increase by leaps and bounds. Last year New Zealand bought seven million dollars' worth of goods from the United States, and given a proper service in the way of transportation, 60 per cent. of that business can come to Canada. In regard to return cargoes from New Zealand to Canada, Mr. De Schreynor says New Zealand can supply Canada with flax, wool, and various other goods.

CANADIAN PRODUCTS FOR AFRICA.

AN interesting commercial steamship departure was noted last week, when the ss. Melville, in command of Capt. W. Jones, sailed from Montreal for South African ports, with a full cargo, comprising American and Canadian manufactured goods, and Canadian produce. The cargo included 16,000 bushels of No. 1 northern wheat, shipped by H. B. Metcalf & Co.; 5,000 bushels of Canadian rye, and 2,000 bushels of buckwheat. The flour exported comprised 12,500 bags from the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., 2,000 bags from the W. W. Ogilvie Co., and 4,000 bags of American flour from Minneapolis. Excellent cold storage equipment was supplied in this steamer, in which were placed 300 tons of bacon, shipped by the Laing Packing Co.; 350 tons of pork, frozen beef and poultry, by the Armour Packing Co. of Chicago; 75 tons of similar cargo, shipped by Swift & Co. of Chicago. In addition, there was a large shipment of white twine from R. Crooks & Co., Montreal. A. A. Ayer & Co. also shipped 100 boxes of first-class cheese, and Heney & Co. sent forty carriages of Canadian manufacture.

WHO WILL SUCCEED MR. WM. MACKENZIE ?

THE following item from a recent number of the Weekly Times of Ceylon will interest readers of The Grocer, inasmuch as Mr. Mackenzie is recognized as the introducer of Ceylon teas to America. A sketch of Mr. Mackenzie appeared in The Gracer of May 20:

"Mr. Wm. Mackenzie has done good and useful work for the whole community, and it will be an evil day for us when he resigns, as we understand he will do at once, if he has not done so already. Who is to fill his place? Who is there amongst us with a business-training, who knows America and the tea trade in America, to continue his good work, for it would be a pity to send a man who could not go on from where Mr. Mackenzie left off. Someone who would start where Mr. Mackenzie did some years ago is not worth much. And we take it the man will be hard to find. Cannot, therefore, a great effort be made to secure Mr. Wm. Mackenzie's services for a few years more, when the foundation he has laid will be secure against all attack? We understand the remuneration given him is not large, considering that he has to pay as many as three visits to America yearly.

CAPE BRETON WHOLESALE GROCERY CO.

A new enterprise, known as the Cape Breton Wholesale Grocery Co., has been organized in Sydney, Cape Breton, with an authorized capital of $60,000; H. W. Wentzell is president and general manager; A. W. Mann is resident manager and secretary-treasurer, and D. M. McKay is a director, along with the two preceding gentlemen. The list of directors will be added to from the shareholders. The newly organized company is an evolution of the Sydney branch of the firm of H. W. Wentzell & Co., which was opened in 1900, and has since made rapid strides.

J. Milton Cork, grocer, Toronto, has sold his business to J. Ray, Parkdale. At present Mr. Cork is enjoying a well-earned rest at his Summer residence, Balmy Beach.

INQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

THE following inquiries relating to Canadian trade have been received by the Curator of the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute, London, Eng.

69. The names of wholesale confectioners in Canada likely to take up the sale of a new variety of sweetmeat are desired by the manufacturers of the article.

70. A correspondent has asked to be placed in touch with some Canadian produce exporters who wish to do a trade in Hamburg.

72. A London firm of produce importers are open to represent a first-class Canadian rolled oats mill and some packers of canned meats, fruits, etc.

73. Application has been made by a German house having a large outlet for Canadian produce such as dried fruit, evaporated vegetables, canned lobsters, etc., for the names of likely exporters.

The names of the firms making these inquiries, with their addresses, may be obtained from the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. Persons desiring such addresses will be careful to quote the office under which the inquiry appears and the number.

GRAIN STEAMERS TO CARRY ORE.

In the absence of big grain shipments from the west at the present time the Canadian Pacific Railway Atlantic Steamship Company is reported to have just closed an important contract, which is the first of its kind ever made in Canada, and which will make up for the lightness of the wheat shipments. The contract calls for the shipment of 15,000 tons of lead ore from the Kootenay district of British Columbia to England. The company in this way will be able to fill up a great deal of the space occupied in other seasons by grain and will be able to bring the tonnage well up to the same level as last year. The company has also made contracts for the shipment of large quantities of copper ore from the Sudbury district.

Forest City Catsup

is made entirely from choice ripe tomatoes.

Every tomato is carefully hand-picked and has all the blossoms, blemishes, etc., carefully cut away so that only the very best part of the meat is used.

The highest quality and most expensive vinegar and spices are used, and corresponding care is given to the work in every process of the manufacture.

Common catsup, made from turnip and apple pulp and colored with tomato flavoring, or made from the offal from tomato-canning factories, can of course be bought cheaper than our high-class Forest City Catsup, but discriminating customers quickly detect the difference and your trade diminishes or increases according to whichever quality you handle.

If you do not handle Forest City Catsup, place a small trial order with us, keep tab on the customers to whom you sell it, and we'll guarantee that every one of them will like it.

GRAIN INSPECTION.

IN view of the stand taken on the new Grain Inspection Bill in the editorial columns of Grocer last week, it is interesting to follow up the situation as it appeals to the grain dealers in Montreal. At a meeting of the Montreal Corn Exchange Association on May 27, strong objection was taken to the proposed measure, in so far as it places undue power in the hands of the chief grain inspector. According to the Grain Inspection Bill, as it stands, the selection of standards by the grain survey boards will be subject to the approval of the chief inspector, but what is more, any decision given by the grain survey boards will be subject to appeal to the chief inspector, whereas it should be just the other way round. In a court of law an appeal from a certain legal decision is finally decided by the majority.

The grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade have raised similar objections, but Toronto differs from Montreal in respect to placing the control of grain inspection in the hands of the different boards of trade, believing it should be Dominion inspection only, not even provincial. Montreal would follow the scheme of grain inspection that is used in American grain ports. There, grain inspection is in the hands of the boards of trade, chambers of commerce and like organizations, and as a matter of fact, there is sometimes a difference of as much as 8c a bushel on grain inspected for the same grade in any two of these ports, for the simple reason that the different boards of trade do not always make the requirements for the various grades the same, but may change from year to year. It is just this inequality and irregularity that Toronto grain men wish to see overcome. They do not advocate board of trade inspection, or inspection by individual inspectors, but one uniform inspection for the whole Dominion of Canada, which will be under the control of the Dominion Government, and fixed by Act, the supervision of actual carrying out of which will be placed in the hands of men thoroughly conversant with the grain situation in all its multitudinous details, such as have composed the boards of survey which have done such excellent work in both Montreal and Toronto for many years.

TRADING STAMPS.

IT would seem as if the City Council of Montreal, as well as the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, have been exercising themselves over something which does not warrant the pains they have taken. For instance, it may be either wise or foolish to issue or receive trading stamps, and there may be better and more attractive means of giving a discount for cash. The legality of the business, however, is not open for discussion, except by the courts. Senator Dandurand, acting in behalf of the Traders' Advertising Company, made the interesting statement last week before Judge Mathieu that there are twenty-five thousand families in the City of Montreal alone who have books of cash receipts, which means that nearly half the entire City of Montreal is interested.

No sooner had the City Council passed a by-law regarding trading stamps than the Traders' Advertising Company immediately set to work and obtained an injunction to prevent it from being put into force. Usually thirty days' notice is given before the enactment of a new by-law. The city attorneys, evidently, were arbitrary, and claimed that the charter allowed special action in this case. Judge Mathieu was of a different opinion. The argument of the counsel of the Trading Stamp Company was, that by not following the usual rule of giving thirty days' notice of the adoption of a by-law, the city would injure this large number of families who held books of stamps partly filled, and which were retained solely in the anticipation of redemption. Mr. Dandurand impugned the constitutionality of the Act, by which the city is authorized to pass such a by-law, and claimed that the matter came within the jurisdiction of the Federal Parliament only. It is well-known that Provincial Legislatures have been put in control of the administration of justice, and also distinctly in control of municipal institutions. Is it possible that the Local Legislature has not the prerogative of allowing the City of Montreal to pass a by-law? If so, our laws cannot legally be enforced. At any rate, the injunction against the city has been granted, and the whole business will have to go through the courts again.

The City Council of Montreal apparently exercised very little care in the first place. Who was it that advised the aldermen in respect to the forty dollars, imposed, according to the first by-law, when it should have been twenty dollars? It is odd that with five aldermen who are grocers, and thoroughly know the trading stamp business, the city council should have been so ill-advised by the City Attorney regarding as important an issue as the suppression of trading stamps. The weakest point in the argument of the aldermen was that trading stamps had been suppressed in other places, which is really no argument at all. It is only fair to say that the objection to the stamps, however good, or however ill they may be, has been raised by dealers who do not use them. Grocers claim that the tendency is to create monopolies, and that certain dealers using the stamps attract customers to their trade exclusively. There is another point which has not been mentioned, namely, that large numbers of grocers in Montreal are quite indifferent as to whether others use trading stamps or give away sovereigns. It is surprising, however, to learn that such a large number of grocers use the stamps and that some thousands of buyers want them. How the whole thing will end is hard to say, but as far as the city council is concerned, a large number of grocers feel that they are quite able to fight their own battles.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY

THE many readers of this paper who have followed the articles in The Grocer advocating higher salaries for the Supreme Court judges, will find sound logic in the following from the Ottawa Citizen :

"The article which we reprint in another place in this issue from The Grocer on the subject of judicial salaries in Canada, has our hearty endorsation. It shows a healthy state of national sentiment when the rights of one class in the community are fearlessly advocated by the press of another class in the interest of all. It is advocacy of the most telling kind. That the salaries of judges in this country are so inadequate as to be on the mean side is obvious to any one who takes the slightest trouble to look into the matter. In the past we have been able to secure able and upright men to fill our judicial offices notwithstanding the meagre remuneration attached to them, but in view of the rapidly increasing cost of living throughout the Dominion have we any right to expect a continuation of our good fortune in this respect ? In the senate, in September, 1891, the late Senator Dickie called the attention of the Government of the day to the question in hand. In the course of his remarks he said :

" 'I have no personal interest in the matter beyond that which attaches to any member of this House who is interested in having an efficient administration of justice. This end will not be attained unless by an adequate and independent judiciary. The scale of salaries attached to these high offices was arranged shortly after confederation. During that period, which has been the life of the nation to which we belong, we have seen throughout very large increases, beginning with the indemnity of members of parliament, and increases in salaries of ministers, and increases in the salaries of almost every public officer down to the bottom and yet the salaries of the judges have remained stationary.'

"What Senator Dickie said then with so much force gains additional strength when quoted after thirteen years of inaction in the matter. It is not becoming to the dignity of Canada that it should be said of her that her judiciary is the poorest paid of any in the chief British possessions. It is the smallest sort of cant for us to laud the probity of our judges on the one hand, and to deny them salaries commensurate with their work and dignity on the other. It is an old saying that a well-paid bench makes justice cheap. An unsound judge is dear at any price; and it is no answer to say that he can be put right on appeal. That means additional expense and delay to the well-to-do suitor; to the poor man it means in the majority of instances enforced acquiescence in a denial of justice. The better the judges the fewer the appeals. By all means, then, let us make it possible for our best lawyers to go on the bench without facing one of the hardest of all trials,—poverty in high position."

The Citizen touches the vital point of the whole case. Canadians are proud of their judicial system, we never cease praising the probity and strength of our judges, yet though the wages of every class in the community have been advanced we continue our Supreme Court judges at salaries which were too small at confederation, but are now absolutely niggardly. It is our boast that only safe, strong, conservative men are sought for judicial honors, yet the salary attached to the highest judicial position a Canadian lawyer can be invited to take is such that to accept it a first-class lawyer must make a financial sacrifice which none should be expected to make, and which few can afford to.

VISIBLE GRAIN SUPPLIES.

A QUESTION has arisen which is of interest to The Grocer, in so far as it concerns a very important department of the grocery trade, namely, that of flour and cereals. It is this: Who is to be the final authority on grain statistics? For instance, are we to rely upon the grain report published weekly by Bradstreet's, New York, for a correct statement of the visible supply of grain in Canada and the United States, or are we to refer to such reports as those of the New York Produce Exchange or the Chicago Board of Trade?

Comparing Bradstreet's report with the others mentioned, we find that Bradstreet's estimate of the visible supply of grain in Canada and the United States on Saturday last, May 29, was, in round numbers, 36,000,000 bushels, while the estimates of the others were each in the neighborhood of 24,000,000 bushels. The difference is accounted for by the fact that all except Bradstreet's omitted a considerable number of ports in which stocks available on May 28 ran from 30,000 to 200,000 bushels, and one in which stocks were estimated at 508,000 bushels. Another omission was that of stocks stored in private elevators in the larger grain centres. Scrupulous care seems to have been exercised in the insertion of comparatively insignificant ports, while at the same time some which figured prominently in Bradstreet's were left out entirely in the others.

It need scarcely be asked which is the more reliable report. Even in Bradstreets', however, there is room for improvement. In glancing over their report we notice that such Canadian ports as Owen Sound, Collingwood, Midland, Meaford, Goderich, and Point Edward are lost sight of. These are important grain points, and in view of the probability of a very large increase in the grain output of Manitoba and the Northwest, much of which passes through these ports, they ought to figure in statistics of supplies available in Canada and the United States from week to week if such are to be complete.

HIS NINETY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY.

MANY Canadians are this week congratulating Sir Wm. P. Howland on entering his ninety-fourth year in a condition physically and mentally that promises many more birthdays.

The daily papers are publishing stories of his long career, but none of them recognize the fact that he laid the foundation of his success in the grocery business. He came to Canada from the States as a young man, and started a grocery store in Toronto. This developed into a wholesale grocery business, which was worked in conjunction with a flour mill. He eventually gave up the grocery business, and in his latter years devoted his time to the milling and grain trades. Among the stories told by the old business men of those days is one which has probably never before found its way into print.

Sir William was Minister of Finance, and as such had the preparation of the customs tariff. Some weeks before the annual budget was brought down in Parliament Sir William and some of his friends began to pick up sugar in considerable quantities, in anticipation of a duty being placed upon it. The course of events since then shows that Sir William and his friends did not benefit as much in the long run as a shrewd little Scotchman named John Morrison, a porter and shipping clerk in the Howland grocery warehouse.

Mr. Morrison observed the quiet purchases of sugar by his employer, and began to buy on his own account. He had saved up a little money, and had a number of friends in Toronto and Montreal, from whom he borrowed all he could, and then he bought all he could on credit. He had control of a large quantity in Montreal and Toronto, when a duty was put on, and he suddenly became a rich man. He at once gave up his position and began a wholesale grocery business on his own account. He was not only shrewd, but extremely economical, and his fortune was rapidly added to by his savings. He tired of the grocery business and went into insurance and banking. He was head of the British America Assurance Co. for some years, but was not so successful in that as he was in banking, and he resigned some years ago, and is now a successful private banker, and is looked upon as one of the richest men in Toronto. He is not now much in the public eye, but lives in a fine large residence, filled with costly furniture, bric-a-brac, pictures, statuary, etc.

Mr. Morrison is a strong Liberal, and on one occasion interrupted the late Sir John Macdonald at a public meeting by calling him a political villain. Sir John, with a twinkle in his eye, at once said: "Well, Johnnie, if I am a villain, you are a grocer."

Mr. Morrison, being born in a part of the world where it is said people do not see a point quickly, was most indignant, and replied: "I am not a 'grosser' villain than you." They say it took Mr. Morrison some time to understand why the audience was convulsed with laughter.

The Canadian Grocer, on behalf of the trade in Canada, congratulates Sir Wm. P. Howland on his birthday.

A DISTINGUISHED JUNE WEDDING.

The day of weddings for the year was of particular interest to The Grocer, in so far as June 1 marked the marriage of Miss Mary Dunlop Davidson, daughter of one of our most respected and distinguished friends, Lieut.-Colonel Davidson, of Toronto, to Captain Harold Child Bickford, of the 6th Dragoon Guards. Captain and Mrs. Bickford left almost immediately after the wedding for a trip to St. Louis. They will return to Toronto for a short visit before starting for England and Scotland, en route to India, where Captain Bickford's regiment is stationed at Bangalore. The Grocer has pleasure in offering Captain and Mrs. Bickford its heartiest congratulations, and in predicting that Mrs. Bickford will prove a most valuable acquisition to society in the Far East, since she is a true daughter of Canada.

A DISCLAIMER.

IN publishing lately the portrait of Mr. Jules Cote, secretary-manager of S. J. Major, Ottawa, The Grocer laid stress upon the increased business done by this firm during the past year, and the reading of the article would lead to the assumption that the increase was due to Mr. Cote since he assumed charge of the management. Mr. Cote takes occasion to disclaim the entire credit for the success that is attending their business, and attributes it to the very hard and energetic work done by the late Mr. Major, who founded the business, and from very humble beginnings succeeded so well up to the time when illness prevented him from giving personal close attention to same. Mr. Cote states that the reputation of the business, as established by Mr. Major, was such as to make his work (which, by the way, The Grocer knows to be hard and consistent) a pleasure to enlarge.

A VISITOR FROM CALCUTTA.

MR. G. B. PARIS, the Calcutta representative of McMeekin & Co., one of the largest tea importing firms in Great Britain, spent last week in Toronto with G. Musson & Co.

This is Mr. Paris' first visit to Toronto, and it goes without saying he was delighted and surprised with all he saw in the Queen City. He was much interested in the air of activity he noted everywhere in Canadian trade circles, and became firmly convinced, if he was not before, that Canada has a great future before her.

When interviewed on the tea situation, Mr. Paris expressed the opinion that prices of lower grade teas are going to be on a higher level for the next five years. The world's consumption has increased enormously; already it has overtaken production, and at the same time there is no visible increase in the tea acreage of the world. Labor difficulties peculiar to India will also tend to bring up the price of tea.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Groceries.

Toronto, June 2, 1904.

THE grocery trade continues steady, tending to become quieter, as usual at this season of the year. Collections are reported as satisfactory, and wholesalers do not complain about their volume of business during the week under review. An increased demand for sugar is expected as soon as the Spring and Summer fruit canning season begins, otherwise sugar is quiet, and firm prices rule. Canned goods are very firm, with stocks of corn and peas low and the market in canned fruit hardening in view of the likelihood of a light fruit crop this season. Teas are quiet at firm prices. New Orleans molasses has advanced from 3 to 4c during the week, and stocks on the Toronto market are reported to be light, as are also stocks of West Indians, etc. Coffee remains practically unchanged, with market tending to become weaker. Spices, rice and tapioca, and foreign dried fruits, continue much as last week.

CANNED GOODS.

An active demand for all varieties of canned goods continues. In canned fruits there is a decidedly stronger feeling for canned strawberries, raspberries and peaches, owing to the expectation that the fruit crop for the coming season will be small, and there is a tendency to buy freely of the 1903 pack, owing to the uncertainty of the coming pack.

In vegetables, peas are pretty well sold out, the only obtainable grade being a few hundred cases of No. 3's in first hands. Corn is very scarce. Some is held in the Forest City, but is for sale only in conjunction with tomatoes. There are plenty of waxed beans, but a shortage in refugee. The Canadian Canners, however, have some 1½ lb. tins for sale, which will prevent any famine in this article. The tomato situation is perplexing to most of those to whom in past years it has been an open book. Apparently there is no visible surplus, and in fact everything points to a considerable shortage when the June and July trade makes itself felt on the market, and yet for all this almost every wholesale grocer is asking at what price he can sell more than at what price he can buy. Any one special buyer taking up 15,000 to 20,000 cases would convert the situation into one of considerable anxiety to one who did not hold stock. At present no one appears to be troubling about the market. New lobsters are beginning to arrive on the market. Talls and 1 lb. flats are scarce, stocks being confined to ½ lb. flats. SUGAR

The course of the sugar market has been interrupted by holidays in the United States during the week under review, and there is in consequence little of moment to record. After the very large business of the previous week, the only transaction in Cubans to record is the sale of 8,000 bags in port at 2 9-16c c. and f. basis 95, which is equivalent to 3.95c duty paid for basis 96. establishing spot quotation at this figure which, with New York granulated selling at basis 4.80 net cash, leaves the margin between raw and refined at 85c per hundred lbs., or 12½c less than for the same time last year. Refiners are indifferent to offerings of Cubans at the moment, owing to heavy arrivals for the week, which total 53,495 tons, an excess of 14,000 tons over meltings, which remain at the high figure of recent weeks, namely, 39,000 tons.

Total receipts since January 1 are 836,157 tons, an increase of 99,990 tons over those for the same period a year ago, while meltings since January 1 total 698,000 tons, an increase of 105,000 tons for the year. While transactions in Cubans have been light, it is reported that American refiners have purchased at least 12,000 tons of beet sugar in Europe at 10s. c. and f. New York, which is equivalent to parity of 4.03c duty paid for 96 test centrifugals. Despite these heavy purchases, beet sugars have reacted 3d per cwt. for the week. and are quoted as we go to press at 9s 4½d basis f. o. b. Hamburg, and the tone is reported easier. With beet and cane quotations on so near a parity it is evident that each will be very sensitive to the influence of the other for some time to come. Cubans for shipment are quoted firm at 3 15-16c duty paid, but this quotation is nominal, and it is doubtful if any quantity could be brought out on that basis, indications being more favorable to a realization of 4c duty paid, and holders' ideas are strong at 2 5-8c c. and f. for basis 95, which is equivalent to 4.01c duty paid, basis 96. The reason for this is evident, as indicated in the special at the foot of our report last week.

There are now only ten central factories grinding in Cuba as gaainst 118 for the previous week, while at the same time last year there were 90 in operation. The rapid closing of so many factories is due to the heavy rains prevailing throughout the island. The visible production to date is a little over 900,000 tons, and with so few factories continuing, it is hardly likely that more than 100,000 tons additional can be produced during the balance of the season. This is a most important factor, and it will be interesting to watch developments. Another strong factor in the position is the approaching season for large consumption of refined sugar in the United States, which sets in earlier there than in Canada; and those who are usually well informed still take an optimistic view of the future.

Combined stocks of U. S. and Cuba are 212,000 tons less than for the same time last year, while combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates show a decrease of 230,755 tons, the comparative figures being 3,037,887 tons for 1904, and 3,268,642 tons for 1903. There have been no changes in refined, either in Canada or the United States, during the past week. Our quotations are as follows :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The molasses and syrup market remains firm. Prices of New Orleans are so high that wholesalers are holding off until supplies are actually exhausted before re-stocking. Supplies in Toronto are reported to be at a low ebb. There has been an additional advance of 3 to 4c in New Orleans during the past week, and at present there is not much likelihood of any drop. Stocks of West Indian, Barbadoes and Porto Rico molasses are said to be about used up, and New Orleans is known to be within small compass locally. We quote the following prices :

TEAS

The tea market continues firm and steady, tending to become quieter during the week under review. In the Toronto market there are no new features to report.

The London, Eng., market, for the week of May, 13-19, is reported as follows: There is not much change in the value of Indians. Leaf grades up to 6½d were fully firm, ordinary kinds over this price passing somewhat irregularly and, if anything, easier, more particularly in the case of broken leaf of all descriptions, the proportionate supply of which is just now comparatively heavy. Mail advices from producing districts point to a rather late season. A good deal of further damage has been caused by hail in Cachar and elsewhere. Entries for export to the United Kingdom from May 1-15 are given as 372,000 lbs, as against 564,000 lbs. for the same period last year.

In Ceylon there is slightly less inquiry for common to fair kinds, but no material alterations in quotations can be recorded. Medium to fine ruled rather irregular, especially broken Pekoes, while the quality of several high-grown teas was rather disappointing. Colombo telegrams give the shipments to Great Britain for this month as 6 million lbs., as contrasted with 10¼ million lbs. actually shipped in May last year.

In China, the market at Hankow opened a short time since, and a moderate business is reported to have passed. The quality is said to be scarcely equal to that of last season, with prices much the same. Lowest quotation for common is 6¼d per lb. We quote the following prices:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues practically unchanged from last week. Prices of Rios are high, and comparatively little business is being done on the street. Ruling prices in Rios are from ½ to ⅜c lower than they were a month ago.

Latest cables from Europe report steady markets. Havre reports unchanged prices and Hamburg, after opening slightly higher, lost the improvement. No information has been received from primary markets, and it is inferred that they are holding to a steady basis. The New York markets, which practically control prices in Canada, were closed from Saturday till Tuesday. We quote the following prices:

SPICES.

The spice market continues steady and quiet, with last week's quotations unchanged. The tone of the market in peppers is, if anything, steadier, reflecting the strong advance reported latterly from primary markets. Our quotations are as follows:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There are no changes to report in rice and tapioca for the week under review. Advices from the south continue to name better prices for attractive grocery grades. The market both in rice and tapioca remains steady. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Trade in dried fruits is reported as quiet for the week. Owing to the interesting price of Valencia raisins there has been a big sale for them lately. The recent drop in California seeded is reported to have been due almost entirely to sentimental reasons, but the Ontario market has not been appreciably affected because comparatively small quantities of California seeded are used on this market. The market in Oregon prunes is exhibiting rather better feeling, the improvement being attributed entirely to persistent reports that the coming crop will be short, and to statements emanating from reliable sources that the holdings of 1903 prunes in the Northwest have been very closely cleaned up as a result of the low prices made on them during the past two months. We quote the following prices:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

What will be the development in the egg market during the next two weeks is rather uncertain. Large quantities are being offered, but there appears to be no tendency towards a drop in price. City dealers say it is the worst market they have been forced to handle for a long time. They see no profit for themselves at present prices, but they have to buy all that is shown. Country packers are said to be responsible for this state of affairs. They, of course, do not want to see an egg come into the cities, and to prevent it are offering high prices—prices not based on the relation of supply to demand. The laying in of such quantities as have been forwarded for the last two weeks is exceedingly risky, but there is no help for it. Instead of a quotation of 15 to 15½c, which prevails now, it should not be above 12½c. Naturally it would be supposed that when the supply so far exceeds the demand a drop would be sure to take place. This, however, does not always follow. Two years ago the competition of outside packers kept prices up all season to 14 and 15c. Then in the Spring pickled eggs had to be sold at 8 to 10c at a serious loss on the quantities that were carried. The loss is even greater to outside houses in such an event than to the city dealers, as the latter have a large local trade on which they make considerable profit. There is also the local outlet for seconds and cracked eggs, upon which the outside dealer has to pay freight and commission in order to dispose of them. It is expected that within a week or two a cent will be knocked off, but this is by no means certain. We quote the following prices:

The honey market continues quiet. Provision dealers are stocking up for the next season's trade, and farmers are holding for higher prices owing to the shortness of the last season's crop. Our quotations are as follows :

Fish.

A good trade in fish is reported during the week under review. Supplies are coming more freely, particularly from British Columbia. The Spring season—which usually reaches its height in April—was not as successful as usual this year, owing to its opening so late. Flounders are off the market. Mackerel are down to 15c, and lake trout to 7½c. We quote the following prices :

Green Fruits.

Trade in green fruits continues to improve steadily as the season advances, and daily shipments in large bulk from the south are becoming common. Shipments of fruit to the country are increasing. The end of the season in California navel oranges is not far distant, two cars, however, having arrived on the Toronto market on Wednesday of this week. Stocks of California navels, however, are showing marked signs of wastiness. At present the orange market is being largely supplied by Sorrento fruit, which arrived on the recent Spring shipment of Mediterranean fruit to Montreal. The better class of trade, however, will fall back upon the late California velencia oranges, which will arrive on the market in about two weeks, and will retail at $4.50 a box. A consignment of valencia oranges from Mediterranean points, which has arrived in Montreal on the steamer Bellona, is due to be sold during the present week.

The Spring shipment of lemons to Montreal was, on the whole, satisfactory, especially the consignments from Verdilli. There was a large proportion of fresh-cut Palermos, which are apt to waste when exposed to extreme warm weather. Reasonable prices may be expected in lemons on account of the unusual length of the cold season this Spring. Already 300's have dropped 25c in price. Pines are in big demand, and lower prices need not be expected in finer qualities, for which the ruling price tends firmer. Bahamas for preserving are not plentiful, and the trade is depending on Havanas. The first Florida pines will arrive on the market next Friday. Sizes will be smaller this year than usual, being mostly 30s and 36s. Almeria grapes are out of the market. Florida tomatoes are scarce and 25c firmer in price. The season is now between the Florida and Texas crop for tomatoes. Strawberries are 2c easier and are arriving freely. Boxes are larger than earlier in the season, and little difficulty is experienced in turn-over. The banana market is in good shape, a good demand being reported at prices firmer than usual. We quote the following prices :

California navels, per box	3 00	4 00

Vegetables.

A fair trade is doing in vegetables, with a particularly good demand for green stuff of all descriptions, which is comparatively difficult to obtain. Potatoes are becoming plentiful and are from 10 to 15c easier in price than last week. The demand for onions is not brisk, quotations on Egyptians being from 25 to 50c lower, while Bermuda onions are 50c easier. Radishes are 10c easier in price, and green cucumbers have also dropped. Cucumbers are $1 higher than they were last year at this date. Cucumbers by the dozen are from 10 to 20c lower. New potatoes in bags are on the market this week for the first time—Texas stock—and are quoted at $2 per bushel. Green cabbage is from 25 to 50c firmer in price, while waxed beans are 50c easier. We quote the following prices :

Potatoes, per bag	1 00	1 15

Seeds.

The seed trade continues to be satisfactory. A good demand is reported in corn, which will likely continue up to the first of July. Dent corn is 5c easier than last week. Millet and Hungarian are quiet; only a dry season creates a brisk demand for them, and comparatively little is being used this year on account of the luxuriant pasture. Our quotations are as follows :

GRAIN.

Crop prospects in Ontario are improving, the weather during the past week being favorable to grain growing. In Manitoba there were never better prospects for a big crop than at the end of May this year. Everything, however, depends on the month of June, which is the crucial month for western grain.

Rail rates on grain from the northwest to eastern Atlantic seaboard ports have been reduced 2½c for the next thirty days.

The Indian wheat crop now promises to be only 1,600,000 bushels more than last year, which was 295,000,000 bushels. Exports from there last week, 1,840,000; previous week, 1,400,000; last year, 1,064,000; since April, 9,444,000; last year, 3,656,000, which is an increase, while Argentina's exports of wheat are less than expected.

Foster, a well-known weather expert, says a spell of cold weather will follow this week, continuing until June 7, and second week of June will be hot. From June 18 to 23 will be hot, followed by falling temperatures to the close of the month. He does not say whether there will be a wet harvest, as there has been last two seasons.

The local wheat market is dull. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is from ½ to 1c easier, and red wheat 1c easier. The range of prices in barley is 2c less than last week. Quotations in buckwheat and rye are nominal. We quote the following prices :

Washed wool is commencing to come in and, from all appearances, it is in good condition. The hide market is quiet but firm. The calfskin season is pretty well over, but prices continue firm. QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, June 2, 1904.

Groceries.

BUSINESS men generally are pleased with the situation. Money seems to be coming in well from the country. The volume of trade is larger than it was at the same period last year, and everything looks hopeful in the grocery business. In the country things are a little quiet, as the farmers have been busy planting, etc. The actual movement of merchandise has been large, especially in coffee and sugar. The heavy advance in both raw and refined sugar has not in any way put a damper on the sales, and the firmness has been steadily maintained. The market for coffee, however, has been considered dull and drooping, but tea is very active, and the prospects are extremely bright. May pickings of Japan are reported steady to the advance, and, although the advertisers say they have first shipment stocks, only one has as yet come to hand, and this only a small parcel, when this was written. One of the largest firms has a fine lot of new crop Japan tea in the first shipment, and they expect the price to range from 30 to 35c. It is usual for a large quantity of first crop Japan tea to go to United States, but this year a large percentage is coming to Canada. In spices, lower quotations are made for pepper, and the balance of the list is about steady. The market for fruit and nuts is quiet, with California raisins reported on the decline. Tarragona almonds are reported to be higher. Plenty of molasses is in sight, and the market is still weak. In canned goods, as presaged by The Grocer some weeks ago, tomatoes have reached a strong position, and are in good demand, with a decided firmness. The stocks in all canned goods are small, and the supplies limited. Dried fruits are slow. Finnan haddie are reported running light in weight this season, and packers claim higher prices should be obtained; in fact, one large packer reports putting up at cost and over. Canary seed is away up in price, and is selling to importers at 4 1-4c. Canadian chicory is selling at from 7 1-2 to 9c. The demand for sardines has increased rapidly, and there is a fine demand. Jobbers are reporting activity in evaporated apples, and as high as 6 1-2c has been paid. However, the Trenton firm supposed to have the "corner" are not making as much as was at first thought by outsiders. The inland steamers and the railways are carrying abundance of grocery freight, and things look well all around.

SUGAR.

The strong position held by sugar has been maintained, and the general feeling is that further advances may take place. Sympathy with the raw market still rules, and no doubt the market is restless, with a steadily advancing tendency. A most satisfactory feature of the European situation is the great increase in consumption in continental countries, where the article has been cheapened on account of fiscal changes, which accompanied the abolition of the sugar bounties. The United States consumption may increase to possibly 200,000 tons, but last year there was no increase there at all, owing to the cool Summer and a poor fruit crop. Everything, according to experts, points to the balance of the world's stock which will have to be carried forward after Oct. 1 prox. being under 900,000 tons, as compared with 1,470,000 tons on Oct. 1, 1903.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

COFFEE.

Reports from New York show a weakening in the coffee market, owing, it is said, to the new crop Brazils having been received at primary ports, and the fact that deliveries during the Summer are generally the lightest of the year. Central American, Colombia and Mexican coffee have been offered at low prices. The outlook from Brazil is for a dragging market. We quote:

TEA.

From the east comes the news that Russia has been a great buyer of Congou teas of all grades, and when the market opened at Hankow it was much stronger and higher than it was last year at the corresponding period. The prices paid were reported to be 2 and 3c higher than last year. From Formosa it is learned that the receipts of tea amounted to 10,000 packages, comparing with 108,000 packages same time last year. Japan tea is looking very hopeful, and the large dealers seem to think that the market is more favorable to buyers than it ever was, and the tone of the market for all kinds of tea is healthy. CANNED GOODS.

All kinds of canned goods are firm, and the supplies are small, with stocks all low. In sardines, the position is strong, and there is a scarcity of fish. From Eastport, Me., it was reported that the run of sardines continued very poor, and that fish coming in were selling at $14 to $25 a hogshead. Some of the principal packers who have been offering three-quarter oils of 1903 packing have cleaned up the remnants of their stock and are out of the market until the run of fish admits of packing. Tomatoes are very strong; in fact, all kinds of fruit and vegetables are holding firm. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Demand is good for dried fruits of different varieties, but there seems to be a heavy stock of prunes and raisins in the hands of the big merchants. Currants still maintain their strong position, and reports from Greece indicate that the damage done by frost previously reported was very slight. Last cable advices quoted 12s 9d to 13s per cwt. for fine amalia grapes, in barrels. That market was said to be strong under the influence of the agitation over the proposed new legislation, and the comparatively light holdings of the old crop. This was given as between 12,000 and 15,000 tons—a very small carryover for this period of the year.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre report for The Canadian Grocer as follows: Currants—Nothing new has come to hand in regard to the proposed legislation in Greece. It is, however, only a question of the extent of increase that will ensue in cost to the consumer. Sultanas—Fresh reports received from the interior of Turkey in Asia, concerning the crop now growing, confirm the expectation that it will be less than half of that of last year. The weather in first half of May continued damp and cloudy, with occasional showers of rain. Filberts—Although for May delivery export demand at Messina continued light, the tone of the market is firmer, owing to local demand. New crop, October delivery, is also better held, there being occasional buyers both for speculative and shipping contracts. Shelled walnuts—Cables of this week show further decline, amounting to a slump under continued lack of demand.

Green Fruits.

Dulness still holds the fruit market. The heavy importation of oranges and lemons has just glutted the market, and it will have to recover by itself. The sale of the ss. Jacona cargo last week included lemons principally, and the prices brought were almost ridiculous. No American buyers were in attendance, and instead of 60 per cent. of the fruit going to the United States it has all remained in Canada, and principally was bought by Toronto and Montreal buyers. No quotable change has taken place. We quote:

Fish.

Gaspe salmon for the first time enlivened the fish market this week, and sold at the land office price of 23 to 25c. These prices will not last long, but this popular fish always rules strong for a week or so. All kinds of fresh fish are coming in freely, and there has been a remarkable increase in the demand for all kinds of fish. Notice to the Trade.

We are informed on positive authority that the Canadian Canners, Limited, are soliciting orders for canned goods under the label—"Quakeress" brand—to be packed by the firm of A. B. Saylor & Co., of this place, a firm that these people bought out a few weeks ago, and who, up to that time packed goods under the "Saylor Boy" and "Reindeer" brands, but never under the "Quakeress" brand. We believe that the introduction of "Quakeress" brand by the Canadian Canners, Limited, is done to confuse the public and to the detriment and injury of the established and well known "Quaker" brand, which is protected by registration. We have asked the Canadian Canners, Limited, to withdraw the "Quakeress" label from the market, and if we do not get satisfactory assurance that this will be done, we will apply to the Courts for an injunction to restrain them from using this label.

privileges of common-point rates in southern Kootenay to Nelson and Rossland for transcontinental freight. This will practically give Nelson and Rossland distributing point rates and facilities. Freight destined for other points will have to pay the Nelson and Rossland common-point rate plus local rate from either point to destination. The change is chiefly for economic reasons, it being unprofitable to carry small lots to out-of-the-way points at common rates.

Northern direct shipments, that is via Skagway and White Horse to Dawson, have begun to pick up. The steamer Amur, which sailed last night for the north, had over 300 tons, all consigned by local wholesalers, for Dawson and other Yukon points. The major part of it was provisions and produce, with small lots of dry goods and hardware. The heavy shipments for next Winter's stocks will not begin before July 1.

Settlers from eastern Canadian points and from the Old Country continue to arrive in the Okanagan and other favorable farming districts of the province, mainly bent on fruit growing. Mr. R. M. Palmer, provincial freight rates commissioner, who is also closely in touch with the Horticultural Department of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, has just returned from the Okanagan, and he says that there is a wonderful change in that section. The subdividing of several large ranches into small plots of ten acres and thereabouts, affords the opportunity for many settlers to come in and buy places at reasonable cost, and from which they can in a very few years produce a good living from fruit and other products. There are other sections of the province awaiting development, and some, such as the Chilliwack District in the Valley of the Fraser River, where a great advance has been made. Many new settlers have come to the Fraser Valley, as well as to the upper country. Fruit is favorably grown on the lower mainland, as well as in the interior, while the chances for dairy farming are perhaps superior.

A good deal of interest has been aroused again in the Grand Trunk Pacific project, by the announcement made this week from Ottawa, on the authority of some of the British Columbia members of the House, that construction of the road will be simultaneous from this end of the road and from the eastern end. The chief interest, however, is in the time when active operations commence. There is some impatience to see work being done, and some natural scepticism is caused by the frequent delays.

Early in June the Kosmos Line steamer Luxor will reach port with 1,200 tons of raw sugar from Peru, for the local refinery. Two steamers are also said to be under charter to load at Java sugar ports for the British Columbia Sugar Refinery also. The dates of their arrival have not yet been announced.

In the grocery markets, since last writing, a rise in the price of sugar is to be noted. The quotation is now 5⅛c for granulated. The B. C. Sugar Refinery's last published price list is as follows :

Extra superior bar sugar, 40 lb. tins, 7⅞c; powdered icing and bar, 6⅝c; Paris lumps, 6⅛c; granulated, 5⅛c; extra C, 4½c; fancy yellow, 4⅜c; yellow, 4¼c.

General prices of groceries have not changed appreciably since last advices.

Fruit is beginning to be quite interesting, a good line of fresh fruits being displayed. Yesterday the first strawberries from Washington arrived, oddly enough before there have been any supplies from Oregon, which is usually a week or two the earlier. The variety from Washington, which was not a large shipment, was Clarke's seedling. The shipment came from Walla Walla, and is fairly good in quality. The price is quoted at $4.50 for the crate containing 2 dozen boxes. The California berries are becoming scarcer and are now quoted at $2.65 for the crate of 15 boxes, which is the manner of shipment from there.

Cherries are coming forward liberally from California, the only variety yet being the Black Tartarian. The price is still $2 for the 10 lb. box. Some extra fine pineapples from Mexico were among receipts from San Francisco via Seattle yesterday, reaching here by steamer. The price is $3.75 per doz.

Tomatoes in 40 lb. crates of six baskets each arriving from Florida are selling at $4.50 for the crate. They are a little better quality than the California article, which is selling at $2.75 to $3.75 the 20 lb. crate.

Oranges are stiffening up in price. The first arrivals of Mediterranean sweets are on the market, and the seedlings are coming in more freely. Navals will not be quoted much after the first week in June. Prices are now from $2.75 to $3.75 for navels as to quality, $2.50 to $2.75 for seedlings, and $3 to $3.25 for Mediterranean sweets. Lemons are moving freely now, and are quoted at $3.25 to $3.75. Bananas, $3 to $3.25 per bunch.

In vegetables a full line of green goods is now coming forward. Local grown lettuce, rhubarb and bunch radishes, onions, spinach, etc., are on the market, string beans, green peas, cabbage and asparagus being from California.

In dry onions the new crop California reds are coming in and are quoted at 2½ to 3c, while there are still some Australians on the market at 3½ to 4c.

Potatoes have not yet weakened much in price, as there are now new ones coming forward. The stocks are keeping well yet, and will amply meet all requirements.

In produce there is but little to record this week. The supply of butter is regular now, eastern shipments arriving in sufficient quantities, with the local supplies, to make the market easy. Quotations on the next arrivals from the east are to be lower, about 20c. Local creamery is 25c, and likely to hold firm at that.

Eggs are quoted at 22½ to 23c; cheese, new stock, 12c.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,

St. John, N. B. May 30 1904.

THERE is a good steady business reported. A new feature is a letter addressed by the Retailers' Association to the different wholesale grocers, advising that they intend to buy only from such wholesale houses as do not sell to the consumer. Particularly they protest against the breaking of packages by the wholesaler in order to fill orders from consumers. With few exceptions the jobbers are prepared to fall in with the wish of the retailers, in fact, several of the larger jobbers have for years refused to sell other than dealers. The smaller jobbers are inclined to argue. They say many consumers, particularly hotels and boarding houses, buy in at least as large quantities as the retailer; that several of the retailers are wholesalers and retailers combined, and that without exception whenever possible they import goods, thus cutting the local jobber out entirely; that the understanding desired by the retailer is altogether one-sided; that they are continually asked by the retailer to break packages of even standard goods.

The larger dealers, as noted, are well pleased with the condition. They do not want the consumer's trade. It is only a nuisance, they say. As a rule the consumer gains little, because they are usually charged retail prices. They seem slow to learn this; they seem to think goods, if bought from the wholesaler, must be cheap.

In markets the general tone is firm, but in a few lines there is continued weakness. This is particularly noticed in pure lard, which is lower than ever. In cream of tartar the market is rather firmer, and there is another slight advance in lard.

Oil.

The price in Nova Scotia is usually a little lower than in New Brunswick, owing to the low water freights from Boston, which makes increased competition. Some few weeks ago prices there were reduced 1c, and last week, in sympathy with this, the local quotation was marked down 1c. Dealers claim, however, that the only reason for this is the keen competition, and that otherwise the market is a very firm one. There continues to be a steady demand. The busiest season in lubricating oil is over, as far as booking orders is concerned. Prices are held firm, while shipments are being freely made.

Linseeds continue low, with rather less sale. Turpentine, which has been quoted very high for some time is rather lower. In fish oils, while the season is yet early, a rather easy market is anticipated.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse sale a large stock is held. The demand this Spring has not been as large as dealers anticipated. Prices are held firm, and it will be some weeks before further arrivals are expected. Liverpool factory filled salt is in rather light supply and prices are quite low. In Canadian fine, shipments are coming forward freely, with prices unchanged. At this season the demand is largely for cheese and butter salt.

Canned Goods.

There is little of particular interest. For some well known brands of salmon, which have a regular demand in our market, open orders are being given. Packers of salmon call the coming season a short pack year. There is little demand in late years for high-priced sockeye fish. Our dealers will have sufficient stock of vegetables to carry them through, though stock of corn is light, and higher prices are being quoted. Considerable interest is manifested in reference to the future. It looks as if several of our large buyers would be outside of the association, and from the present outlook they will have no difficulty in buying goods. In fruits there seems to be a fair supply. Peaches are rather light stock. In gallon apples the demand has not been very large, and quite full stocks are still held. Blueberries are scarce. Oysters are firm. Canned clams are now freely offered, new stock being to hand. Lobsters are high. The outlook is for quite a large pack of sardines, although season is very early. New haddies are offered. Kippered herring are scarce.

Green Fruits.

Dealers are very busy. Large quantities of Mediterranean oranges have been received and have sold low. In Valencia oranges higher prices are asked. California oranges are much higher, and there is less demand. In lemons low prices still rule. Bananas continue to be short supply, and full prices are asked. There is a fair demand for pines. Strawberries have been somewhat scarce during the week, owing to a strike at American points. Large quantities of domestic rhubarb are to hand, and low prices rule. Tomatoes are a little lower and are selling more freely.

Dried Fruits.

This is a quiet season. In prunes prices continue low, and there is a fair sale. Raisins are dull and all lines are quoted rather lower. In loose muscatels, quite a full stock is held here. Evaporated apples are firmer and higher prices are expected. Sale this season is large. Dates are low. There is increased demand for package goods.

Onions.

It is getting late for Bermuda stock. Egyptians are still quite freely received, but sales are somewhat slow. Prices continue quite low. The quality of the stock received this year has not been very satisfactory.

Peanuts.

High prices are still held.

Sugar.

Market continues firm, and during the week there has been a slight advance. Dealers are holding full stocks, and there is a steady sale. Some domestic granulated from Ontario has been received. The quality is quite satisfactory, except that the color is rather dark. In foreign sugar there continues to be a fair business done by dealers outside of the guild.

Molasses.

A further large cargo of Porto Rico molasses has been received here. So far all direct shipments have come to one importing house. Besides this quite a quantity of Porto Rico molasses has been received via Halifax, and also via American ports. In Porto Rico grade the market is very firm. There continues to be much interest taken in the molasses situation by the local merchants, and special efforts are being made toward a more satisfactory condition. It is impossible at present to foretell the outcome. In Barbadoes molasses quite large stocks are held, and quality is good. Prices are low, and the market is not particularly strong. There has not been as much molasses going into consumption this Spring as usual, owing to uncertain conditions.

Fish.

Attention is now chiefly given to fresh fish. Quite large quantities of gaspereau have been taken this week, and the catch will be at least an average one. In shad, receipts have not been large. They have, however, shown improvement, and there will be a small quantity of pickled shad on the market. Salmon are a little more plentiful, but prices are still high. In these lines large quantities are taken in St. John harbor and the near vicinity. Our salmon are particularly fine; by far the larger quantity of them are shipped fresh to Boston. In dry codfish and pollock, the market is rather easier, stock coming to hand more freely. Pickled herring have little sale; there is very light suuply. Smoked herring are very scarce.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

While there has been no change in price during the week, the market is very firm, particularly Ontario grades, and there is a fair business. Feed is rather more freely offered, but there is little if any change in price, and there is a fair demand. Oats and oatmeal are unchanged, and sales are not large. In beans, market is dull. Barley and split peas are in light supply. Cornmeal is unchanged. In seeds, season is about over, and prices have ruled quite low.

A GROCER THE PRESIDENT OF THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

DAVID ROWLAND FRANCIS, president of the St. Louis Exposition, was born October 1, 1850, in Richmond, Kentucky, of the pioneer Blue Grass stock, who lived by hunting, trapping and stealing horses. Their odd hours were employed in tilling the soil and raising tobacco, which they smoked, and corn which they translated into whisky to warm their hearts and comfort the dullness of the wilderness, and for relaxation held fairs and shooting matches where they not only shot the beef but ran races and wrestled and unbuckled in rough-and-tumble scrimmages of a variety known as the first-eye-out-for fun.

The education of Mr. Francis began in the Richmond Academy, and ended in his twentieth year, 1870, at Washington University, in the City of St. Louis. Being done with books he broke into trade by the way of a grocery store, in which he performed to the firm's satisfaction in the double role of salesman and shipping clerk. Mark Hanna and many another Alexander of commerce has made a grocery store his first battle-ground. For over five years Mr. Francis sold and shipped groceries, and at the expiration of this period he founded the grain business of D. R. Francis & Bro. Nothing but good came of this move, as is proved by a fortune of some six million dollars he has collected.

Mr. Francis has an undoubted genius for business. He possesses a quick, aggressive instinct where a dollar is the prize, and is a hawk to see and a hawk to swoop at every money opportunity.

He made money from the beginning, piling up the dollars, thousnad upon thousand. The original house of D. R. Francis & Bro. still stands, and has never had a draft protested or an obligation overdue. Besides grain and its exportation, Mr. Francis carries wide-flung interests, and is a director in the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., the St. Louis and Colorado Railway, and the Merchants-La-Clede National Bank. He has also been president of the Merchants' Exchange.

Being six feet tall, strong mentally and physically, successful in business and a married man—for, mind you, in politics a wife is as important to a man as a pedestal to a statue—Mr. Francis has naturally made a success of politics. In 1885 he was elected mayor of St. Louis. His services in this capacity were so acceptable that in 1888 he became Governor of the State of Missouri. In 1893 Mr. Francis was approached by President Cleveland on the subject of a foreign ministry or ambassadorship, but declined the offer. In 1896 he served in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet as Secretary of the Interior. It is not unlikely that Mr. Francis will be the next Democratic candidate for the presidency of the United States.

When Mr. Francis accepted the presidency of the St. Louis Exposition, he meant every word of that acceptance. He has toiled like a galley-slave at his duties, and the victory of the enterprise will be in no small measure due to the industry and wise force he has thrown into it.

TRADE CONDITIONS IN TRINIDAD.

LATEST trade reports from Trinidad under date of May 18 are as follows: The market in breadstuffs is exhibiting little activity, but bottom rates would seem to have been reached, and a gradual advance in values generally is now probable. Stocks of all items are now appreciably reduced.

In the provision market all salted meats are in full supply, and the steady decline in Chicago quotations makes business difficult. Lard is in much the same position. Pork loins, ribs, etc., are all readily salable.

The recent improvement in fishstuffs has been maintained, and prospects are encouraging. Stocks are much reduced. Arrivals of Newfoundland cure, for which there is now an improved inquiry, have not been recent. Shipments of various descriptions are likely to do well, as supplies are low. Good split herring are salable, but both salmon and mackerel are neglected.

Stocks of potatoes are about exhausted. Both blue mottled and brown soaps are moving slowly, and prices are now easier for all qualities. The weather has been favorable for reaping sugar cane, and some estates have been enabled to finish the crop. If the fine season continues a fortnight longer most of the canes will have been gathered. With prices gradually advancing abroad, planters are not anxious to force sales for the present.

Very restricted supplies of cocoa are now being marketed, and no increase of importance is expected until towards October, when the next picking is likely to commence.

How are Grocery Profits eked out?

Is it not by multiplied sales? In the matter of Soda Biscuits, more money can be made with than with any other make o brand.

This is history, fact, not mere assertion. Many grocers are ready to testify.

GREEN FRUITS

IN the Glasgow Herald of May 14 a special correspondent of that paper gives a detailed account of the prospects of the British fruit crop, in which Canadian fruit growers are especially interested, owing to its influence on the price of Canadian export fruit.

He says: "A visit to the fruit fields of the United Kingdom enables us to say that the coming fruit crops will be excellent. Some of them will be above the average, and others of an ordinary nature, and all of superior quality. Last season the crop, with one or two exceptions, was a failure. Fruit-preserving firms were compelled to depend upon foreign pulps for their jams, and for the past six months good jam made from home-grown fruit has been one of the scarcest delicacies in the British markets. Fruit-preserving firms have become important customers to commercial fruit growers, many of whom cater to them almost exclusively. Hundreds of tons of fruit have already been sold by contract for delivery during the coming season. The fruit harvest of 1904 should prove a boon to the British fruit producer."

The conclusions of this correspondent in regard to the various classes may be summarized as follows: The apple crop will be well up to the average; the pear crop heavy, probably a record one. Strawberries and gooseberries promise big crops, but black currants will be below the average. Cherries and plums will give medium yields.

California Deciduous Crop.

IN view of the fact that California fresh fruit is beginning to arrive on the Canadian market, it is interesting to know that the prospects are favorable for a splendid crop of fresh shipping fruit from California this season. If eastern market conditions warrant, shipments will likely equal, if not surpass, in quantity, those of last year, which exceeded the shipments of any previous season.

There will be a shortage of certain varieties of green fruits, occasioned by unfavorable results following the protracted rainy season prevailing in February and March, which caught almonds, apricots, the Japanese varieties of plums and prunes, and some varieties of peaches. This shortage, however, will be more than made up by the heavier crop of other fruits, such as the Bartlett pear, of which there will be an abundant crop. Grapes also promise an abundant yield.

A fine crop of the earlier varieties of shipping peaches, such as Hales and Alexanders, is expected. Crawfords are none too plentiful. Midsummer and late peaches promise an abundant crop, but cling peaches are not so promising.

Cherries are the first fruit to appear on the eastern market, already eleven cars having been shipped from the coast. Special attention is being paid to packing, a great many boxes being double-faced; some shippers are packing in small cartons, packing eight cartons to a box, which method has brought forth many favorable comments from the trade. Following cherries come apricots, plums, prunes and peaches, then grapes. California fruit stands up better after being placed on sale than local fruits. The reason assigned is that during the marketing season, namely, from May to October, scarcely any rains fall, enabling the fruit to ripen and mature in a hard condition, and bears transportation thousands of miles, en route for eastern markets. Toronto will be the distributing centre for Ontario this season, and the fruit will be sold entirely at auction.

Fruit Importations.

The following table represents the importations of fruits and vegetables at Toronto and Montreal for the year 1903:

Apples in Northwest.

It is interesting to know that several parties in Medicine Hat and district are trying the hardier varieties of apples with success. One party is growing the Duchess of Oldenburg apple trees and the Transcendant apple trees with good success, in an exposed position. The trees have come through their third winter and are leafing out at the present time. Encouraging success has also been had with the small fruits and berries.

Onions From Australia.

After several failures, Australian exporters of onions appear to have found out the proper method of preparing raw onions for shipment to Canada. A large shipment of Australian onions, packed in bags, and in excellent condition, arrived recently in Vancouver, B.C., by the steamship Miowera. These crossed the Pacific in small but strongly crated packages.

Heretofore onion shipments from Australia have arrived in very bad condition, as in most cases they began to sweat in the tropics, and lost all their salable properties before reaching their destination. Crated in open-work cases, the onions made the passage on the Miowera without damage of any kind.

Ontario and British Columbia Fruit.

In Ontario strawberries have been particularly hard hit by the severe weather, especially in the Lake Erie and Niagara districts. Where farmers covered the beds well, the strawberry plants have pulled through; in many cases, however, farmers report having ploughed in twenty-five to thirty acres of Winter-killed plants. The total crop is estimated now at one-half the usual yield.

R. M. Palmer, head of the fruit department of British Columbia, reports that present indications point to a good apple and plum crop in the Okanagan region, although it is a little early in the season to form a definite estimate.

Japs Prefer Blossoms to Fruit.

"I would hesitate to say that the Japs would rather fight than eat," said a Philadelphian who has spent considerable time in Japan, "but I do know that they would rather feast their eyes than their stomachs. They are great lovers of the beautiful, and that is the reason there is little fruit raised in Japan, in spite of the fact that there are plenty of fruit trees, and the climate is ideal. Instead of allowing the blossoms to remain on the trees and mature, they are cut off in sprays and are used for decorating the interiors of the houses. The Japs would much rather use the blossoms in this way than raise the fruit. Imagine an American using cherry blossoms for decorative purposes rather than eating the cherries. But, then, the American hasn't the poetic soul of the Jap."—Philadelphia Record.

Nova Scotia Apples to England.

The total shipments of apples from Nova Scotia during the past season are estimated at 400,000 barrels, nearly all of which were forwarded via the port of Halifax. Leading dealers estimate that, taking the home market figures into consideration, over 500,000 barrels of merchantable apples were harvested in the Annapolis Valley last Autumn, which averaged $2.75 a barrel. The outlook for this year is excellent. The snow, which came on early in the Winter, remained, protecting the roots, and as a result the trees are already beginning to put forth strong, hardy buds.

Strawberry Arrivals.

McWilliam & Everist, fruit and commission merchants, Toronto, report the arrival of seventeen cars of strawberries during the present season to date. The total was composed of twelve cars of North Carolina stock, one of Tennessee, two of Maryland, and two of Delaware stock.

JAPANESE TEA REPORT

From our own Correspondent.

Kobe, May 4, 1904.

THE question of re-firing tea in the producing districts, as against re-firing in the commercial centres, such as Kobe and Yokohama, is one that is being considered in the trade at present.

By re-firing in the producing districts soon after the first curing process, the flavor and other original quality of the leaf will be retained, while by transporting the leaf in what is commonly called "raw" condition to the shipping ports, not only the flavor but other desirable qualities original to the tea leaf are lost, especially when the leaf is allowed to remain in the seller's hands for an indefinite period, when the market happens to be inactive.

Besides the foregoing, there are other advantages to be derived from re-firing in the interior, such as cheaper labor and land, as compared with Kobe and Yokohama where the value of land especially, is still steadily advancing. While there are such advantages in re-firing in the producing districts, one disadvantage is the fact that in some districts the production is too small for producing a line of tea suitable for export. Besides, though not always advisable, the mixing of various descriptions of leaf is sometimes necessary for a good blend.

From indications presented in the Sluzinka districts it appears most probable that tea-firing establishments in the interior will be owned and worked by the local tea men, and that the custom may be established by which tea will be re-fired and prepared in the interior to the order of exporters who will furnish standard samples.

Under existing conditions the result of competition between Japanese and foreign exporters is the high prices in Japan and low prices in foreign markets. Japanese producers reap the benefit of such competition, while exporters suffer, and the sooner the barrier is broken down the better it will be for the industry as a whole. It is, however, to be feared that such a desirable end is as remote as ever, as it is rumored that the late representatives of the Japan Tea Traders' Association in the United States and Canada are going to establish themselves as commission merchants in order to handle exclusively the consignments of the Japanese exporters, with the solitary exception of the Fuji Co.

It is thought that by doing away with the competition, and by a closer connection and co-operation with foreigners, it will greatly benefit Japanese commercial dealings, in regard to which there is still much to be desired. Commercial Japan is certainly far behind, as compared with the valor, bravery and patriotism of the military classes. Commercial squeezes will then disappear and legitimate profits only will be aimed at.

The efforts made to increase the sale of Japan tea with the aid of a Government subsidy (recently discontinued) have, it would appear, been signal failures. Apart from the undesirability of the subsidy from one point of view, the failure is, of course, due to the unsatisfactory measures adopted, or at least to the unsatisfactory execution of those measures. Possibly the fund might have been made useful if it had been placed at the disposal of a committee appointed by Japanese and foreign tea merchants, and if with its aid tea had been introduced into new markets. Then it might perhaps have been so usefully employed that in a few years the subsidy would have been no longer necessary. Instead, however, inexperienced representatives were sent abroad to fight against experienced foreigners in markets where tea had long since been introduced.

From a report appearing in Japanese papers, it appears that the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association is going to petition the Government for a subsidy of yen 35,000 yearly for five years. It will be interesting to watch how, in the event of the subsidy being granted, the fund will be employed. The first transaction in the new leaf took place on the 2nd May. Four piculs Kishin leaf changed hands at yen 36.00 per picul, which is about 20 per cent. lower as compared with the first business last season, which took place a week earlier.

COX'S GELATINE.

THERE is perhaps no name more closely associated with the manufacture of gelatine than that of G. and J. Cox, of Gorgie Mills, Edinburg, Scotland. Almost throughout the entire English-speaking world the name of Cox is a household word, and what housewife is not familiar with the striking red, white and blue tartan pattern of the boxes in which Messrs. Cox pack their gelatine?

Cox's gelatine has long been known and used largely throughout Canada and the United States, and a few words regarding the makers and their product will be of general interest.

The Cox firm is one of the oldest in Scotland. To trace its origin one has to go back to the beginning of the eighteenth century. The business came into existence in 1725, in the ancient burgh of Linlithgow, under the walls of the palace of the Scottish kings. Some thirty or forty years later the business was transferred to the Scottish metropolis, where it has remained until the present time, though it was not until 1798 that it was removed to its present quarters at Gorgie, some two miles west of the centre of the city. The manufacture of gelatine, though dating from 1840, is, when compared with the great age of the Cox firm, of comparatively recent growth. The sixty odd years that have elapsed since then have been years of rapid progress, not only in the extent of the business, but in its methods.

The great essential in gelatine manufacture, owing to the nature of the materials and of the product, is cleanliness, and in this respect the Cox factory at Gorgie will yield the palm to none. All the processes from the treatment of the carefully purified ox hides, which form the basis of the gelatine, to the final boxing of the finished gelatine, are carried out with scrupulous care. Nothing offensive meets the eye, and everywhere are evidences of the close attention given to those small details which go to make perfection in gelatine.

The packing room, where the sparkling gelatine, which is the final product of the process, is boxed, is a busy hive of industry. Rows of bright-faced girls deftly fill the gelatine into cardboard boxes and cover them with paper printed in the red, white and blue Cox tartan.

Quite recently the Cox firm placed on the market their "Instant Powdered Gelatine." This is precisely the same article as the "Sparkling Shredded Gelatine," but owing to its finely powdered condition it dissolves far more rapidly in hot water. Indeed it is claimed for "Instant Powdered Gelatine" that it is one of the most rapidly dissolving gelatines obtainable. In these days of hurry and bustle, when no time may be wasted, the saving of time attained by the use of the "Instant Gelatine" is a great boon to the busy housewife. The most delicious jellies and blancmanges (and what are better than those made in one's own kitchen?) may be prepared, thanks to Cox's "Instant Powdered Gelatine," with much less trouble than ever before.

A prominent feature in the Cox works in recent years is the chemical laboratory, where the entire process of manufacture is subjected from start to finish to the most careful examination. All the raw materials are carefully tested and all the finished gelatine is examined, and rejected if it does not conform to the high standard of the firm. In short, nothing is omitted that may aid the company in placing before the public an article on which they may implicitly rely as being of a uniformly high standard of excellence.

Grain Inspection.

IN every American port on the Atlantic seaboard, namely, Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans and Galveston, the inspection of grain is in the hands of the boards of trade, chambers of commerce and like organizations. Montreal grain men are seriously inquiring why they should be tied up by the Dominion Government, so as to virtually have no control whatever over grain inspection.

A special general meeting of the Montreal Corn Exchange Association was held on May 27, relative to this matter. Under the new enactments introduced at Ottawa all the power of the old board of survey is done away with, inasmuch as any decision which they may reach is subject always to the approval of the inspectors, who are appointed by the Dominion Government. In the old days the members of the Corn Exchange Association had what was known as a board of grain examiners, and any decision reached by an inspector could be overthrown by this board. Now, however, the inspector becomes the last court of appeal.

What the grain men want is that grain inspectors be placed under the control of the Montreal Board of Trade. The following resolution was offered and carried unanimously:

"That a deputation be appointed to proceed to Ottawa and advocate before the committee on the Grain Inspection Bill the placing of the inspection of grain under the control of the Board of Trade, as is the custom in the United States Atlantic ports, but that failing to secure the Government's approval to this recommendation, the deputation shall press for the amendment of certain sections of the bill. Also that the co-operation of the Board of Trade be sought in placing the views of the meeting before the Government.

Grain Prospects.

Owing to the damage done to Winter wheat in Ontario this year's crop is estimated at 15,500,000 bushels, to which will probably be added about 2,500,000 bushels of Spring wheat, making a total of 19,000,000 bushels of wheat, or about 5,000,000 bushels less than last year.

The prospects in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories have never been better. The acreage under crop will total about 4,300,000 acres, with a probable outturn of 80,500,000 bushels, making the probable Dominion outturn of all kinds of wheat 99,500,000 bushels.

Estimated consumption for 12 months	36,500,000 bush.
Estimated amount needed for seed	12,000,000 "
Total Dominion requirements	48,500,000 "
Leaving for export wheat and flour, both Winter and Spring wheat	51,000,000 "
	99,500,000 "

The bulk of the export will be hard Spring wheat or hard Spring wheat flour.

South Africa Likes Canadian Flour.

OWING to good missionary work on the part of a representative of a certain Canadian milling industry, a demand has been created in South Africa for Canadian flour, largely because of its superiority over other importations. This opinion is expressed by F. J. Scott, of Winnipeg, who has just returned from a two years' stay in South Africa. He says: There is a great field for Canadian products, dairy goods, canned fruits and vegetables, meats and particularly flour in South Africa. It will require adequate representation and exploitation, however, to place them before consumers, but once that is done the demand will be continuous and increasing.

The only product which he noticed receiving thorough attention on the part of Canadian exporters was Canadian flour made from No. 1 hard wheat. The success of Canadian flour in South Africa is due not only to superior qualities over every other kind, but as well to the businesslike manner in which it has been introduced to consumers throughout the whole of South Africa.

Having noticed large shipments being landed at Durban and Delagoa Bay, Mr. Scott inquired as to what created so large a demand, and was informed that the bakers up country, after having been shown how to use it by the South African representative of one of the Canadian milling companies, fell in love with its virtues at once, and since then have found their trade greatly increased owing to the superior quality of their bread and pastry.

Bolting Cloth for Mills.

ONE of the enterprising Canadian mill supply companies which is successfully developing business along progressive lines is the Canadian Swiss Trading Co., of 17 St. John street, Montreal, with head office in Basle (Switzerland), who control the Canadian market for their Superior National brand silk bolting cloth and gritz gauze. The firm manufacture bolting cloth of superior quality. Their intention is to sell from the Swiss factory direct to Canadian millers. The large orders they have received already for their cloth testify to the reliability and excellence of their goods. It may be to the interest of any milling concern before buying bolting cloth elsewhere to communicate first with the Canadian Swiss Trading Co.

Trouble About Grain Inspection.

THE Montreal Corn Exchange Association is up in arms about the grain inspection of the port. They decided at their last meeting to send a delegation to Ottawa to urge that the inspection of grain should be put under the control of the Board of Trade, as it is in the United States. It is believed that this would work better than Government inspection. If, however, the Government decided to retain control of the inspection, certain amendments are to be submitted by the corn exchange. They claim that the amendments refer to the fact that the Act, as introduced in Parliament by Sir Richard Cartwright, makes the chief inspector in Eastern Canada superior to the Grain Survey Board, which is made up of practical grain men. In the west the Grain Survey Board is the final authority, and the grain men cannot see why it should not be the same in Montreal. Another objection is to the clause preventing the re-inspection of Ontario wheat at Montreal, inasmuch as such grain must generally be sold on a Montreal certificate. The rule against mixing grain in public evelators is also objected to. It is held that mixing is necessary to the interests of both buyer and seller, and that if it is not done in public elevators, certainly private ones will be built for the purpose. Another recommendation is that No. 2 white oats should weigh 33 lbs. to the bushel, instead of 34, and No. 3, 31 lbs., instead of 30; also that a new grade, No. 4 white, be added for grain not as clean as No. 3, and weighing at least 28 lbs. to the bushel. The Board of Trade has been asked to co-operate with the exchange on this subject.

Interest in New Grain Act.

At last week's meeting of the Montreal Board of Trade Sir Richard Cartwright's new Grain Inspection Act was discussed. The subject was of so great an interest that it was carried over to this week's meeting, at which were also taken up the charges of laxity brought by European exporters against the Grain Inspection Office of the port of Montreal. Two new members were elected at this meeting, namely, Mr. J. S. Going, of Messrs. Going & Co., and Mr. D. J. Rattray, of J. Rattray & Sons. It is usual for the council to adjourn for vacation on the last Wednesday in May for the Summer months, but as an immense amount of business is to be transacted the adjournment is postponed for a week or two.

The New Montreal Elevator.

It is expected that the grain elevator erected for the harbor commissioners of Montreal will be completed and ready for use by the 15th of June. According to the statement of Mr. Alex. McFee, a representative of the Corn Exchange, in the conference with the Grand Trunk Railway System, a satisfactory arrangement has been made as to the minimum rate of tariff to be levied.

Cereal Notes.

Montreal is being sampled with Orange Meat.

G. C. Brown, Toronto, was in Guelph recently, soliciting stock for the Norka Cereal Company, which has been organized for the manufacture of Norka cereal food. It is reported that Guelph was selected as the probable location of the company's factory, but that Toronto is now likely to get the industry, because the majority of stock is held there.

Don't you think they're blind to their own interests?

Cigarology, a New Science.

FOR many years there have been men who claim to be able to judge the character of a smoker by the manner in which he holds his cigar.

It has remained, however, for a European psychologist to reduce these observations to a science.

It is claimed that by following the rules formulated for the study of cigarology, as the new science has been named, the character of a stranger who is smoking a cigar may be discovered more readily than in any other manner. A man may "smile and smile and be a villain," but when he lights a cigar he unmasks himself at once to the cigarological student.

Here are the results of the psychologist's observations and deductions, given for what they are worth:

"Fastidious men, after lighting their cigars, hold them, not only between their lips, but also with two, three, four or even with all the fingers of the left hand, and, after smoking for a while, they remove them from their mouths and examine the lighted ends carefully to see if everything is in order, and especially if the fire is burning steadily and evenly. Men who act thus never waste any words and are generally shrewd and prudent. As a rule they are worthy of confidence, which cannot be said of those who send forth the smoke from the two corners of their mouths in two diverted jets, since they are eccentric and unreliable.

"Men who are quick tempered or of lively temperament hardly touch the tip of the cigar with their teeth, and after two or three puffs they take it from the mouth and hold it in the hand. In other matters they act similarly; that is, they do everything by fits and starts, and find it impossible to adhere very long to any fixed course of action.

"Absent-minded men, on the other hand, frequently let the cigar go out, and, if they are not very choice in their taste, try to light it again. Akin to them are the men who, after smoking for awhile, let the cigar go out and then throw it away—an infallible sign of a mind which may be very intuitive, but which is certainly not able to reason well or logically. They, however, are admirable persons when compared with those who at any time have the misfortune to place the lighted end of a cigar in their mouth. The mere fact that they commit such a blunder is evidence of extreme thoughtlessness.

"A cigar tilted upwards is an unerring token of an energetic and impatient character. On the contrary, a cigar which is held in the other direction—namely, inclined toward the chin—betokens melancholy and the habit of indulging in day dreams. When a cigar is held steadily in a horizontal position it is an index of sang froid, indifference, and often of an unscrupulousness and want of character.

"An old smoker holds his cigar firmly in his mouth. The beginner does not."—The Perfecto.

Tobacco Combine in Australia.

The Tobacconists' Association of Victoria, Australia, is viewing with considerable alarm the proportions to which the new Australian tobacco combine is growing, and have formed a limited company in order to strengthen their position should occasion demand their interference with the combine. Among the undesirable conditions to be imposed by the combine are a rise in prices and dictatorial measures to retailers.

The Brisbane Courier reports that the combine intends to enter into the

On Fair Pipe-Fillers.

WHEN I read novels in which the hero envies the old gentleman whose fair daughter fills and lights his pipe for him (says Minimus in the Bystander), I could weep for the ignorance of my fellow-creatures and the suffering entailed thereby. Optimists may say, "Ah, but such things only occur in novels by lady writers; they have no bearing upon reality." I know better. Such novels are in fact the work of the realistic school. There are—painful it is to admit it—young men who really do envy old gentlemen whose daughters fill their pipes; there are old gentlemen who encourage the perfidious work; there are maidens—well-meaning maidens—wiling to undertake what should be only an expert's business. . . And, as likely as not, after they have choked the delicate bowl, they apply a light to it with a wax match. The result can only be misery. . . I do not care to dwell upon it.

Tobacco Trade in Abyssinia.

The United States Commissioner to Abyssinia reports as follows on the tobacco trade in Abyssinia:

The import trade of leaf tobacco of Djibouti in 1901 amounted to $11,304, and in 1902 amounted to $9,695. The Abyssinians are not smokers or users of tobacco as the result of a former emperor having made its use a serious offence. The Europeans and Mohammedans consume tobacco in Abyssinia, as in other parts of the world, and find the domestic tobacco usually sufficiently good for their purposes. Caporal and Maryland tobaccos are imported from France, and there is also an importation of Egyptian and Algerian cigarettes and cigars. Tobacco sells at from $1.54 to $2.31 per 2.2 pounds; Algerian and Egyptian cigarettes at from $3.47 to $4.43 per thousand, and cigars at from 96 cents to $1.93 per box.

English Tobacconist in Canada.

"The Export and Colonial Tobacco Trade Journal," of London, Eng., has in its last issue an interview with P. L. Leverson, an extensive English tobacco merchant, regarding a recent trip which he made to Canada. He states that he did a little business in this country, learned a good deal and had a good look around. He found Canada just as anxious to export manufactured tobacco to England as England was to export to Canada. He saw no outlook, however, for the extension of British trade in that line to Canada.

Canadian Tobacco Tariff.

ON April 27, the Dominion Cigar Manufacturers' Association submitted a petition to the Dominion Government asking for a reduction from $6 to $4, in the excise on cigars. The whole subject of the taxation of the tobacco industry is now being considered by the Minister and Deputy Minister of Inland Revenue and the association.

The manufacturers claim that the total taxation levied on cigars, namely, the double tax on the raw material and the finished product, is excessive and seriously interfering with the trade. It is reported that the Government is inclined to favor a revision of the whole tobacco schedule, placing a tax of 25c. on foreign raw leaf, readjusting the excise tax and simplifying the regulations governing the foreign, combination, and Canadian cigar and tobacco factories. Such a plan will probably include a uniform excise and a uniform stamp for each of the three classes of product, doing away with the individual black, green and red stamps. The advantage to the Canadian and combination manufacturers will be that their products will be without distinguishing labels, thus making it necessary for a buyer of the weed to decide on the merit of the tobacco, instead of according to his prejudice.

Cigar Dealers' Assignment.

At a meeting of the creditors of P. McSweeny, wholesale cigar dealers, Toronto, last week, it was decided to wind up the estate, and Montgomery, Friedman and McEvoy were appointed inspectors.

The statement of the firm's affairs showed a deficit of $6,271.08 on liabilities of $8,548.58.

Art of Keeping Cigars Good.

A good cigar, with a natural bouquet, will keep for ten years without losing its aroma if not permitted to dry out. But once it becomes dry it is done for and the flavor can never be restored. The same rule holds good with all tobacco. Many a man takes joy in what he regards as a fresh weed, but which, in reality, has been stored away in a damp place until it was ready for the market.

Should be in the mouth of every smoker. What? a

McDougall Scotch Clay Pipe

Be sure and ask for it, and see that you get it.

D. McDougall & Co., Glasgow, Scotland.

During the Summer months, say from April to November, cigars and tobacco will draw sufficient moisture from the atmosphere to keep them properly, if the air is allowed to get at them, but during the rest of the year water must be provided for them. A well-equipped cigar store keeps shallow pans beneath every shelf, counter and show case, with openings in the latter which will permit the moisture to reach their contents.

Where there is a damp, heavy atmosphere, such as in sea-coast towns, the problem of the dealer is to keep his stock dry, especially in Summer. Away from the sea coast the situation is just the opposite; but a very little care, which anyone would be able to give, is all that is required to keep cigars or tobaccos of any kind at their best for an indefinite period.

Colored Tobacco Workers.

Thirty colored tobacco workers arrived in Hamilton, Ont., from Virginia a few days ago to work for the Geo. E. Tuckett & Son Co., and on Monday, May 23, twenty-five female employes in the Tuckett tobacco factory quit work because two or three colored women who came from Virginia with the colored men were not acceptable as shop-mates.

The difficulty with the Tobacco Workers' Union has not yet been straightened out. It is understood, however, that the Tucketts will not bring any more southerners here if the union will supply all the help required.

Notes.

The Erie Tobacco Co., Windsor, report a marked increase in their output. Their "Queen's Navy" seems to be growing more popular every day.

The liabilities of W. B. Reid & Co., wholesale tobacconists, Toronto, who recently assigned to E. R. C. Clarkson, are placed at $191,830.25, and the assets at $138,689.57.

T. Martin is now representing T. J. Horrocks in Ottawa and vicinity, and incidentally making a name for himself by placing the "Symbol" and "Ronto" cigars with all the dealers.

The Michigan Tobacco Co., of Detroit, has purchased the Henry E. Ward tobacco factory in Leamington, and will operate it for the manufacturing of smoking and chewing tobacco from the Essex county product.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

A STATEMENT has been issued by the Russian Government on the financial situation with regard to the Japanese War. The statement reads: "The war, which broke out in spite of the peaceful intentions of Russia, found the finances of the empire in a satisfactory position.

"The effective capital of the Exchequer, which at the beginning of the year amounted to 182,000,000 rubles, has been more than doubled up to the present time, by reason of the diminution of the budget expenses. Now the whole sum at the disposal of the Exchequer exceeds 300,000,000 rubles.

"Despite this, the war expenditure must be very considerable, and on this account it has been thought prudent to discover a new method for providing funds. These funds might be borrowed from the State Bank to the extent of 500,000,000 rubles, but in order to avoid expending the effective capital at the risk of a disturbance of the money in circulation, and as the Government wishes to see Russia at the end of the war in the same steady financial position as before the outbreak of hostilities, the Finance Minister has considered it necessary to have recourse to an external loan.

"By imperial order of May 12 for an increase in the war funds the issue of a five per cent. external loan for a short term has been decided upon with a nominal capital of 300,000,000 rubles, or 800,000,000 francs ($160,000,000), under the title of 'five per cent. State Exchequer bonds of 1904,' free forever from Russian taxes.

"On May 14, 1909, these bonds will be redeemable at the issue price, and must be presented for redemption in Paris.

"The flotation of the loan is intrusted to the Netherlands Bank, the Credit Lyonais, and Hottinger & Co. of Paris."

A STATEMENT showing the percentage of increases in individual deposits in United States banking centres during the period from 1890 to 1903 has been compiled. The smallest percentage of increases are to be found in New Orleans, Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia, New York follows, and then Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis and San Francisco in the order named. The feature of the statement is that the Atlantic ports are far behind the interior centres. Specific causes no doubt would appear in an extended examination of local conditions, such as the growth of trust companies in Boston and the attraction which their generally higher rates of interest have for deposits that might otherwise be carried in national banks; this probably would explain a certain amount of the decreases scored in New Orleans, for there appears no intrinsic reason why individual deposits in general should have fallen away to the extent indicated.

In New York's case the issue is open for discussion, and is a rather pretty one, whether the growth of such a banking item as individual deposits should be about commensurate with the average of the country or whether the advances scored by the remainder of the country ought to have a cumulative effect at this point. To this end the item of individual deposits is an apt one, for its increase or decrease is not so readily brought about by external agencies of a temporary character as would be the case with other items in the bank statement. It is likely to indicate, therefore, as clearly as any, the permanent effect in one direction or the other, and so will serve reasonably well as a basis for discussing the question whether a percentage of growth that keeps just a little ahead of that in the points of comparison is to New York's detriment or credit.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

An Advertising Experience Showing How Consumption was Increased to Relieve a Glutted Market.

THE following interesting statement was made to Profitable Advertising relative to the famous prune advertising campaign three years ago, which doubtless many readers of The Canadian Grocer will recall.

"In the January number of Profitable Advertising. we notice some comments on prune advertising, in which it is assumed that the advertising of prunes done three years ago was a failure, and that the failure was due to the advertising plan. We thoroughly agree that prunes should be put up in packages, and should be advertised in that form ; but at the time the advertising was done three years ago, prunes were not on the market in packages, and it was necessary to advertise them in the form in which they were on the market. Special conditions prevailed, and the advertising had to be adapted to them. These conditions were as follows :

"Some 3,700 prune growers, out of a total of 4,500, had formed an association to control the market. The crop of that year was double the normal crop, leaving in the hands of the association nearly twice as many prunes as the normal consumption would take care of. The growers outside of the association cut the prices set by the association, and, of course, were enabled to sell their prunes first; and on account of the large crop these growers completely supplied the market for a number of months. The result was that the close of the ordinary selling season in the spring approached, while the association still had on its hands a greater quantity of prunes than are ordinarily consumed in an entire season, and was threatened with the prospect of having to carry these over until the next season, thus demoralizing prices for still another year.

"Early in March this situation was realized and the necessity for doing something at once to meet this emergency arose. Two things could be done: The prunes could be sold at less than half their value to jobbers, and thus get them out of the hands of the association ; but this would not relieve the demoralization of the market, since the prunes would be held until the next year, and be used as a club to beat down the prices of the next season's crop. The alternative was to increase consumption, and there was no way to do this, hurriedly, except by an advertising campaign. This campaign had to be based upon conditions as they then existed, and had to be made within the limit of one month, in order to get quick action before the regular selling season had closed. There was absolutely nothing to do except to take large space in the daily papers, every other plan being absolutely excluded by the existing conditions.

"This plan was adopted and carried out to the extent of the expenditure of about $40,000, and resulted in the immediate sale of 350 car-loads of prunes and the creation of added consumption of prunes all over the United States. This latter statement is proved by a careful canvass of about twenty of the leading cities in the country, in each of which from three to a dozen of the leading grocers were interviewed as to the result of the campaign. The majority of these grocers said that there had been a great increase in the consumption of prunes, and that most of the people who called for prunes, called for those bearing the brand of the association which had done the advertising. One effect of the advertising was to create a new consumption of prunes during the berry and fresh fruit season, and that effect still continues.

"So satisfied were the officers of the association with the success of the advertising campaign, that plans were laid for continuing it, and nothing but the disruption of the association by causes in no way connected with the advertising, prevented its continuance.

"The definition of success is the accomplishment of the object aimed at under the conditions which determine the nature of the effort. Accepting this definition, the prune advertising campaign of three years ago was one of the greatest successes of modern advertising, and we think advertising men generally would so consider it, did they know these conditions and these results. We, furthermore, think that the advertising business would be better promoted by comment based upon a careful study of the situation, than by adverse comment not so based.

"In Profitable Advertising's remarks about the 'Honor Brand' advertisements, it speaks approvingly of the fact that dainty dishes are suggested, and that a prize receipt book is offered free. It will no doubt interest many to know that in our large and artistic copy used in the newspaper campaign, we gave these same dainty dishes the present advertiser is using, and that the prize receipts were secured by a prize contest held by the Prune Association at our request, for the sole purpose of getting up a book for free distribution, that about a million of these books were printed and distributed, largely through the advertising, and that this is the very book which receives Profitable Advertising's approval.

"As to prune advertising in the future, we are on record with the association, the packers, and the growers to the extent of many pages of typewritten matter to the effect that we believe the proper method to pursue is to put up a select quality of prunes in packages, adopt a distinctive name and brand for them, and advertise them as a choice product. In this we agree fully with Profitable Advertising's expressed opinion. When an organization can be formed that will be able to do this, or when the warring interests of the growers and packers can be sufficiently reconciled to permit concerted action, this can be done. The advertising being done by the small packing concern mentioned cannot be widely effective, because it cannot be operated upon a sufficiently extensive scale. Some company or reorganization possessing sufficient capital to control a very large output of prunes, and to advertise them on a large scale, must exist before California prunes will be satisfactorily exploited to the consumer, and the consumption thus sufficiently increased to bring to the grower in California the price he should receive for his product and labor."

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

Highest Quality Always.

Origin of the term "Sterling"

How many folk, who work every day in the year, who use the phrase "pounds sterling" are aware of its origin? Probably not one in a thousand. Yet the adjective "sterling," which apart from its commercial sense has come to indicate worth and genuineness, has a curious historical significance, and is a distinct survival of the times when England did not weigh so heavily in the balance of power as she does now. In the fourteenth century the trade of the known world was, almost without exception, in the hands of the Hanseatic League. Within this league there were many towns, most of which coined money, some using better metal than others. Lubec, a Baltic city, made the best money, and the English merchants, who even then knew a good thing when they saw it, used to contract for payment in the "moneys of the Easterlings"—Easterlings being their name for the Baltic merchants. Shortened for convenience, the word still obtains, and has all its original force.—Liverpool (Eng.) Post.

Applied to "Sterling" Pickles it means there's a "worth and genuineness" about these pickles common to no others, a word that in this connection "has all its original force to-day."

Shrewd Grocers push "Sterling" Pickles and Relishes.

Facts About Ceylon

At one time coffee-growing was the great industry of the Island of Ceylon, but of recent years the cultivation of the tea-plant has been found more profitable, and has consequently ousted the kindred industry.

Ceylon Teas have a flavor and strength found in no other teas. Their excellence is being steadily impressed on tea users the world over. This is a reason why the grocer should promote their sale as against the poorer teas of other countries.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ENLARGING ONE'S BUSINESS.

ONE might reasonably expect a retail merchant to know the names and addresses of all the people in the community he serves with whom he could trade. As a matter of fact most merchants know only a mere fraction of the buyers in any given district. An acquaintance begins only when a buyer comes to the retailer's store. Thus the possibilities of the community are not exhausted,—indeed, far from being exhausted. They are not even exploited by the average retailer. That all this inertia on the part of the dealer is costing him in lost business a heavy sum must be conceded. A firm couldn't double its business in a few months by doubled effort, but such effort persistently and intelligently kept up will result in due time in an immensely increased turnover. Newspaper advertising alone won't accomplish the desired result. However good this form of effort may be, it is not personal enough to break through the conservatism of the general public. What is required is the direct appeal—the mailed letter or circular.

CRACKERS.

The very latest dainties.

Oxfords—Lemon jumbos with marshmallows, a lb 12c

Pretzelettes—Hand-made, a package 9c

Cracker Meal—A package.. 5c

Before anything can be mailed there must be provided a mailing list. Names and addresses are readily obtained from a voters' list, or from a directory. The card index system—a card for each name—is best to use for this purpose. Having names, typewritten or printed letters or circulars can be mailed. It is hard to permanently refuse the invitation this form of advertising carries Impressions are made that are enduring; impressions are succeeded by convictions; convictions by business. It may take a twelvemonth, it may take two or three years, to get the desired returns from the outlays of time and money made in thus going after new business, but what is it in comparison with the reward? Most men would esteem $100 or $500 a small price to pay for an annual business increase of $5,000 or $10,000.

Who is there that will say he is doing everything possible to get the maximum trade which his district can yield him?

And how many there are who are forced to admit that they could do a much greater business did they really strive to get more.

Valuable Book for Grocers.

"GROCERY Advertising"—A Book of Business—Making Ideas and Ready-Made Ads. for Retail Grocers—Such is the designation of a new book compiled and published by W. Arthur Lydiatt, Toronto. It is what he styles "Bait for Retailers, No. 2." His former book, "100 Good Ads. for a Grocery Store," is practically out of print, there remaining only a few copies in the hands of The Grocer, by whom the book was published.

Mr. Lydiatt's second book is a much more ambitious and comprehensive volume than his first one. It opens with "Just a Little Talk First," dealing with suggestions as to how to advertise groceries; mediums to use; display; types, and proof-reading. This section is of large value to the man seeking to be an intelligent and well-equipped writer of advertisements. The information given is not readily obtainable elsewhere, and is the gathered fruit of much study on the part of the author.

"A Batch of Good Business-Bringing Schemes for Grocers," is likewise helpful and stimulating. "Some Odd Show Cards" constitutes a suggestive chapter. "Some Short Sayings" will be consulted freely by the man who seeks a good introduction to his advertisements. The last section of the book closes with examples of bright advertisements, many of them "displayed." A unique idea is their division under such headings as general; delivery; cash; beverages; tea; cocoa, chocolate, etc.; canned goods; biscuits and confectionery; dairy products; pickles, preserves and relishes; cereals; cooking necessities; miscellaneous; fresh fruits and vegetables; packed fruits. An index is a commendable conclusion to a book that should prove of much service to those grocers who are striving to make interesting and effective announcements to their constituency. The price is $2.00.

for their simplicity, clearness, brevity, and strength. They illustrate what can be accomplished with a small space.

Forsyth, Jr., is an enterprising merchant in Dartmouth, N. S., if one is to judge by samples of circulars sent out by him, copies of several of which have found their way to The Canadian Grocer. The text is better than the printer's work; that is, the display is poor. However, as examples of "dodgers" they are very fair, and I should judge are good trade bringers.

THE TOURIST TRADE.

THE Summer tourist trade is becoming every year of greater importance to many Canadian districts, and if properly developed should become an important factor almost everywhere throughout the rural districts of the Dominion.

The Summer exodus from the hot and crowded cities of the United States and Canada becomes more noticeable every year. Tired of the grimy atmosphere and glary streets, city people are eager to get away from it all, out among the trees and the hills, along the water ways or the country roads, any place where their tired eyes and wracked nerves can enjoy the soothing balm of green turf and country quiet.

Heretofore they have had to be content for the most part with the popular resort, with its more than urban glare and excitement, because no better facilities have been offered them.

Here lies the opportunity of our Canadian rural districts. It is safe to say that there are few Canadian villages that have not some charm in their vicinity that, if known, would make them attractive to the "Summerer" from the city. These people are used to paying handsome prices for meagre accommodation, and if they could be brought to the village or its neighborhood would spend their money freely to the advantage of the farmer or villager who accommodated them, and to the merchant who supplied their wants.

To work up this trade requires only a little organization, a little advertising. Some one must take hold, find out exactly what accommodation can be given, what attractions are offered; then let it be known to the people of the city, through the press or other means.

An instance of what may be done in this way comes to hand in the form of a handsome little booklet, attractively bound in a dark red paper, and illustrated with cuts of local scenery. It is from the pen of David Russell Jack, and is entitled "Summer Tourists; a Manual for the New Brunswick Farmer." With the permission of the author we take pleasure in re-producing it, as follows:

Forespeech.

It has been the lot of the writer of the following pages either in the pursuit of business or pleasure, or both, to travel much over this, his native Province of New Brunswick. But few villages have escaped his peregrinations, and in many a farm house and hamlet he would be no stranger.

By a knowledge born of experience, he is, therefore, in a position to realize something at least of the difficulties and trials which beset the path of the traveler, who, coming either from a sister province or from the neighboring republic, seeks to spend a few days or weeks in comfort in some country retreat, in quiet forgetfulness of the busy turmoil of an active life in a great city.

The farming people of New Brunswick are, as a rule, honest, industrious, hospitable, cheerful and open hearted. If any stranger comes among them, seeking their hospitality, they will doubtless do their utmost in a rough and hearty sort of way to make him comfortable. But in the country districts particularly, owing doubtless to lack of experience, much has yet to be learned in the art of catering to the wants and tastes of people from older communities.

Many of the New Brunswick farmers, or their forefathers, in order to keep the wolf from the door, have been obliged to combine lumbering and fishing with farming, and in the rough and ready life they have led, have perhaps formed habits and fallen into ways of living not altogether in keeping with the ideas of the more fastidious traveler, who would fain partake of their hospitality for a season.

For the latter class of individuals, some allowance should be made by the farmer, for the reason that many sights and sounds to which he has by daily contact become accustomed, are to the visitor from the city, startling, and perhaps repulsive.

New Brunswick has made great forward strides during the past decade in the development of agricultural pursuits, and gives promise of even greater progress during the earlier years of the century of which we are at present almost upon the threshold.

We have many men of education and refinement among our farmers, but this is not as a rule the class of men who take to the keeping of Summer boarders, as a partial means of livelihood.

It is to the poorer and less educated class, that the following pages are addressed.

As a member of the Executive Committee of the New Brunswick Tourist Association, an organization composed of business men and women who voluntarily give of their time and ability, in promoting the interest of tourist travel throughout this province, the writer has given much thought and consideration to the solution of the various problems which are continually encountered.

Not the least difficult of these problems, is the provision of accommodation, where the tourist of moderate means may enjoy the beauties of climate and scenery which our province affords, in a style of comfort and refinement, in some degree akin to that which he might reasonably expect.

The writer has penned the following lines in the modest hope that they may prove of some little assistance in helping to smooth away some of the rough edges of country life, and make the way, perchance, a trifle easier for the Summer tourist.

New Brunswick Farmers.

Of all the various branches of industry which the farmer can and does combine with farming, pure and simple, in this Province of New Brunswick, there is probably nothing so profitable, and which can be so advantageously carried on, as the keeping of Summer boarders. It is a spot cash trade, with good profits and quick returns.

This allied branch is as yet, however, with us practically undeveloped, and is capable of almost unlimited expansion.

In the sister Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, we have people of kindred race, language, customs and occupation, but in the matter of catering to the wants and tastes of the Summer tourist, the New Brunswicker is by comparison to the wily Nova Scotian, as the mild mannered Doukhobor to the crafty Chinee, only more so. In Nova Scotia the tourist business has been carefully studied and developed, and the attractions of the country widely advertised for years, while with us it is as yet but in embryo.

By selling your milk, butter and eggs, your vegetables, fruits and poultry at first hand to the Summer tourist, you can make a much greater profit than by hauling them ten or fifteen miles to the nearest town or railway station, only perhaps to be euchred out of your proper returns by some unscrupulous middle man.

The Tourist Association of New Brunswick have been making strenuous efforts for the past few years to increase the tide of Summer travel which yearly flows this way, but in order to obtain the best results they must have your active help. If you can house and feed in good shape, the ever increasing throng which each succeeding Summer brings us, you will have done much to assist us in carrying on our work.

Before you can expect any very beneficial results, it is necessary that you should bring your establishment up to a certain standard at least, and the more you can improve upon that standard the better for yourselves. If you earnestly try to do so, be sure that there is a good harvest in store for you.

If your house has been built for some years and is beginning to look a little shabby, buy a few pounds of paint and give it two coats all over when your other work is slack. It will make your property look much more attractive, and will greatly improve its wearing qualities. If you have not a verandah to your house, build one and make it not less than six feet wide, so that you can sling a hammock in it in which the Summer tourist may enjoy the Summer breezes. If you can make it eight or ten feet wide, so much the better.

If your house stands upon a bare spot by itself, plant a few trees about it which will give it an appearance of beauty, and lend rest to the eye and shelter from the hot rays of the Summer sun.

If you have any feather beds that your mother made, for goodness sake don't try to persuade the Summer visitor to sleep on them. They are a hideous abomination to the average tourist. Buy a wire spring or two with a cheap mattress. They are nice and cool to sleep upon, and are not apt to get stuffy. Don't burn your feather beds, though, but buy a few remnants of cheap, bright chintz, and have your daughter make them up into those lovely large soft pillows which are so delightful to the back-bone of the lazy tourist.

If you get your tourist into a good hammock, with one of those lovely pillows under his head, the chances are ten to one that he or she will want to stay there.

Make the windows of your house to open wide, so as to let in the pure sweet air of heaven, which is as the balm of Gilead to the weary sojourner from the great city.

If the paper on your walls is the same that was there when you were born, tear it off and send to town for a few rolls of pretty light colored stuff, which you can buy for eight or ten cents a roll, and have your family put it on before the busy time in the spring.

Most farmers keep a horse or two. If you have one, teach that boy of yours to drive. Give your wagon a coat of paint and send your boarders out to enjoy the air whenever they feel so inclined. It keeps them out of the way and gives your wife a chance to tidy up the house.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness.

If you have an old clock that belonged to your grandfather, an old piece of mahogany furniture that is heavy to lift around, an odd shaped chair, or any other old thing, don't sell it for your life's sake. The wily tourist generally knows just about what such things are worth while you do not. If you sell them you will likely get stuck, and the chances are that your visitor will tire of his purchase before he gets it home. If you don't sell them to him, he will want them all the more, and will rave about them to his friends when he goes home. Perhaps next Summer his friends will come down to see them, and try to soften your heart with the persuasive tongue.

If your house is near a river or a lake, buy a good canoe, or a strong boat and pair of oars, so that people will have something to amuse themselves with. If there is any good fishing or shooting in your neighborhood, find out all about it, so as to be able to tell your visitors.

Don't put a colored cloth on your dining table, on any account. A colored table cloth sometimes covers a multitude of things, and is apt to be looked upon with suspicion by the average tourist. A white table cloth, no matter how coarse, if it is clean, gives a good appearance to your table. Tell your daughter to go out into the grove, and dig up a small fern or two, and set them on the table. They give an air of daintiness and refinement which is most seductive, particularly to the female mind. The male mind is not always above such trifles either.

Don't put too many kinds of cake upon the table at once. Good bread and good butter are more esteemed by tourists than a multitude of cakes.

Do the butter up into little dainty rolls and set them upon a plate with a small lump of ice. Ice is a cheap commodity in this province if you gather your harvest at the right season.

A clean napkin is a necessity. Tell the Indians to make you a few napkin rings of wicker work and sweet hay, and of different designs, so that each guest may know his own. Put a fresh napkin in the ring every day at dinner time.

If you have any hooked mats, put them up in the attic before your visitors arrive, and keep them there until after they have departed.

Paint the floor of your dining room a nice light color all over, then lay a cheap square in the centre. You can buy these squares for from $2 apiece, upwards.

Roast chickens are very nice occasionally, but don't chop the chickens' heads off about breakfast time, and leave them to hop around on the front lawn until your wife is ready to pluck them. Do all your butchering early in the morning, while the visitors' eyelids are still heavy with sleep.

If you have not a poultry yard, buy a roll of six foot wire netting and build one. Keep your hens and chickens in it, at least while your visitors are with you.

Don't throw your slops and dish-water out of the back door. The soap suds act on any fatty matter, and send poisonous gases into the air, breeding pestilence and disease. This endangers not only the health of your own family but that of the tourist. One of them might die, and that would give your house a bad name.

Keep your troubles to yourself and don't talk the ear off your visitors by telling them all about the petty foibles of your neighbors, or how much trouble you had with that heifer. We all have troubles of our own in this world, and people as a rule don't go to the country to be bored. Keep yourself and your family in the background as much as possible—feel assured that if your visitors want your company they will soon let you know it. It isn't pleasant to be snubbed, and by giving no cause for such treatment you will keep up your self-respect.

Should there be any children about, buy a good stout rope, and put up a swing. Children love to swing. Men and women are but grown up children.

Tourists are strange animals and have many peculiarities. Some of them like to smoke, some to read novels, some to work embroidery, some to flirt, and some to meditate upon religion. If they want to, let them.

Buy a few yards of wire gauze and make screen doors, back and front, to keep the flies out, also a few screens for the principal windows. They are easily made, and a wipe of green paint will make them look as if they came from the shop. When the Summer is over put them away carefully in a dry place.

Sow a few poppies in your hayfield. They look enchanting to the eye and won't hurt the hay.

Give the tourist all the milk and cream he wants. It pays better to feed the cream to tourists than make it into butter and feed the skim milk to the pigs.

If there are any Indians about, don't drive them away, but let them camp along the river bank where they won't do any harm. Indians are always a great source of interest to tourists. Besides, the Indian has a lien upon your land by right of priority of possession. A little kindness to this unfortunate class of beings will mean a good mark for you in the book of the Kingdom of Heaven.

When you have put your house in order, tell your daughter to write to the secretary of the New Brunswick Tourist Association, Canterbury street, St. John, N. B., giving him full particulars as to the number of rooms you have to let, the number of guests you can accommodate, the best way of reaching your place, the distance from your house to the nearest railway station or steamboat landing, and the prices you propose to charge. He will do all he can to help you. If you start at $5.00 per week for each adult and please your visitors, you can then increase your charge to $7.00 a week. A small amount at a time to new patrons as your reputation becomes established. Your Nova Scotia rival frequently obtains $10.00 per week for moderate accommodation. Don't try to jump prices up too suddenly to old customers, as they are your best advertisers.

All this cannot be accomplished in one year, but it is astonishing what good results you can show in two or three years if you try hard enough. Then the golden harvest will begin, and you may safely look forward to years of increasing prosperity, and be able to keep your children about you as they grow up, instead of having to send them abroad to seek a means of livelihood. It is a good thing for your country to have them at home, to take up their share of the burthen of life, and allow you to take matters a little easier in your declining years, in the old home you love so well.

CANADIAN EXHIBIT AT WORLD'S FAIR.

In the fine exhibit made by the Dominion Government at the World's Fair, in St. Louis, Mo., goods made by E. W. Gillett Co., of Toronto, Ont., are quite prominent. The Government officials, realizing that Magic Baking Powder, Gillett's Lye, Royal Yeast, etc., are the standard Canadian articles, purchased from the firm a large quantity of the various goods to form part of the exhibit referred to. All Canadians visiting the World's Fair will be sure to be impressed with the display.

GILLETT'S GOODS ARE THE BEST!

One of the best proofs that GILLETT'S GOODS are STANDARD ARTICLES in their class, is evidenced by the fact that about three months ago, the Dominion Government purchased a LARGE quantity of the various articles, and these now form part of the . . .

Canadian Exhibit at the WORLD'S FAIR in ST. LOUIS, Mo.

ALL Canadians, and especially GROCERS visiting the Fair, will be interested in the display.

Alberta Creameries.

THE Department of Agriculture continues to manage a number of creameries in the Northwest Territories. During the season of 1903, there were eighteen in operation, located at the following places: Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Lacombe, Blackfalds, Red Deer, Innisfail, Tindastoll, Olds, Calgary, Moosejaw, Regina, Prince Albert, Qu'Appelle, Grenfel, Whitewood, Moosomin, Churchbridge and Saltcoats—being nine in northern Alberta, eight in Assiniboia and one in Saskatchewan.

Owing partly to the favorable conditions for wheat growing and partly to the high price paid by local merchants for dairy butter, the creameries in Assiniboia have shown a somewhat decreased output over the previous year, while those in Alberta have made 64 per cent. more butter than they did in 1902.

Three more of these creameries have, as a result of the season's operations, repaid all indebtedness to the department, making thirteen in all now in this position.

During 1902 it was found necessary to ship five carloads of the butter manufactured in these creameries to England. In 1903, although the total output was increased by 130,599 pounds, the whole of it was disposed of in the western, northern and oriental markets, at an average of about 20 cents a pound. A much larger quantity was sold for the Yukon trade, and several new and important accounts were opened in Japan as a direct result of the Canadian exhibit at the Osaka Exhibition and the good work done there by the exhibition staff. Regular shipments are now made to the Orient by every steamer, and we seem to be in a fair way to capture the bulk of this trade. The butter for the Oriental trade is largely put up in tins.

The experiment has been tried, and proved successful, of collecting eggs from the patrons of the creameries. The eggs were placed in the creamery cold storages and shipped regularly to Calgary with the butter, where they were disposed of at prices which net the patrons 15 to 19 cents a dozen according to locality, after deducting all expenses.

There is likely to be considerable growth of the creamery industry in northern Alberta.

Canadian Hams for France.

It is reported that representatives of the Davies Pork Packing Co., of Toronto, are endeavoring to obtain, through the colonial and foreign offices, a minimum tariff treatment for the admission of Canadian hams into France. At present there is a duty of ten shillings, which packers wish to see removed. The products of hogs are not included in the articles arranged for by the Franco-Canadian treaty of 1893.

Armours to Open in Toronto

Toronto is to have a branch of the Armour Packing Co., of Chicago. The Canadian agent of the firm is in the city hunting for premises in which to set up a plant for the manufacture of extract of beef. He is after 5,000 feet of floor space, but has as yet been unsuccessful in getting the desired area.

The company has decided to establish their Canadian headquarters here, and will build if the required room cannot be secured.

The reason for this move is that the duty on the finished product is so high as to give Canadian-made extract too great an advantage. The powder will be made at first in Chicago, and will be prepared for use and bottled here. While the plant at first will be a small one, it may ultimately develop into a large killing and packing concern.

Powdered Milk Industry.

J. Grant, of Montreal, has been exploiting Stratford, Ont., recently with the object of forming a company for the manufacture of powdered milk. Mr. Grant is endeavoring to interest a number of the leading business men of Stratford in the enterprise, and hopes to form a company largely of local capital. If the scheme proves successful a factory will be built without delay. The promoter is confident in the success of the industry, and says its expansion is bound to be great as soon as the product, which is comparatively new in Canada, becomes known.

A Change of Note.

A change of importance in the Montreal commercial community took place recently when A. Jones, of the firm of Marshall, Rutherford & Co., joined the staff of Gunn-Langlois Co. Mr. Jones will join J. A. Gunn in the supervision of the export department, and certainly a strong combination should be the result. Mr. Jones is considered an expert in his special line, being acquainted with the English markets almost as well as with the Canadian. Mr. Jones and Mr. Gunn should work strongly together for the further promotion of an already well established firm.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision market has continued dull through the week, although a few dealers say that they are doing almost as much as at this time last year. Prices are practically the same as last week, with the exception of lard, which is quoted 1-8c lower. Killing is more extensive just now, and the supply of lard is increasing. The fresh meat market is quiet, without change in prices. We quote this week:

Butter—Butter is coming in very freely, and prices remain low. There is considerable range of price in creamery solids, due to the fact that there is never any local demand for them, the outlet being entirely of an export nature. There is still some fodder offering, but it is growing less and less, and by the middle of June grass butter will make the market more busy. Until that time, business will be dull. There is no demand for tubs. Our quotations for this week are:

Cheese—A big slump in board prices has occurred in the last board sales. Prices ran as low as 7 7-8c, and never above 8 1-8c. The high prices of the preceding week were unwarranted, and were caused in all probability by the desire to squeeze short sellers. At the price offered very little was sold on the board, although curb selling afterwards was larger than usual. The factories are no doubt holding back a large part of their make, as comparatively little was offered. The sales on the various boards of last week are as follows:

Provisions—An easy feeling was noted in the provision market this week, owing chiefly to the large supplies which have been arriving. Sales of live hogs were made at from $5.25 to $5.50 a hundred. Other prices have not changed, and the demand has not been good for fresh killed abattoir stock. Local and country buyers have demanded good quantities of hams, bacon and lard. We quote:

Butter—Factory butter men report having received one-quarter to one-half a cent per pound above the regular spot market price. On Monday morning at the wharf, over 500 boxes were offered at a price of 16 3-4c, and in one case a local jobber paid 17c. Wholesalers declare that it would be impossible to turn over these purchases with any profit. This fact is verified by the demand for creamery being slow at 16 1-2c. Even English importers, who know exactly the salable price of butter in the Old Country, decline to operate at this low figure. The high price being paid to factory men is interfering with dealers who have orders in hand. There is plenty of butter in stock, and it is believed generally that before any clearance can be made, concessions will have to be made. From abroad reports state that there are heavy arrivals, and the demand is for choice goods only. Some of the stock recently brought to market was very inferior, and there is little hope of an immediate buoyancy in the market.

Cheese—The irregularity of the cheese market is exciting most of the large exporters. Prices are reported from country points that are simply past understanding, except that the buying is being done by speculators, with the hope of turning it over in future at a profit. One large dealer stated that it was his belief that some attempt would be made to sell June cheese short, for forward shipment. He based this on the fact that there was a large make going on in the country, and that would pile up stocks locally. Some contracts were put out at 40s last week, or at the equivalent of 8c here, and only on Monday it was learned that these offers were reduced to 39s 6d, or 7 7-8c. No doubt the English importer is watching this market, and perhaps might surprise some of the local cheese men by getting sharply after some of this 8c June cheese. The short seller would then awaken to his loss, and competitors may step in and give further surprises. The whole situation is, therefore, very irregular and unsatisfactory. At the wharf Monday morning, factory men realized 7 3 4c, and a fraction more in some cases, for about 4,000 boxes of cheese. In Ontario and Townships makes little is doing on spot, so that prices are nominal at 8 3-8c to 8 1-2c for the former, and 8 1-8 to 8 1-4c for the latter. From England there is a great deal more hopeful news regarding consumption, and cheese men are rather more cheerful than they have been for some time. The exporters are hopeful that prices will not be advanced unjustly, so as to interfere with the good feeling abroad.

Cheese and Butter Exports—There has been a decided shortage in the shipment of cheese from this port for the season of 1904 so far. The receipts for last week were 57,811 boxes, being about 10,000 boxes short of the same week last year. Since the opening of navigation the arrivals have been only 150,659 boxes, being over 30 per cent. less than last year. The exports of cheese last week were 48,757 boxes, being nearly one-half less than for the same period of last year. The total exports for the season show a falling off of over 40 per cent. The aggregate exports were 151,498 boxes, against 211,972 boxes for the same period in 1903. The arrivals of butter this season have been slightly heavier than they were for the same period of last year, the total figures being 23,028, an increase of 10 per cent. The exports last week were nearly three times what they were a year ago, and since the opening of navigation the aggregate of butter shipped has been 10,580 boxes, against 6,771 in 1903, an increase of nearly 60 per cent. Of these, butter shipments for this year, the local shipments amounted to 9,199, and the through shipments 1,381 boxes. Regarding the total cheese shipments, it may be stated that out of the exports of 151,498, the local export amounted to 116,242 boxes, and the through export 35,256. The largest quantity of all these shipments went to London, as many as 20,942 boxes being carried on one steamer, the "Hurona," which sailed June 4th.

St. John, N.B.

Provisions—There is very little of interest to the trade; both pork and beef are rather easier; fair stock is held, but sales are very slow. The market is without doubt in buyers' favor. In smoked meats, business is quiet, and prices are at least no higher. In pure lard there is quite a large stock held here, much of which was bought at higher prices than now rule. During last week some western shippers have quoted particularly low prices. It is thought the market cannot hold at the present low values. In fresh meats the market this week is a little firmer; there is, however, a fair supply of both western and domestic beef. In veal and mutton, receipts are not large, and prices are firmly held. Lamb continues to come to hand slowly, and of but fair quality; price is still high, but tending lower. In pork there is limited sale and prices are quite low.

MONTSERRAT LIME FRUIT JUICE.

NO more refreshing drink than lime fruit juice can be prepared for the thirsty man in Summer time. Like many a good thing lime fruit juice is imitated and many deleterious acid ixtures, concentrated lemonades and other doubtful compounds are offered, which are calculated to create a prejudice against the true lime fruit juice. This is to be deplored as the genuine article is one of nature's germicides, and in typhoid fever sections it is said to be both a preventive and a cure. Not only is it valuable in fevers, but it cools and purifies the blood, aids digestion, relieves sea sickness and has great curative powers in rheumatism, gout and dyspepsia. At the same time, it forms when diluted with water a most wholesome, delicious and refreshing beverage. It is entirely free from alcohol, and should be an adjunct of every soda fountain during the season. The Montserrat Company early realized the importance of producing a perfectly pure juice free from all contamination. This company was the first organization to cultivate the lime tree on their plantations in Montserrat, expressing the juice from the fruit on scientific principles, and as a result of their labors for the past 35 years they can offer the finest product on the market, which is sure to give satisfaction. Being the best, the "Montserrat" brand sells easily, and is a profitable line, as it brings trade.

THE TEA SITUATION.

THE most absorbing topic of interest in the tea trade at the present time is, "What immediate and ultimate effect the additional duty of two pence per pound on all tea entering Great Britain is going to have on the trade generally ?"

The general impression is that ultimately the result will be prejudicial to the producer. If, as seems likely, an increased duty means the curtailment of tea consumption in Great Britain, and a relatively increased demand for lower grade teas, such will undoubtedly be the case. The British grower in India and Ceylon will of necessity devote his attention more and more to the growing of common teas in order to meet the requirements of buyers who will need cheap teas to meet the demand of the consumer, since medium priced teas will quickly advance beyond his reach. A disturbing factor in the situation is the likelihood that China will be benefited at the expense of British growers. The working classes, who are the principal consumers of tea in the United Kingdom, are not likely to pay the additional two pence per pound duty. The tea trade will have no alternative but to sell their stocks on a much narrower margin, to the detriment of the Ceylon and Indian grower, or to introduce the cheapest China grades for blending purposes, to the displacement of the Ceylon and Indian article.

British growers in India and Ceylon fear they will again have to bear the burden of the extra tea duty, as in 1900, when the average price of tea dropped one penny and declined farther in the two years following. Vigorous protests are being raised from these quarters against the Budget, which as a matter of fact was passed by a very small majority. The outcome may be a striking out of the clauses relating to tea.

APPRECIATION.

Little & Long, general merchants, Orono, Ont., write acknowledging the help that "The Canadian Grocer" has been to them in business. They say they "would be lost entirely without it for reference from week to week."

The following item from a recent issue of Indian Planting and Gardening, Ceylon reflects the general sentiment prevailing among tea growers in Ceylon and India, concerning the recent addition to the duty on tea :

"It is a trite saying that England lost America over a pound of tea. It is becoming increasingly evident that the British Chancellor of the Exchequer is going the right way to raise a big 'storm in a tea cup' in India, for we scarcely think the Indian Tea Association will allow this excessive burden to remain where it is without a very vigorous protest. This is a matter in which India and Ceylon should make common cause, and make their voices heard in no uncertain key. When England had a big war on hand, tea growers submitted to the raising of the duty 2d.; but with no reason beyond a general falling off in revenues, to tax a British-grown product 133 per cent. of its market value, is to add the proverbial straw to an already heavily burdened commodity, groaning under a heavy tax."

The grocery trade in Great Britain, moreover, have taken up the cudgels in so far as at a recent meeting of the Metropolitan Grocers and Provision Dealers' Association, London, official protest was made against the action of the chancellor of the exchequer in making the addition to the tea duty of 2d. per lb. The opinion was expressed that such an addition to the tea duty must be attended by considerable hardship to the working and poorer classes especially. It must also cause great difficulty to the retail trade, as they not only have to change the extra duty but to find the capital necessary for the payment of that duty upon which they receive no profit whatever.

The immediate effect of the Budget has been to increase enormously the demand for common tea, and latest London advices say the strong position in low priced tea has been such as to almost precipitate a panic.

HORSE SHOE BRAND SALMON.

IN the export number of The Canadian Grocer, in an article on the British Columbia salmon industry, there appeared this sentence : "The building up of the reputation of the Maple Leaf and Horse Shoe brands of canned salmon has largely been under the care and attention of Mr. Ker, who managed the canneries in which these brands are manufactured."

In as far as the reference to the Horse Shoe brand is concerned, the statement was incorrect, and it was entirely due to an inadvertence. It is known by everybody in the grocery trade that Horse Shoe brand is packed by J. H. Todd & Sons, whose head office is at Victoria, B. C., but at the same time The Canadian Grocer feels called upon to point out the inaccuracy which occurred in its issue of May 20.

THE CANNERS AND THEIR SELLING TERMS.

THE Canadian Canners, Limited, have issued their selling terms for the 1904 pack, and it is to be regretted that the objectionable clause 5 in the conditions in regard to the trade discount has been retained. This particular clause provides that no trade discount on canned vegetables and canned fruits is to be allowed wholesale dealers unless they confine their purchases to the goods of the Canadian Canners, Limited, and furthermore, that the wholesaler must make a statutory declaration that he has neither purchased from any other firm nor has sold below the stipulated price set by the packers.

This particular clause last year was the cause of a great deal of dissatisfaction. From one end of Canada to the other wholesalers were up in arms against the innovation, and were it not for the fact that the consolidated company largely controlled the output of canned vegetables and fruits in Canada their sales would have been very small indeed. In view of this fact, we cannot understand why the Canadian Canners, Limited, have been so short-sighted as to continue last year's policy in this particular.

One thing is certain: they will not be able always to retain this objectionable clause and hold their trade. It is true that at present they control about 95 per cent. of the canned fruit and vegetable output of Canada, having recently taken in four additional canneries, but it must be remembered that the selling conditions as they remain to-day will increase the dissatisfaction as time goes on and must eventually create competition, which will gradually become more and more formidable. It is quite true that since last year the Canners Limited have bought up firms which last year were independent, but, on the other hand, new companies have come into existence which promise to be more formidable than those which have recently sunk their identity in the consolidation. Consolidations cannot, any more than individual firms, succeed if they are perpetually displeasing their customers. The latter may be for a time compelled to buy from them, but it will only be for a time.

The policy of the Canadian Canners, Limited, should be to remove all irksome conditions. In this way they would satisfy their customers and ultimately strengthen their position. They are big and strong enough to do this.

For several years before the packers brought about the present consolidation The Canadian Grocer urged upon them the necessity, in order that the canned goods trade of Canada might be properly developed, of forming themselves into a joint stock company. This they have done, and we are still of the opinion that they have done the proper thing.

They have already done a good deal toward developing the canned goods industry, and particularly the export branch of it, and we are sorry indeed to see that they have, by an unreasonable and unbusiness-like provision in their selling terms, caused a great deal of dissatisfaction in the home trade. We trust that they will, for their own good and for the benefit of the canned goods industry in general, eliminate the objectionable Clause 5 from their selling conditions.

FRUIT TERMINALS AND TRANSPORTATIONS.

WHOLESALE fruit dealers, without exception, unite in condemnation of the fruit terminals provided by the railroads entering Toronto, as well as the unsatisfactory transportation provided for perishable fruit and produce.

At the present time fruit cars are dropped off indiscriminately at a siding near Simcoe street, fully half a mile away from the fruit auction rooms. The sorting has generally to be done afterwards, and when it is remembered that there are often as many as one hundred and fifty cars bunched up together it can easily be seen that more or less delay is bound to occur in sorting out single cars. This is needlessly aggravated because of the shortage of fruit siding and scarcity of yard engines. We are told that at the present time only one engine is available for shifting all the fruit cars entering the city of Toronto. With such a large percentage of perishable fruit arriving daily, any unnecessary delay cannot help but result disastrously to the fruit and vegetable importer in as far as consignments are apt to waste, and in a busy market season fruit and vegetables are thrown late in reaching the retailer.

Another thing for which the railroads are blamed is the slow time made in the transportation of freight from the border to Toronto, and in particular via G. T. R. from Fort Erie. As a matter of fact a fruit car will travel from Baltimore to Buffalo as quickly as from Fort Erie to Toronto. It is said there is not sufficient power to run the trains, and the G. T. R. authorities are honest enough to acknowledge the truth of this statement, pleading in self-defence the enormous increase in traffic during the past few months, with which they are not yet in a position to cope successfully. Toronto fruit and commission men hope the Grand Trunk will be successful in their efforts to secure additional sidings south of the Esplanade, as the fruit sidings will thus be brought almost to the door of the various distributing warehouses. Another factor which will tend to improve conditions at the Toronto fruit terminals is the possibility of the C. P. R. making arrangements in the near future for handling fruit on a large scale.

Another difficulty Toronto fruit dealers have to face is in connection with the delivery of fruit by the express companies. The facilities provided are so poor that dealers find it more satisfactory to unload goods from incoming trains themselves. This inconvenience is of several years standing, although up to the present time the express companies have not seen fit to comply with the demands of the fruit men for a more efficient service.

The situation has become so aggravated as to be almost a nuisance. Fruit men are of the opinion that interference on the part of the public authorities is justifiable. Meanwhile they are entirely at the mercy of the railroads. With the fruit trade becoming such an increasingly important item in Toronto freight, it is surely time the railroads and express companies recognized their obligations to those whose goods they handle. Such a flagrant exhibition of one of the seven deadly sins is reprehensible, to say the least, in a young country where trade and industrial development are making such rapid strides as they are in Canada.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held in St. George's Hall, Toronto, on June 6. The principal item of interest was the completion of the plans of the association for their annual excursion, which takes place to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, on July 27. A committee was appointed to close with the Niagara Navigation Co. and the railroad lines extending to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, but at the time of going to press no further particulars than those stated have come to hand.

The association decided to dispense with the guessing contests, which have proved such an attraction in former years. In their place, however, new features will be introduced which promise to make this year's excursion the most successful in the history of the association.

It was decided unanimously to have the secretary write the Force Food Co., of Buffalo, in order to see if they would be agreeable to providing some entertainment on the occasion of the visit of the members of the association to Buffalo. A notice of motion was given that an appropriation of $50 be voted to the Retail Merchants' Association of Toronto, by the retail grocers of Toronto, in recognition of valuable services in the past. The association also decided to send their fellow grocer, J. Burns, a resolution of condolence on the occasion of the sudden death of his brother by drowning in Collingwood.

DEATH OF AN OLD GROCER.

On Monday last, there passed away in Toronto a gentleman long and favorably known to the grocery trade of the Dominion—Mr. Jacob Wilson. The deceased had been ailing for some months, though he kept to his office until about two weeks ago. On Saturday last an operation on his throat was performed at the Toronto General Hospital, which, however, proved ineffectual. He was buried at Cobourg on Tuesday.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The pleasant face of Mr. Frank D. Cockburn, eastern representative of "Comfort" Soap, was seen among the Montreal trade this week.

Captain Alex. Anderson, one of the best known tea brokers of Montreal, has just returned from a trip to his old home in Scotland. He is looking well and should profit greatly by his two months' rest.

Mr. Charles Holland, of the provision house of W. P. Sinclair & Co., of Liverpool, Eng., was on the Montreal 'Change last week, and has visited several large exporters. Mr. Holland is sanguine as to the future of butter and cheese.

Mr. Samuel D. McTrustrey, a member of the importing firm of Samuel D. McTrustrey, of Liverpool, England, is in Montreal, and will occupy rooms at 404 Board of Trade Building temporarily. He is here chiefly looking after the new crop of hay, but is widely interested in other Canadian products.

Mr. C. H. Colson, of C. E. Colson & Son, Montreal, has been confined to his house during the past few weeks with an attack of typhoid fever. The Grocer learns that he is progressing towards recovery and expects to see him out again shortly.

Mr. C. W. Gregory, of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, has returned from his trip through the eastern provinces. "Bee" brand goods was the gospel Mr. Gregory was preaching to the trade, and the same was acceptably received.

Mr. and Mrs. Estabrooks have been making a tour of the United States and Canada, and visited Montreal and Toronto last week. Mr. Estabrooks is the proprietor of Red Rose Tea, which has made such a name for itself all over Canada. He has been calling on his Canadian representatives.

Mr. William Meldrum, of the firm of W. Meldrum & Co., has been seriously ill for some time with typhoid-pneumonia, and for a time his life was dirpaired of. The good news has been announced that he is now likely to recover. The firm is one of the best known in the produce business of Montreal.

Mr. A. C. Wieland, Montreal manager of the Co-operative Wholesale Society of England, has returned from his annual trip to the Old Country. He is of the opinion that the cheese and butter trade in England will survive, and that before the season is over an encouraging volume of business will evolve from the present discouraging situation.

Among the notable visitors at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, this week, were Mr. and Mrs. Felix Minaldi, accompanied by Mrs. Antonio Minaldi, of New York, and formerly connected with large fruit houses in Italy. They have been in Montreal in connection with the large fruit cargoes which have been landed here from the steamers Fremona, Jacona and Bellona, of the Thomson line.

Mr. J. N. Christie, one of the oldest and most highly respected of the commercial travelers of the Dominion, who has represented Carter Galbraith for the last quarter of a century, has decided to take a holiday. He sailed on Wednesday, 8th inst., for his former home, and will spend the Summer with his wife and family at Dee Side, Scotland, his native heath.

Mr. H. Hardy, sample room manager of the Eby-Blain Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, was married on June 7, to Miss M. Sanderson, of Shanty Bay, Ont. On the occasion of the happy event the staff of the Eby-Blain Co. seized the opportunity of presenting Mrs. Hardy with a solid silver tea service, as a slight mark of esteem in which Mr. Hardy is held by his fellow employes.

Mark Twain says: "It's Foolish to Oppose a Success."

Some dealers (not you, of course) waste a good deal of time in worrying, planning and scheming out acceptable reasons (to themselves) as to why they should not handle "SALADA" Ceylon Tea, while their more progressive neighbors are readily grasping their opportunities, and pushing the sale with pleasure and profit.

A dealer can, of course, get along without "SALADA" if he is so inclined, but t'will be to the injury of his trade and reputation—this is as sure as "night follows day."

A sample case will readily dispel a doubter's doubts.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Groceries.

Toronto, June 9, 1904.

THE grocery trade continues to show signs of improvement. This has been a very backward season, which has of necessity held trade back. Travelers have experienced difficulty during the past week in placing orders on account of the cold, damp weather. A boom in the sugar market is expected shortly, as the preserving season will soon commence. A rude shock to the trade occurred this week, when sugar dropped 5c. It is thought that speculators took advantage of the rising market to liquidate stocks, and the impression prevails in certain quarters now that the extreme upward tendency in sugar during the past month was unwarranted. Canned goods continue firm, with corn and peas scarce, and canned fruits showing an upward tendency. Syrup and molasses and teas are without special features, as is coffee. An upward tendency is noticed in rice.

CANNED GOODS.

A good trade in canned goods is reported during the week under review. The scarcity of peas and corn continues, with tendency towards firmer prices in the latter. Some wholesalers are entirely sold out of corn, and are having to buy from hand to mouth. Tomatoes are weaker; apparently there are considerable supplies available, and one Toronto dealer has been selling during the week as low as $1. Canned fruits are moving freely, especially gallon tins of apples, owing to the end of the season in green apples. On account of the shortage in the fruit crop, canned fruits will be firmer. Lobsters are scarce and higher than they have ever been before at this time of the year. A scarcity is noted in Canadian domestic pickles. California ripe olives are firmer in price. Strawberries are 7 1-2c. firmer. Fresh finnan haddie is arriving on the market this week. Our quotations are as follows:

SUGAR

The upward tendency of prices has at last been checked, and we record a decline of 5c per cwt. in local refined quotations, which took effect at noon on Friday, 3rd which took effect at noon on Friday, 3rd inst. This decline has been followed by a smilar decline in the American markets, effective on Tuesday, 7th, and both indicate an easier tone to the whole situation.

The market is very dull and flat, and a general lack of confidence has ensued. The weakness first made itself evident in Europe, where 88 per cent. beet, after touching the high point of 9s 7 1-2d, has gradually reacted to the extent of 5 1-4d per cwt. to to-day's quotation of 9s 2 1-4d basis, f.o.b. Hamburg, which is equivalent to duty paid parity of 3.94 New York for 96 test centrifugals. The weakness in Europe has made itself felt prejudicially on the cane sugar situation in New York, where refiners have become increasingly indifferent to offerings, and the market is now about 1-16 below what it was a week ago.

Just as we went to press last week large sales amounting from 20,000 to 30,000 Cuba centrifugals for last half June shipment at 2 9-16 c and f New York for basis 95, were made, which is equal to 3.95, duty paid, for 96 test. These sales showed a weakening in the pretensions of sellers, who have been holding for 2 5-8 c and f for basis 95, but owing to the signs of weakness in Europe, coupled with the fact of improved weather conditions in Cuba, sixty-one central factories of those which closed down during the previous week, resumed operations, making a total of seventy-one centrals grinding, compared with ten the previous week, and with eighty-nine during the corresponding week of 1903. However, at this late date, and under the prevailing uncertainty, it is not likely that much more sugar will be made in Cuba for the balance of the season, as grinding can only be spasmodic, and operations under such conditions must be costly to factories. The usual rainy season sets in about the middle of June, and as all available labor will be required for the care of the fields, the likelihood is that the making of present crop will be brought to a speedy termination.

Reduction in stocks on island 9,000 tons for week. Combined stocks in U. S. and Cuba, 438,186 tons; combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven date, 3,048,186 tons. Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for week ending June 1, 46,299 tons; meltings, about 30,000 tons.

Present indications are that the decline has not yet spent itself, and at the close the tone of the market is dull and easier. We hear the opinion still expressed by those that are competent to judge that the present downward movement will only be temporary, and that a return to recent values will take place. We even hear it said that the high price of the campaign has not yet been reached. A policy of caution is advised.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade in syrup and molasses is fair, although the syrup season is practically over. The volume of trade on this market is never very large, and when compared with Montreal, is small. TEAS.

The tea market is reported quiet for the week, very little being done on the street. Samples of new season Japans have arrived, and show better than those of last year's first crop. This first crop Japan tea, or early pluckings, which cost from 28 to 30c, and formerly was in big demand in the Toronto market, has dropped in the estimation of the trade to-day. We quote the following prices unchanged from last week:

COFFEES.

In mild coffees the tendency during the week has been upward. Locally, very little business in coffees is reported on the street. Rios are uncertain; brokers, however, say there will be definite news from Brazil within the next fortnight, and predict a distinct rise in prices during the next three or four months, basing their predictions on the prospects for a small crop. Samples received, however, indicate fine quality. It is said that many plantations in the interior of Brazil have been abandoned.

In New York a dragging market has been experienced during the week under review, and prices show a slight decline. The statistical position of coffee, many of the trade express themselves as believing, is now at its relatively worst period. On June 1 the supply of coffee in sight in the world was 814,000 bags larger than on the same date last year. As the coming season progresses, it is believed this difference will be more than lost, calculating that the out-turn of the coming Brazil crop will be about the same to possibly slightly smaller, and that the mild crops will be at least 1,000,000 bags less than the present crop year.

The decrease in the world's visible supply during the month just closed of only 89,000 bags was a distinct disappointment to the trade. The unusual smallness of the deliveries, amounting to only a few thousand bags over 1,000,000 bags in Europe and the United States for May, being the smallest deliveries recorded for a number of years past, was the principal cause of the small decrease.

The Brazil markets during the week have held fairly steady. Only a limited amount of coffee has been sold to local importers, as the prices for which the Rio and Santos markets held were generally at prices above the parity of values ruling locally. The crop movement for June is not expected to be full, as new crop coffee, it is now understood, will not begin to arrive with any degree of freedom before the latter part of the month. FOREIGN NUTS.

The only items of interest in foreign nuts during the week under review are the reports concerning the coming filbert crop, which is estimated at from one-fifth to one-half its usual volume. Reports received from the south say that farmers' stocks of peanuts have been cleaned up in North Carolina. The acreage in Spanish peanuts in North Carolina has been reduced a-third from that of last season. We quote the following prices:

EGGS.

The price of eggs has not come down a fraction during the week, and some dealers quote a-half cent higher. Great dissatisfaction is expressed with the level that is maintained, although dealers speak quite confidently of lower quotations next week. Receipts for this week have fallen off considerably, due not so much to the short supplies, as to the fact that city dealers are not combatting the prices set by outside dealers. Many of the city houses are limiting their acceptances. They keep sufficient supplies to provide for customers' demands, but are steering clear of heavy buying for pickling. They do not actually refuse offerings, but are not encouraging them. There are evidences that this increase of offerings to the outside dealers is scaring them a little. An informal meeting of a few western houses was held this week to consider the situation. Nothing definite was done, as far as can be ascertained, but there are signs of dissatisfaction with the state of affairs created by them. Local demand decreases largely when a retailer must ask 17 to 20c, and this reacts on the dealers. We quote this week a range of 15 to 16c.

APPLES.

Trade in evaporated apples is surprisingly dull for this time of year. Usually as soon as green apples are off the market, a demand springs up for evaporated. This year canned apples seem to be used largely as a substitute. We quote the following:

Evaporated apples, per lb	0 06½

HONEY

The honey market has been featureless during the week under review. Very little actual trade is doing, and the provision men continue to lay up supplies for the coming season. The general feeling is that honey is going to be scarce and high. Our quotations are as follows:

Fish.

A fair trade is doing in fish, with prices unchanged from last week. Dealers are not getting in large stocks at present on account of the uncertainty of the market, due to price cutting on

Green Fruits.

A satisfactory week has been experienced in the green fruit trade. California navels are scarce, and 50c firmer in price than last week. There are very few Valencias on the market, and shipments have ceased; in addition, everything is out of cold storage. There is plenty of stuff from the recent Montreal shipments on the market, namely, Messinas and Spanish Valencias; these are the oranges which are generally supplying local trade at the present time; it is late in the season, and they are generally dry and thick-skinned, and do not compare favorably with Mediterranean sweets and Valencias. California Valencias will be on the market in a week. Lemons are not moving very well at the present time, on account of the cool weather. Higher prices are ruling in the New York lemon market. This will be the principal source of supply for the next four or six weeks, until Verdelli lemons come on the market. Sorrento lemons are quoted this week, for the first time. There is a big consumption of pines at the present time. Prices are at the lowest ebb now, and stocks most plentiful. Florida pines have appeared on the market, and are of splendid quality. Watermelons from Florida are on the market. North Carolina strawberries are out of the market, and the trade is now being supplied by Maryland and Delaware. It will be ten days before domestic strawberries wil lappear on the market; half a crop is expected this year. From six to eight cars of strawberries a week are being consumed in the Toronto market. Mississippi tomatoes are on the market in four-basket flat cases. The trade is well supplied with bananas, and prices are ruling firm. We quote the following prices:

California navels, per box	3 50	4 00
Messina lemons, new, 300's, per box	2 50	3 00

Vegetables.

The vegetable trade is improving, with an increased demand for green stuff, which is more plentiful than it was last week. Potatoes exhibit a tendency to become firmer. One dealer reports that from ten places on which he usually relies for supplies, he had great difficulty in obtaining any at all, and finally secured one small shipment. It is thought that supplies in the country are pretty well used up. When the price of potatoes advanced, farmers scurried around and marketed every potato that was available. It looks as if very few were left in the country at the present time, and as a result prices are certain to advance very shortly. Stocks of Egyptian onions are more than sufficient to supply the demand of the market, and in some quarters it is surmised there will be a loss on them. Prices have dropped 25 to 50c Old carrots are off the market, and have been replaced by new carrots and beets, each of which is selling at $1 per dozen. Parsnips are off the market. Rhubarb is easier in price, and green cucumbers firmer. Spinach and green cabbage exhibit a downward tendency. New potatoes are higher than they were last week.

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The market has no special feature this week. Prices are firm, and the market steady, with but a fair demand. Manitoba wheat, Northern No. 1 and No. 2 have advanced 1c each. Manitoba wheat, Northern, No. 3, has advanced 1-2c. Red and white wheat per bushel, on track, Toronto, have declined 1 and 2c, respectively. QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, June 9, 04.

Groceries.

SUGAR added a new interest this week by dropping five cents all around. This drop takes effect in Ontario and Quebec, and later news shows a drop also in the Maritime Provinces. Generally there has been an improved demand from the country, and orders, although numerous, continue small. Canned goods are moving out by degrees, but no quotable change has taken place. Cochin ginger is very low in price, and the demand for Jamaica for manufacturing purposes is still slow. It is thought that a good hot summer would put this article on a better footing. Black pepper is steady, with an advance tendency; values remain unchanged in white pepper. Advices from Singapore show that some speculative buying has been going on in flake tapioca. Buyers anticipate a higher range of values, but no one in this district will dare say how soon. Hemp seed is reported dearer, as most of it comes from Russian sources, so that the advance is likely to continue. Canary seed remains at the same price, but is selling freely. The market is steady for rice, but native cleaned Rangoon is slightly dearer. The holder of the apple "corner" is evidently getting his end of the affair now, for the evaporated goods have gone up to 7 1-2c. A certain cable published in a daily paper, to the effect that molasses had declined at the islands, has not been heard of from Barbadoes. In fact, molasses, while still low in price, has not declined, to the knowledge of the trade, this week. Green fruits are still indifferent in tone, but in a couple of weeks the California stock is expected, and certainly the low state of the lemon and orange market must change at an early date. Oranges, it is expected, may continue in moderate supply until July. Coffee continues firm and in good demand. Planting Opinion of recent date states that with the world's consumption of coffee two million bags in excess of the total production, and prices on the ascendant, coffee plantations look like a more satisfactory investment than "ship building trusts." Finer qualities of coffee continue to be reported scarce. From abroad it is learned that the amount of coffee coming forward is much less than it was at this time last year.

SUGAR.

The recent advances in sugar were evidently unwarranted, for a drop took place of five cents all round this week, taking effect in Ontario and Quebec, as well as in the Maritime Provinces. The future prospects of sugar are therefore interesting. The production in Cuba has now almost entirely ceased, and as the crop is likely to be 200,000 tons less than the earlier estimates, it is easily seen that the statistical position of the sugar market is still strong. The early closing of the Cuban crop, the anxiety of the West Indian planter, and the favorable prospects of green fruit all over the American continent, tends to strengthen Old Country holders of sugar. In fact, it has been stated in the Old Country that unless the value of beet sugar should further increase, the parity of American and European values might possibly very nearly assimilate. Grocery sugars are in steady demand, and raw sugar still holds a strong market. From France it is reported that the sowings have been finished, and the sprouting, as well as the developing of young plants, has suffered no serious damage. News from other continental countries seems satisfactory, as the sowings are everywhere ended, and the plants are coming up well.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The report that molasses had dropped at Barbadoes has not been confirmed, and no quotable change has taken place in the price; molasses is still cheap, but large dealers do not anticipate further decline for some little time yet. Even future estimates are indefinite regarding the price of molasses; it will be easier to determine prices when some of the early schooners come in July. We quote:

COFFEE.

Coffee still maintains a strong position. Receipts seem to be falling off abroad. Reports come to hand that the new crop will be late, and also that frost and bad weather have been experienced in Brazil, which might have a remote influence upon the tone of the market. Some estimates in the Old Land are to the effect that the coffee crop will turn out somewhere between a million and a million and a-half bags less than last year. We quote:

TEA.

Tea remains the same as it was last week, with no marked change in price. The first new Japan is selling freely, from 30 to 35c. Firms who were fortunate enough to get the early shipments have found ready sale. Congou teas continue to hold their strong position, and prices are high. Common grades have especially realized good prices. The demand for green tea is light. The market for fancy teas is quiet also. Ceylon teas continue to hold their own. No quotable change has taken place in the market. Planting Opinion, from New York, states that it is reported that Ceylon tea tasters are complaining of their experience with rubbishy teas. This, however, has not come to any local dealer's notice, and might have been an accident. The first sale of Indian tea opened May 20. Rain is reported to have interfered with the leaf. Best teas have not come forward. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goode are very interesting, although comparatively quiet. Tomatoes have maintained the strong position of last week. Sardines hold high prices. According to news from the French packers, there is likely to be another season of high prices. The trade would be well advised if they prevented their stocks from running too low, and to buy from existing parcels, which are likely to be more salable than newly-packed fish. The shipments of pineapples have been reported light by many thousand cases, in comparison with the corresponding period of last year, which has tended towards a firmer market. Canned meats and tongue have been very quiet, and if anything are slightly easier. There seems to be a good demand for California fruits, especially in lower grades. Pears and apricots do not seem to be plentiful. Salmon is moving steadily, the chief inquiry being for best grades of Alaska, which are the cheapest grades offered. Corn and other vegetables are still maintaining their strong position. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The market is very quiet for dried fruits. The lower quality of currants is becoming more neglected, when compared with those better sorts which show so much advantage to the purchaser. Sultanas, although quiet, maintain a steadily advancing price, with what few sales do take place. Holders seem to feel that a steady advance will take place ultimately, and are playing a waiting game. Crop news continues unsatisfactory. The demand for Valencia raisins has improved slightly, but the market is really unchanged. We quote:

Green Fruits.

The green fruit market is decidedly dull. The immense supply of oranges and lemons has glutted the market to such an extent that no relief is expected for some little time yet. However, in about a couple of weeks California fruit is expected, and the market may change a little then. Lemons are a little higher in sympathy with the advance in the New York market. Strawberries took a notable drop to 10 and 12 1-2c. Egyptian onions dropped from $2.30 to $1.75 per bag, owing to copious supplies of last of the season's shipments. Cabbages have dropped from 50 to 75c a crate. Cherries are now in stock, and are selling at $2.50 per ten-lb. box. Pineapples are a little firmer. We quote:

Fish.

All kinds of fish are selling freely, except brook trout, which is very scarce, and is selling at 80c. Gaspe salmon has dropped to 19c, and British Columbia salmon to 15c, and all kinds of fish are easy in price. Lake trout maintains its firmness at 8c. Fresh boiled lobsters have dropped to 10c. The arrivals are plentiful, and the demand is generally good. One large dealer stated that it was many years since he had noted such a strong demand for fish. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The steadiness of the egg market has been well maintained, with a good demand. The receipts were 1,604 cases on Monday, being nearly double those of Saturday, while no quotable change took place in the market on spot. Buyers state that they lowered their price to 14c for points east of Toronto. Sales were made in Montreal at 15 to 15 1-2c, and seconds at 14 to 14 1-2c per dozen.

BEANS.

The bean market is absolutely featureless, choice primes were sold at $1.40 to $1.45, and primes at $1.35 per bushel, while choice primes sold in car lots at $1.35 and primes at $1.30 per bushel.

HONEY.

Honey remains in the same position. White clover is quoted at 13 1-2 to 14c. Extracted white clover remains at 8 1-2 to 9c in 10 lb. tins, and 7 to 7 1-2c in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat remains at 6 and 7c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

POTATOES.

A quiet tone has marked the potato market, owing to the fact that buyers are well supplied. Sound stock sold 65 to 75c a bag, ex track. Some sprouted stock was offered at 60c, ex track. Some jobbers sold ex store at 85 to 90c a bag.

Flour is still low in price, with no immediate hope of an advance; in fact, one large manufacturer spoke very discouragingly of the future of flour. We quote:

SPECIAL NOTICE

TO THE TRADE

Retail merchants in placing orders for futures in "Quaker" Canned Goods have little to fear that their orders will not be fully taken care of. Every year since we commenced business five years ago we have made large additions to the plant to try and keep up with the demand for "Quaker" Goods. While with these past improvements we have not been quite able to keep up with the demand, this year with an increased acreage of forty per cent. and an outlay of eighteen thousand dollars in addition to the plant, we fully expect to be able to cope with all business offered us. In reference to labels, for this year we have made some very handsome additions. Sample books of these labels will shortly be in the hands of the travellers representing wholesale houses who are handling "Quaker" Goods.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Special Correspondence of THE CANADIAN GROCER

Vancouver, B. C., June 3, 1904.

A HEAVY movement of beef and general freight for Dawson and the north has begun. For the next fifteen days there will be large consignments of beef, cattle, sheep, hogs, etc., sent north by various freighters. The steamer Venture, chartered by the MacKenzie Bros. Co., Limited, last night sailed from this port with no less than 600 head of live stock, including cattle, sheep, hogs and horses, the cattle predominating. The hulk Henriette, formerly a French sailing ship, but now used as a cargo carrier, towed by the tug Escort No. II, will leave next week with a similar large cargo of live stock. The Venture carried, in addition, some large consignments of general merchandise, 500 tons in all. In addition her bunkers were filled with two or three hundred tons of coal at Union before the vessel loaded her cargo here.

The Seattle business men who are standing aside and seeing the regular trade of the Yukon being done by Canadian houses now, which was formerly practically monopolized by the merchants of the Sound cities, are getting anxious. The latest from Seattle showing their attitude is a discussion of the difficulties set in the way of the contractors for supplying the Alaskan army posts. The reason the Seattleites object is that the trade goes by way of Skagway to White Horse, and then down the Yukon past Dawson to the posts in U. S. territory. The War Department has even sent some soldiers that way, but to even this objection is taken. The U. S. transportation people object to making business for the White Pass road, which is partly in Canadian territory. The river steamers from White Horse down to Dawson must be Canadian vessels, and so the larger part of the carrying falls into the hands of the White Pass people. The United States companies can only carry via St. Michaels and the Lower Yukon, but it would be a bad handicap if all the supplies for the United States posts had to be sent that way. In fact, some supplies could not be sent at all. The United States law is that goods cannot be shipped between two United States points except in American vessels or on American roads. This is physically impossible for shipments via White Horse and Dawson. The regulation of the Customs' Department in Canada is that the Dominion Government will not allow American steamers to engage in trade on the Yukon between White Horse and Dawson. The difficulty so far is confined to the United States War Department and the United States transportation companies, which are making strong representations to forbid the carrying of goods by the upper river.

Market matters in British Columbia this week are fairly active. Northern shipments, as noted above, are beginning to move rapidly. In produce there is some tendency to hold the quotations on eastern butter up. One commission man notified his customers in the wholesale trade that since last quotation on which they had bought the price east had advanced 1¼c. As a consequence eastern Canadian butter, which last week jobbed at 20c and shaded for larger quantities, is now held stiff at 20½c. The local creameries are still selling at 25c, but as noted last week, that price will be held firm and may rise again. Eggs are still firm at 22½c, and not very plentiful. Local egg supplies are much less liberal than for a while when the Spring first opened. Importations are practically all from Ontario. Facilities for gathering and packing uniform cars are wanting in the Northwest, and the trade here apparently is willing to pay for the good article from Ontario.

Cheese has been bobbing round a good deal in sympathy with changing quotations from the east. Prices are, however, fairly average at 11½c to 12c. The only stock now on hand is some early fodder cheese from the east

In groceries there is to be noted the same abnormal condition in the tinned vegetables which has always marked this market. Corn can be bought here by retailers in small lots at 3c less per dozen than it now costs to lay it down, at present eastern quotations. The price east to retailers is $1.25. Here it is $1.15 per doz., and apparently not likely to change, though there has been some effort to get it up to $1.25. Other vegetables are about as last quoted, $1.15 for peas and beans, $1.50 for tomatoes.

In dried fruits, there are some very cheap prunes in boxes quoted from California. As low as 4c, and from that up, is asked. California figs, also in boxes, are quoted from California as low as 4c. Apricots are scarce and high. So are peaches, while dried pears are very scarce and a good article can hardly be got at all.

In fruits, the newest line is fresh apricots,—very good quality, too, for first of the season. They are $2.75 per crate of 20 lbs. Royal Ann cherries, as well as Black Tartarians, are now plentiful. The price is $1.65 to $1.75.

Local strawberries are beginning to come in, and are practically going to head off the Hood River, Oregon, stock, which usually has a fortnight's run on this market after the Californias are out, and before the local berries come in. This year the Oregon and Washington fruit is so late that locals are beginning to arrive with them, and will, of course, shut them out. The price is still high, as the quantities are yet small. Next week there will be big supplies. Present figures run from $4 to $5 for the 24 box crate.

Oranges are quoted a little higher. Bananas are perhaps 25c per bunch lower, at $3 to $3.25, with extra large ones at a special figure. Pines from Mexico are $3.50 up per doz.

In vegetables, potatoes have dropped way down. Ashcrofts can be bought for $20, and locals at your own price, though $12 per ton is asked and there is not enough demand to take up the offerings. New California potatoes are selling at 3½ to 4c per lb.

Wax beans, 14 and 15c per lb.; string beans, about the same; green peas, 5 and 6c per lb. Asparagus is selling at $2 to $2.25 per crate of 20 lbs. Celery is out of the market just now.

THE HANDLING, DISPLAYING AND SELLING OF FISH.

IN no department of the grocery trade has more marked improvement been shown during the last few years than that given over to fish. Formerly the fish department was hardly worthy of the name. A barrel or two of salted fish, a few cases of dry salted stock, and perchance a dozen fresh fish, constituted the regulation supply. To-day many grocers make a specialty of their fish trade to the extent of having a distinct fish department. Instead of a few staples such as herring and finnan haddie, fish are now to be seen in almost any up-to-date grocery in great variety. Sea fish and fresh water fish have captured the market. Sea salmon and salmon trout, white fish, halibut, bass, cod, haddock, shad, perch, lobsters, oysters, shrimps, and numerous other kinds are all sold by the retail grocer.

Fish Display.

The methods of displaying fish nowadays would have been an eye-opener to the pioneer Canadian grocer of fifty years ago. Art in the display of fish was a thing unknown in those days. A customer was served direct from the fish barrel or disorderly pile of fresh fish. Now he is treated to a fine display of fresh water, sea and salted fish, arranged in the fish section of a store. The department will be finished perchance in white marble and glazed tile, with a large slanting marble table in the centre, on which are arranged the largest fish by themselves and the smaller ones in dozens or half dozens on platters, garnished with parsley, lettuce and fancy vegetables. The centre of this table will be surmounted by a pyramid of ferns and palms. An equally attractive display will be shown in the front window. During the Winter months, platters and marble slabs are utilized. Under no circumstances will there be any piling or bunching of the individual fish after the heterogeneous fashion of years ago. The utmost care is shown nowadays in the arrangement of a fish window. In all probablility fillets of salmon or a dozen salmon steaks will have a place. In the Summer season when such a display is out of the question, the window will be turned into an aquarium, and the transient trade attracted by a collection of live gold fish, brook trout, etc.

A grocer need never fear the result of overscrupulousness in window display. One prominent Toronto grocer who has made a big success of his fish department had no hesitation in saying his window display had always been a big drawing card. "Customers," said he, "like to see fish arranged in the most attractive manner possible, and in this, as in every other department, it is up to the grocer to give his customers just what they want. Success in the grocery trade depends largely upon the care that is exercised in catering to one's customers."

In handling fish there are marked peculiarities in the requirements of trade to-day. The up-to-date grocer scales, skins and cleans all his fish ready for the table. In nine out of ten households there is a prejudice against fish just because so much disagreeable labor and inconvenience has become associated with the operation of getting them ready for the table. The fastidious cook is now saved all this trouble, and the result to the grocer is increased sales and an enviable reputation. "Of course the extra trouble taken has to be paid for," says the grocer, "but as a rule customers appreciate the service and willingly pay the price."

A feature of the fish trade during the last two or three years has been the filleting of fish. Only one cook or chef in a hundred understands the work of boning, skinning and cutting. This difficulty is now solved and the grocer supplies the article for cooking. Lobsters are boiled alive and cooked by the grocer, never bought already cooked, as the flavor is impaired if the lobster is killed before cooking.

Without question a fish department carried on along somewhat similar lines to those mentioned above could be made a success in a city or a town grocery where there is sufficient first-class trade among which a demand may be created for high-class fish prepared in good style. One thing that is necessary, however, is that the town grocer shall have good facilities for obtaining first-class sea and lake fish at frequent intervals. With good cold storage fish can be kept perfectly for a week. Ice must always be fresh, however, and ordinary care exercised in keeping the fish clean and well aired.

City grocers who have made a feature of their fish department say their chief reason for following up the fish trade has been to complete the link in the chain of edibles which every grocer should carry in the same way that they have taken up the provision and fruit trade. The fish trade helps other business and vice versa. It always pays a grocer to supply everything a housewife requires for her table. These remarks are equally applicable to the grocery trade in the larger towns of Canada.

GREEN FRUITS

Fruit Outlook.

EARLY forecasts have been upset regarding fruit. It will be remembered that early in the season it was reported, supposedly by an expert, that the Niagara District fruit crop would be a failure. Incident to this statement came the observation that mice had ravaged the tree trunks and that the severe Winter had killed all the buds. This notion has been dispelled by T. H. P. Carpenter, of Winona, Ont., one of the best known fruit exporters in Canada, who gave the following information regarding the fruit outlook in an interview with The Grocer last week:

The peach crop will be fair and the pear crop good. Plums are setting well in the buds; so are peaches and pears. There will be a falling off of about one-third in strawberries. Grapes are setting all right, and certainly the gloomy forebodings of the early kickers show no signs of being verified. Raspberries will show about 85 per cent. of the usual crop, and generally all fruits will turn out well, provided nothing unforeseen interfered.

Another interesting point raised by Mr. Carpenter was that the Government fruit reports, while given in the best of spirit and intention, are misleading. They are generally too extreme, owing to the wide technical knowledge of the man who makes the reports, and sometimes the lack of sufficient practical observation. Any report requires modification, and local conditions always enter into a report on fruit. More care should be paid to these reports on the part of the department controlling them.

Fruit Crop of Canada.

A LARGE number of fruit crop reports from all parts of Canada have come to hand during the past two weeks. The estimates given therein are based chiefly upon the appearance of the fruit buds, and the general condition of the trees and plants, as at the time of writing there was in most cases little else by which to judge. In Prince Edward Island the season was not far enough advanced to report intelligently.

APPLES.

Ontario—In the southwestern counties, or so-called "fruit belt," early, Fall and Winter apples all promise a medium to full crop. Western Ontario, generally, is expected to give a medium to full crop of early varieties, a medium crop of the Fall apples, and at least an average yield of Russets, Greenings and Ben Davis. In the Georgian Bay District of Ontario Baldwins and Spies suffered badly from frost, and tender varieties are mostly killed. In Central Ontario, early varieties will probably yield a full crop; Fall varieties a medium crop, except Fameuse, which is very promising; Winter sorts a medium to full crop.

Quebec and Eastern Ontario—The varieties grown promise medium to good crops, largely Fameuse.

New Brunswick and Eastern Quebec—Not many apples grown, but a medium crop is expected.

Nova Scotia—Trees are reported in splendid condition nearly all over the province, with an abundance of fruit buds. Although growers do not expect two bumper crops in succession, they are very much pleased with the outlook. A medium to full crop is indicated everywhere.

British Columbia—The apple crop promises to be excellent, even better than last year.

PEARS.

Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick reports indicate severe injuries by frost. Early pears in these provinces are likely to be a fair crop, and the later varieties, though at first expected to be light are now showing heavy bloom. In Nova Scotia indications point to a full crop of early fruit, and a medium to full crop of the late varieties. A full crop is also expected in British Columbia.

PEACHES.

Last Winter was a disastrous one to peach growers in all parts of Canada, as whole orchards have been wiped out by the extreme cold. The crop will be light this year, as the reports from all the provinces are uniformly unfavorable.

PLUMS.

Plum trees also suffered from Winter killing, and even where the trees survived the fruit buds and spurs were frequently killed. There are prospects of a medium crop in western Ontario, but in the rest of the province, only native plums and such hardy varieties as the Burbank and Abundance will yield a crop. Nova Scotia and British Columbia both report prospects fair for a medium crop.

GRAPES.

A fair crop of grapes seems to be expected in all sections where they are grown to any extent. Tender varieties, and in the more northerly latitudes nearly all varieties, were badly Winter killed.

CURRANTS AND CHERRIES.

Red currants are reported good everywhere. The black varieties are almost a failure in southwestern Ontario, and only fair in the Annapolis Valley, N. S.; other reports indicate an average.

Cherries are promising in western Ontario, but poor in eastern Ontario and Quebec. In Nova Scotia and British Columbia, medium crops are expected.

STRAWBERRIES AND RASPBERRIES.

Strawberries killed out badly, especially in the Niagara and Essex Districts. Raspberries also suffered, both from frost and from heavy snow, which broke the canes. Both raspberries and strawberries are likely to be light in the Ontario fruit belt and medium in the other provinces, except British Columbia, which promises nearly a full crop.

Adulterated Jellies in U. S.

The United States commission for the establishment of standards for pure foods, recently in session in New York, has declared that jellies and jams are generally adulterated. It is claimed that 60 per cent. of the "jellies" made in the United States are imitations composed of glucose and coloring matter, while some jellies contain no fruit at all. One witness before the commission stated that if the manufacture of compound jellies by mixing different fruits were forbidden, 75 per cent. of the factories in the States would have to close.

Story of the Apple.

The first apple trees planted in America were imported by the Dutch settlement at New York in 1614. Apple trees were also known to have been growing at Jamestown, Va., as early as 1622. Until within the last half century apples were grown almost solely for cider-making, as is the case to-day in France. As hard cider will produce drunkenness and a horrible katzenjammer, William Penn advised the colonists in Pennsylvania to cultivate indigenous fruits alone, as apples were then used almost exclusively for making cider or apple jack.

Many of the orchards of the pioneers of the Middle Western States were grown from seeds obtained in a peculiar way. Some man whose full name has been forgotten, and who is remembered only by the appellation of "Apple-seed Johnny," traveled through the West and scattered among the settlers untold quantities of apple seeds. He gave them away free of charge, and he was given a hearty welcome at every cabin door.

Egyptian Onion Season Over.

A Montreal dealer has been informed from New York that the total shipments of Egyptian onions from Egypt were 1,500,000 sacks, 500,000 of which went to Trieste and Hamburg. It was expected that 7,000 bags would arrive in New York this week, and this would probably wind up the season, which would be three weeks earlier than last year.

Vegetables in the Yukon.

Recent reports from Alaska and the Yukon Territory say the business of shipping in vegetables from Canada and the United States has seriously declined on account of the local production. Where Will Manitoba Wheat be Milled?

IN a recent issue of the Toronto World appeared an interesting article by its western correspondent, to the effect that eastern Canada would become the manufacturing depot for the product of the grain fields of the Great West to the exclusion of the milling industry in the vicinity of Winnipeg.

A representative of The Grocer had the pleasure of interviewing a prominent Toronto flour exporter on some of the salient points of the above mentioned article, and the substance of the interview is reproduced in this week's issue of The Grocer.

In the first place, the gentleman interviewed pooh-poohed the whole thing as improbable, and substantiated his claim that western grain would continue to be milled in the country of production both for purposes of export and local consumption, by the observation that formerly Oswego, N. Y., was the premier milling centre in the United States. As the tide of immigration, however, swept westward, and grain growing was taken up on a large scale by farmers in the middle and western states, milling industries followed, and to-day the leading American milling centre was situated at Minneapolis. Surely no other direct proof of the growth of milling in the Canadian west was necessary than the evidence afforded by the building and equipping of two very large flour mills in the west during the present year.

If western grain for export were not milled at home it would be milled in foreign markets, but under no circumstances was it likely to be carried part way to its destination, unshipped, milled, and re-shipped for foreign markets.

With regard to the statement that the quality of flour manufactured from western wheat by large milling concerns situated at the door of the Canadian west was inferior to that produced by the smaller mills of Ontario, exception was taken at the outset. The article also urged that economic conditions were favorable to the milling of western flour in the east, namely, the high cost of fuel in the west, and in addition the relative cheapness of freight on grain in bulk via the lake and rail route, as compared with that on the manufactured product. The scarcity and high price paid for labor in the west was another consideration. There were advantages, however, on the other side, such as the superior storage accommodation for grain in the west, which would go a long way to even things up.

There is no question but the high price of fuel and scarcity of labor are important items in the cost of milling in the west. The matter of freight, moreover, is not to be passed over lightly. Another factor is the comparative lack of water power west of Winnipeg. Apparently it will not be very long before Canadian millers will be face to face with an interesting problem. Meanwhile opinions are being hazarded on both sides. One man well conversant with the flour situation in Canada has gone so far as to say a mill with a capacity of 1,100 barrels daily could be located more profitably at Toronto than at any other point in Canada. The Grocer hopes to publish from time to time in succeeding issues the opinions of representative Canadian millers on this subject.

Agricultural College Changes.

An important change has been decided upon in connection with the teaching department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Instead of one professor of agriculture there will be in future a professor of field husbandry and a professor of animal husbandry. G. E. Day, now professor of agriculture, will be in charge of the department of animal husbandry. C. A. Zavitz will be professor of field husbandry.

Canadian Flour in Jamaica.

LATEST reports, dated April 30, from the commercial agent of the Canadian Government, stationed at Jamaica, state that within the last fortnight a shipment consisting of 350 barrels and 50 sacks flour, also 200 barrels corn meal arrived on the ss. Veritas from Halifax. Other shipments have also steadily been arriving, via New York, thus pointing to the fact that the Canadian article is at least making some steady progress on lines of public favor. This result has been brought about, no doubt, by the respective millers concerned finding it both expedient and to their interest to effect development by forwarding initial shipments on consignments. It is to be hoped that all things being equal regarding freight and other charges, shippers will always avail themselves of direct bottom, by the regular sailings from Halifax or St. John.

——

Grain Inspection.

The Montreal Board of Trade have advocated that grain inspection shall be done under their supervision. In fact at their last meeting the recent Government amendments met with their approval, provided the Board of Trade should have charge of the inspection. Should it happen, however, that the recommendation did not meet with the approval of the Government, the council of the Board of Trade will support the amendments to the bill suggested by the Montreal Corn Exchange Association, in so far as they relate to the making of the appeal of the survey board final. W. I. Gear and R. Munroe were deputed to see that the recommendations re grain and other matters were submitted to the Commission on Transportation, which was holding sessions in the board rooms on June 6 and 7. Word was received from George E. Drummond that he would sail for home on June 11.

——

Elevators at Port Arthur.

The new Canadian Northern elevators at Port Arthur are ready for handling grain. The two new buildings give the C. N. R. a storage of seven million bushels, and the two working houses will be capable of handling two million bushels of grain daily. The storage houses are built of tile and steel, and are entirely fireproof.

Brazil Tobacco Industry.

IN Brazil tobacco is chiefly cultivated in the Provinces of Bahia, Minas, San Paulo and Para. The Town of Purificacao, in Bahia, is the centre of an important tobacco growing district. The cultivation is increasing, and greater care is taken in the curing.

The common up country method is to pick the leaves from the stalks, dry them under the hut roofs, remove the midribs, and spread them in layers, amounting to from two to eight pounds, for rolling together and binding with back strips.

These rolls are bound very tightly with a cord, and left for several days when the cord is replaced by strips of jacitara, the split stem of a climbing palm, and have a stick-like form one and one-half inch in diameter. They are sold in masas of four to six feet in length, but the tobacco is not considered good until it has fermented for five or six months, when it is hard and black, and shaved off as required for pipes, cigarettes and cigars, the last made with wrappers of tanari bark. The Tapayos tobacco is considered the finest in the Amazon Valley.

The cultivation of tobacco in Brazil began about the year 1600 in the Province of Bahia, and from thence extended to all the other districts along the coast. Among the localities earliest known for their tobacco production was the Lake District of Pernambuco, now the Province of Alagoas, where an excellent quality was produced, which commanded very high prices. During the following century the cultivation increased so rapidly in Alagoas and Bahia that at the commencement of the next century the average annual export had reached 2,857 tons from the latter and 285 tons from the former province. The earliest export statistics available for the whole of Brazil are for the year 1839-40, when the export amounted to 9,472,000 pounds, and the value exceeded $325,000. In 1879-80 the export was 50,000,000 pounds, of the value of $3,295,000; in 1880-81, 44,000,000 pounds, of the value of $3,250,000, and in 1881-82, 52,000,000 pounds, of the value of $3,400,000.

Though the principal tobacco producing province of Brazil is Bahia, tobacco of good quality is grown in every part of Brazil, from the Amazon to the Rio Grande frontier.

The methods employed in the cultivation and preparation of the plant are very much the same as they were nearly two hundred years ago.

The land selected for tobacco growing is cleared and the surface worked with a hoe, after which it is marked off into parallel rows about three feet apart, according to locality and the size of the mature plants. In transplanting, the young plants are set from two to three feet apart, and are manured heavily in the pits opened for them.

In gathering the crops planters wait until the plants are fully matured, this being determined by doubling and breaking one of the top leaves. In Bahia and other Brazilian provinces the lower leaf is often picked by itself, and in a few days the next, and so on as long as the plant will develop the lower leaves into what is classed first quality. These leaves are hung up two and two, under cover and across poles, twenty-four hours after picking and sweating.

When it is intended to twist the leaves into ropes they are left hanging about two days, when they are taken down, carefully freed from the heavy parts of the midrib, doubled in halves, and laid away for the rope twister. This operation requires considerable dexterity, and is generally entrusted to the best man on the plantation. The operation requires a rude windlass, which is slowly turned in winding the rope, which is twisted by hand. A boy is usually employed entirely to hand leaves to the twister. These ropes are unwound and re-wound once or twice a day for a period of ten to fifteen days, according to the weather, and are twisted a little harder each time. In curing the tobacco grows darker and darker, until it becomes jet black. The juices exuding from the rolls are carefully caught and preserved until the last winding, when, mixed with lard, syrup and various aromatic herbs, they are used to pass the rope through, previous to the final winding. The last step is to cut the cured ropes in certain lengths, and to re-wind them upon light wooden sticks, about two feet in length, the winding being very compact and regular. The rolls are then covered with leather or strong canvas, when they are ready for market. Formerly these rolls were made to weight eight arrobas, or 256 pounds, though rolls of three arrobas were made for the home markets. At the present time the weights vary according to the locality.

Tobacco Crop of Canada.

By Ernest Bailey, King-ville, Ont.

HAVING noticed an article in The Canadian Grocer of May 20th, under the heading, "The Tobacco-Growing Industry of Canada," I may say that, on the whole, the subject has been very accurately dealt with, with the exception of one or two statements. For instance, the article says that Ontario raised tobacco to the value of $3,500,000 in 1900, while the Quebec crop for the following year was estimated at $7,656,000. Now, so far as Ontario is concerned this would have required about 21,000,000 pounds, at 6c per pound, which was about the average price for that season's crop, while a closer estimate would have been about $200,000 for about 3½ million pounds.

In this connection I beg to offer you some information concerning the prospects for the coming season. Owing to the short crops and consequent high prices during the past two or three years, it was expected that an enormous quantity of tobacco would be raised this year, in view of which nearly every farmer and many others, who could rent a few acres either for cash or on shares, intended raising a crop, and plant beds could be seen on every hand.

The extreme backwardness of the Spring, however, greatly changed the prospect, so that at the beginning of June, when transplanting should be commenced in order to ensure a heavy crop, there are no plants ready, and the greater portion will not be large enough for at least three or four weeks, even under the most favorable conditions. Unless the Fall proves favorable the season must necessarily be too short for the crop to mature properly.

Moreover, a large proportion of the seed sown failed to germinate, either through the lack of warm weather or the poor quality; so that, in all probability, the tobacco yield will not be any larger, if as large, as that of last year.

Coloring a Meerschaum.

THE Western Tobacco Journal offers the following advice on the art of coloring a meerschaum: Don't put a cover on your meerschaum pipe if you want it to color nicely. In smoking a meerschaum, a "top-bowl" should be placed in the pipe bowl proper. This prevents the fire from coming in contact with the bowl. If the fire touches the bowl, it is made "raw," and will not color. Clouded and clear amber "bits" are equally valuable.

Briar root pipes cost about three times as much as briar wood pipes, although many briar wood pipes are sold as the root, and everything, from apple wood up, is nowadays stamped "Real French Briar." All the briar root and wood comes from France. The meerschaum and amber from Germany, where all the good workmen on pipes came from originally, although there is now an American school of such artists.

The art of carving pipe bowls and bits is usually handed down from father to son, by this means the secrets being kept in the family. The carver, as a rule, has to know something of mechanics, too, as he usually has to forge his own delicate tools, with which the work is done. The average mechanic does not understand the work of forging these tools. Some carvers are never able to carve elaborate bowls. They must confine themselves to the smooth, rounded bowls, of which so many are seen. This applies as well to the briar root pipes as to meerschaum. Briar wood is seldom carved. It is not sufficiently valuable.

The art of pipe repairing is the source of considerable revenue, as a smoker reluctantly gives up his well colored bowl, even though to a non-smoker it looks a wreck. An artist in meerschaum will so modulate the curing of a bit of clay, that in the coloration ribbons and streamers of white will appear shining through the glossy brown of the rest of the bowl.

Canadian Tobacco Standard.

The report of J. B. Dugas, who went to Belgium in September, 1902, with samples of tobacco grown in the Counties of Montcalm, Joliette and L'Assomption, has been presented to the Provincial Government of Quebec. Mr. Dugas submitted the samples to prominent tobacco manufacturers and dealers both in Belgium and England, and he quotes at length the criticisms of these gentlemen on the Canadian product. He summarizes the opinions of the experts by stating that they are agreed that with proper attention to the choice of suitable types, to proper sorting, to color, texture and size of the leaf, together with equal fermentation, there is no doubt that Canadian tobacco could be remuneratively shipped both to England and Belgium. In some respects the sorting of the samples was faulty and defective. Proper frementation would double and treble its value. Mr. Dugas suggests that the Government should aid the tobacco-growers by furnishing them with seed, as at the present time nearly every farmer is raising his own tobacco seed and the quality is deteriorating.

Should be in the mouth of every smoker. What? a

Italian Tobacco Regie.

ACCORDING to the report of the Italian Tobacco Regie, which has just been published, the gross receipts for the year 1902-03 were 210,134,225 lire, or 1,548,695 lire more than for the previous year, the receipts for which were also 6,064,570 lire higher than the year before that. In Italy itself 204,594,534 lire worth of tobacco was sold, and 2,584,301 lire worth was exported. The expenditure of the Tobacco Regie amounted in the year 1902-03 to 52,255,251 lire, which, after deducting the amount of 2,601,959 lire still in hand on June 30, 1903, is reduced to 49,653,292 lire. If this is subtracted from the gross receipts in which is included the duty received from tobacco for private individuals, and which amounts to 210,134,225 lire, a net profit of 160,480,933 lire remains.

Tobacco Riddle.

Not all tobacconists perhaps have read this riddle:

To three-fourths of a cross add a circle complete.
Then let two semi-circles perpendicular meet;
Now, let a triangle stand on two feet—
Then add two semi-circles and a circle complete.

The answer is:

CARDS VS. LEDGERS.

BEFORE the Birmingham Chartered Accountants' Students' Society, Mr. John Wilson, a director of a large English house, delivered a lecture dealing with bookkeeping by cards. A part of his lecture was as follows:

Permit me at the outset to clearly state I do not claim to be the originator of the card system, but of a card system of bookkeeping. For a layman to address a society of students who are daily in touch with the most expert and up-to-date accountants savors somewhat of egotism. I do not claim to be an accountant, but my long experience of counting-house work has educated me for account-keeping suitable for a large commercial house where there are continuous entries recurring, and with a view of advancing a greater interest in an important section of all commercial enterprise—namely, the "keeping of accounts," I have always recognized its importance and pressed its claims.

In my opinion, it matters little whether accounts are kept in ledgers, on loose leaves, or on cards; the essential in account-keeping being accuracy, safety, simplicity. If without endangering these essentials I can obtain the same results more readily and so save labor and expense, I am sufficiently radical to try any labor-saving method, or, to use the hackneyed election cry, combine "economy with efficiency."

1. As to Accuracy.—Because a leaf is loose, instead of being bound in a book, can make no possible difference as far as an actual record is concerned.

2. As to Safety.—I have proved that a leaf can be taken from a ledger and not missed for weeks, months, and perhaps not at all, unless wanted.

Now, a card cannot be taken from a cabinet without being instantly missed. Therefore, I claim that a cabinet of cards, properly managed, and subject to daily checks—only a glance—is quite as safe as a ledger.

3. Simplicity.—There can be no possible doubt that a card can be much easier found than a folio in a ledger, and the calling back from the card much quicker.

Pardon me for a moment taking you through an ordinary posting.

We have here the journal or day-book entry, and find on page 7-783:

Polley and Clarke, Limited,
66 Corporation street,
Birmingham, £19 17s 4 1-2d.

The old method is:

Find the name and folio, say 2823.

Find 2823 in ledger.

Make our entry: £19 17s 4 1-2d, 7-783 reference.

Turn to day-book, and fill in folio of ledger, 2823.

We have five transactions, and eight figures of reference.

By the introduction of the combination of my card system with the Library Bureau, Addressograph, and Burroughs' Adding Machine, I claim to have saved half the labor of posting, calling back, making statements, addressing the envelopes and balancing the ledgers.

Example:

Polley and Clarke, Limited,
becomes 2823.

The spelling and address has been checked and approved, so once right always right. Get your addressograph link correct and the combination of links to suit your requirements and mistakes become almost impossible if ordinary care is used.

The Addressograph.—To set up a link takes three to five minutes. The first process for a new account seems a little waste of time. This, however, is not so when you consider the process of one transaction only.

For instance, the name repeats itself for index accounts, circulars index, ledger index, heading ledger, heading invoice and envelope, heading statement and envelope, label on parcel, consignment note—at least twelve repeats. If, therefore, you are getting the same customer constantly repeating, the saving is considerable. If you will time the boy at the addressograph you will see how quickly the addressing is done.

2823 Twenty repeats please.

The loose sheets, of course, represent the various stationery.

I think I am well within the mark in saying it takes a fast writer to address 100 envelopes in the hour, and then accuracy is not of necessity secured; this number can be produced from the addressograph in five minutes.

Shall we now consider the ledger?

Who has not longed to give a helping hand when a ledger was "out"? And several who could have helped were helpless because it was "one man, one book." This difficulty is solved by using the card ledger. You can take it in sections, and put on as many clerks as there are sections, or a clerk to each card if you wish it.

On interviewing customers relative to the state of an account or a dispute, the old-fashioned order of "Bring in the ledger" has passed away. Instead of stopping the ledger clerk or sending him off for a holiday, or to pass perhaps half an hour in idleness while you have the ledger, or worse still, to find a clerk popping in and out like a jack-in-the-box to make a reference or two from his ledger, the new order of things is, "No. 101 ledger card, please!" You have the account you want, the clerk is free to follow his own sweet will—or rather, go on with his work, the customer can look over your shoulder while he discusses the account, without your fear of exposing his neighbor's account on the opposite page.

Early in the month I had the misfortune to be in bed for a few days; some dozen accounts or more required dealing with as to immediate delivery of goods exceeding the high limit mark. Before a just decision could be given it was necessary to review the working of the account for twelve months or more. Let me give you the alternative under the old rule:

1. A clerk spending unlimited time taking copies of the accounts; or,

2. Loading up the ledgers and carting them to me! The poor invalid groans under the ledger on his bed! The work at the office ceases until the return of the cart!

This is now changed; we are under the dispensation of the card system. The clerk waltzes gaily into the room with a dozen or more ledger cards some few ounces in weight; the bed-stricken one, without even raising himself on his pillow, reviews the position of the account, gives a fair and wise decision, and so once more mind prevails over matter, or, in other words, cards triumph over ledgers. This, however, may be criticized as theory, and it has truly been said: "One ounce of fact is worth pounds of theory"; still, theory must come first, hence I have taken it in order. We will now take a few facts:

I have here a perforated sheet taken from a book, on the left-hand side of which are particulars of nineteen departments. Instead of posting from a book in which there are twenty-one pages of detail, I distribute the book by tearing out the perforated portion, so that the eight sections of the business can be posted at the same time. There are fifty-one postings to be done, and I will ask the ledger clerk and his junior to post fifty-one items—the actual transactions of a portion of a section for one day. Will you kindly time them during the work and I will go on talking. I make the time 7.12.

My past experience has been that to refer to a loose index, post and call back fifty postings, took twenty-five to thirty minutes, or say 1,500 postings and calling back was a good day's work for ledger clerk and junior, and then when ledgers came to be balanced you sometimes found a mistake—but where? Somewhere in the book, certainly, but where? Now with the cards you have the accounts disconnected with the other accounts, and know for a certainty that the error must be on the cards out of the cabinet, not those in the cabinet. In calling back a ledger you have to repeat the process of finding folio after folio; with the cards they are in order, and called back much more quickly. I admit the cards have to be put away again, but this is a small matter, as you will see when the junior comes to that process.

COMMERCIAL LAW.

FREQUENTLY business men have need of the services of lawyers in centres other than their own. Whether for legal representation, the organization of companies, searching titles to property, watching the interests of creditors or for the collection of accounts it is generally wise to be in close touch with a reliable legal firm who are "on the spot." For this reason, merchants should often refer to the legal cards on another page. The firms whose card are inserted are reliable and capable of any work required of them by readers of this paper.

HOW A CASH BUSINESS WAS STARTED

CASH in the grocery store is the theme of an article by Fred Harris, of Mattoon, Ill., in which he explains how he introduced a cash system into his grocery store, and this is how he tells his story :

Our business is now strictly cash. Everything is paid for before it leaves the store or goes C. O. D. Our system in regard to checking C. O. D. orders is almost perfect. We have a place for everything and everything in its place. We believe in and practice system, always remembering the words, "Do it now"—not to-morrow or after awhile. Do it now and get it off your mind, so you will be ready for the next thing that comes up.

I worked for my father until I was twenty-one, at which time he retired from business in comfortable circumstances. I bought his stock, paying for it as I could with 7 per cent. interest on same till paid. When I took the store I didn't have a dollar, but I managed to pay for it all, $2,200, in just thirteen months, and $80 interest besides. I had worked for him for eight years. He conducted a credit business, and after taking the store I did a credit business for six years. Now I have done a strictly cash business four years, and can't begin to tell you how much better I like it. I made money in the credit business, but I had my losses, too, just as most all my brother grocers do.

Days of Worry.

There were days I wished I had never seen a grocery store and worried, just as thousands of credit grocers are doing to-day. Then came a time when persons whom I considered my best friends began to take advantage of the bankruptcy law and get the better of me. That put me to thinking, and I decided to wind up the credit business at once and forever. My store was seven blocks from the heart of the City of Mattoon. I changed my system. I moved to the heart of the city, and have been at this location four years.

When I made the change I had some very fine credit trade, but I made up my mind to conduct a strictly cash business. I sent out a thousand letters telling people I was going to make the change, advertised largely in all the home papers in advance of my change, and gave a swell opening by serving coffee free to everybody for three days. The opening was a grand success, and the store has been continuously successful ever since. When I made the move it made some of my old customers sore, and many predicted my failure on the cash plan in from two to six months. Some fairly laughed at me and said a strictly cash business in a credit railroad town was an impossibility.

As I had made up my mind to go ahead, I went ahead and I have to-day one of the finest stores in Illinois outside of Chicago. There are forty grocers in Mattoon, and I am the only one doing business strictly for cash. My sales exceed those of any other grocer. My store has been many times complimented, and is called one of the neatest, handsomest and best arranged stores in this section.

We do not solicit orders. We advertise largely and in many ways. We didn't move to this location with the view to sitting down and waiting for trade. We carry a large, complete stock, and every article is guaranteed or money back. Rich and poor are treated alike. A poor man's dollar is worth as much as the rich man's. We advertise in the home papers, send out bills by mail, give pretty calendars, send out sample packages of many foods we handle, give demonstrations in the store and adopt any other advertising plan which appears to possess merit.

Farmers Can Pay Cash.

I am a strong believer in advertising, especially in a cash business. Good advertising always pays. We have a very heavy C. O. D. telephone business. The drivers always have change and collect at the house. This was new to the people at first, and some pretended to be offended when we refused them credit. These same people are now trading with us and think cash the only system. We make a strong pull for the farmers' trade and find that good advertising sent to the farmer brings better results than to any other class of trade. We show our appreciation of this trade and find it pleasant and profitable. They own their own farms and can pay cash the year round.

In all my advertising I use cuts as much as possible, and from 10 to 150 low prices in most every ad. I put out. Using good cuts makes the advertising much more attractive. We do not try to see how cheap we can sell, but we endeavor to sell the best guaranteed groceries cheaper than they have ever been sold in Mattoon before.

I am highly pleased with my change from credit to cash and never expect to do business in any other way. When the cash system is adopted and you live up to it, you have thrown aside the cares of the grocery business. Brothers who are doing a credit business, be frank—don't you worry and sometimes lay awake nights wondering how you are going to make ends meet? Profits are so small the grocer can't pay unless customers pay him.

I do not advise everybody to do a cash business, but I do advise grocers in cities of over 10,000 inhabitants who have nerve and are not afraid to push ahead to try it and see how much more pleasure, as well as profit, they will find in a cash business. If you can't say "No" to everybody, stay out of the cash business. If you are easily discouraged stay out of it. If you will not advertise never go into the cash business, for advertising is the life of a cash store.

COFFEE CONSUMPTION.

The amount of coffee consumed per capita in the United States has increased from ten pounds in 1901 to twelve pounds in the present year. The United States is third country in the world in point of consumption of coffee per capita, Denmark being first, and Holland second. The Dutch control the Java trade, and consumed in 1900 seventeen pounds per capita. Great Britain consumes only three-quarters of a pound annually per individual, being a tea-driking nation.

WINE AGENCIES.

The president of the Chambre de Commerce in Montreal, A. Chouillou, informs The Grocer that he has received communications from some of the largest wine houses in France, who are desirous of communicating with suitable agents in Canada. The names of these firms will be gladly given to any legitimate applicant for them.

Wasting Your Energies?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of the "Griffin" Brand of Dried Fruits and the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Fish, because people who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly, the intrinsic merit of both these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

"Griffin" Brand Dried Fruits.

Seedless Raisins and Prunes. Dried Apricots, Peaches and Pears in all their original goodness. A revelation to the grocer who has been buying other Brands.

Selected with the greatest care and shipped in original boxes right from the Vineyards and Orchards on the Pacific Coast.

Look for the "Griffin" trade mark before you buy.

ORANGE CULTURE IN CALIFORNIA

By Allan Sutherland in Booklovers' Magazine.

THERE are now three well-developed centres of orange-culture in the United States —Florida, Louisiana, and California. The orange was doubtless introduced into this country by the Spanish explorers, as large groves of wild trees, of the bitter variety, were discovered at a later period in what is now Florida. That state was long our most important orange-producing centre, its fruit being of superior excellence to that imported because it could be left to ripen on the trees and then shipped to northern markets without serious loss from decay.

But in no country of the world has the cultivation of the orange developed more rapidly or more successfully than in sunny California, the land of strange contradictions—of eternal snows on its lofty mountain peaks, of endless Summer in its sheltered valleys. Nearly a hundred thousand acres are devoted to orange culture; and with Nature at her best, and rarely giving less than three hundred sunny days to every year, the groves seldom fail to yield an abundant crop. Here, within sight of snow-capped mountains, oranges and many other fruits of sub-tropical regions grow to almost ideal perfection.

California's first orange trees were planted in the famous old Mission Gardens, over a century ago, by the Franciscan Fathers, when the Missions were beginning their attempt to civilize and Christianize the native Indians. These orchards were for private use only, and but little attention was paid to extending their cultivation. No one dreamed that in the coming years oranges would be among the chief sources of wealth and employment in this wonderful "Golden State" by the far western sea; and it was not until as late as 1880 that their cultivation was begun on a large scale, with the view of profitable financial returns.

The trees are grown chiefly from seed, and the seedlings are usually planted in March and April, although some planters prefer a later season. To produce special varieties of oranges it is necessary that the young seedlings be grafted or budded, and this is usually done in the Spring. The general method is to plant the seed of the orange and then bud the young trees while they are still in the nursery, when they are about two years old, at which time they have attained a height of about two feet. Of course, select varieties are used in the budding. When the young bud has grown to become a part of the plant, the upper part of the tree is cut off, and the graft or budded shoot is straightened up and kept in this upright position by being tied to a stake close beside the original trunk. This shoot gradually develops into the full-grown tree. The tree thus grafted is transported to the field from the nursery when about four years old. It then grows rapidly, and being, as a rule, strong and vigorous, is not likely to die through transplanting.

In planting the trees it is necessary to consider carefully symmetry of appearance, economy of space, and convenience for the subsequent cultivation of the soil. There are several systems of arranging the trees, but the plan known as the square is the one most generally adopted. By this system, at the usual distance of twenty feet apart, one hundred and twenty trees are planted to the acre; prize navels and Mediterranean sweets are usually planted twenty-four feet apart, giving seventy-six trees to the acre.

Ordinarily, the orange tree, a beautiful evergreen, reaches a height of from twenty-five to thirty feet. It is of remarkably graceful proportions, the trunk being straight and the branches symmetrical. The blossoms are of a delicate white color and deliciously fragrant, giving sweet promise of the luscious fruitage concealed in their hidden depths.

The tree is remarkable for its longevity. In Cordova, Spain, there is a grove said to be not less than seven centuries old; and these ancient trees, although hollow and knotted, are still covered with blossoms and fruitage. The orange tree is very vigorous, and is remarkably prolific. It is stated that as many as twenty thousand oranges have been picked from a single tree in the Azores in one season; while at least half that number have been gathered from one in Florida. It is recorded that two magnificent old trees in Seville, Spain, have yielded above thirty thousand each in a single season; and at Nice is a tree, fifty feet in height and three feet in diameter, which produces six thousand oranges. As a rule, however, trees bear from five hundred to two thousand oranges annually.

The tree is very uniform in its bearing, there being no off years. The blossom and fruit are rarely hurt save as the result of unexpected frost, the orange-grower's most dreaded enemy. This danger, while serious, seldom threatens more than a few nights a season, and is usually met by the use of coal fires in wire baskets — from twenty to fifty to an acre. By this method the temperature is raised several degrees and the fruit is saved. The roofing of orchards is also resorted to as a protection from frost and from heat.

The sweetest and best oranges are grown on southern exposures. It is often necessary to protect the orchards from the strong prevailing winds, and this is frequently done by planting what are known as wind-breaks, consisting of alternate pepper and eucalyptus trees, set some ten or twelve feet apart. These trees, being rapid growers, soon give ample protection. The Monterey cypress is used for the same purpose.

The "King of California Oranges" is the title given the Washington Navel. This is California's pride, and is the ruling favorite in the markets of the world. It is large and seedless and in its origin represents one of Nature's many freaks. While it was unknown to this country prior to 1870, yet it was grown in Brazil at least as far back as 1662. Some thirty-four years ago twelve trees, propagated by the process of budding, were sent by a wide-awake American consul in Bahia, Brazil, to our Government hothouses in Washington, D. C., and there carefully nurtured. Some of these are still alive and bearing fruit. These were used as stock from which to propagate by budding, and trees thus budded were sent to different parts of the country in order that experiments might be made with them. Two of these budded trees were taken to California in 1873, and when they reached the bearing age their fruit surpassed all expectations. This fine orange first attracted general attention at a fair held in Riverside in 1897, and it at once became a prime favorite. Its propagation was rapid, and to-day many thousands of acres are devoted to its cultivation. The tree is a semi-dwarf, the blossom is double, and the fruit delicious. It gets its dual name from the fact that it was first cultivated in this country in Washington, and because of the peculiar navel-like form which distinguishes it.

Although orange culture is carried on in many of the lower uplands of California, yet, as a commercial industry, it is almost entirely confined to a district popularly designated in California as "The Thermal Belt."

It lies stretched along the foot-hills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and from San Diego on the south to Tehama and Butte Counties, in the Upper Sacramento Valley, on the north, a distance of over seven hundred miles, and varying in width from three to thirty miles. It is claimed that in this belt there are a million and a half acres which are adapted to the cultivation of citrus fruits on a paying basis. The altitude ranges from 300 to 1,800 feet above sea-level. The mean Summer temperature of this belt is somewhat higher in the northern portion than in the southern, but the mean Winter temperature is higher in the southern than in the northern portion. The mean temperature for the year does not vary more than four degrees throughout the whole belt. According to the weather bureau, the extremes of temperature in this belt are from 60 to 68 degrees. Some idea can be formed of this delightful and uniform climate when it is remembered that on our thermometers 56 degrees are marked "temperate," and 76 degrees are marked "Summer heat." In California, the variation in the thermal belt is eight degrees, and Summer heat is unknown; in the east the variation is above a hundred, with great extremes of heat and cold. For the most part, the thermal belt follows the foot-hills, and the grower of oranges must consider the elevation, study the position of the soil, guard against frosty spots, secure protection from heavy winds, and provide for systematic and sufficient irrigation.

Five years ago nearly the whole product came from one section. Of the 5,882,000 boxes produced in 1899, a total of 5,573,000 were grown in the five counties of Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside, and San Diego. At present, however, the proportion is not so large, owing to increased development in other sections of the state.

Orange groves, in full bearing, frequently yield handsome returns on the investments made. A crop of five acres recently sold for $1,575 on the trees. Some orchards yield as much as $1,800 per acre; but this, of course, is exceptional. Ordinarily, a carefully cultivated orchard of ten acres ought to yield a sure annual profit of from $1,200 to $2,000. In full bearing, the average orchard yields about $150 per acre. Good orange land may be bought from $50 to $150 per acre. Groves, including all the water rights and privileges, have sold as high as $2,500 per acre, but this rarely happens. The industry is a constantly growing one. About $50,000,000 capital is invested in California groves. Records af the state's product show that the shipments in 1888 were less than one million boxes; in 1897 they had reached four and one-third; in 1902, a little more than eight; and in 1903, eleven and a half million boxes.

This year thirty thousand carloads of oranges have been shipped out of the state, enough to pay a handsome dividend. Growers are looking hopefully to the construction of the Panama Canal, which they think will reduce one-third the present freight rate of ninety cents a box which the railroads charge on New York shipments.

In California irrigation and cultivation are closely associated; indeed, without irrigation cultivation in some portions of the state would be not only a serious problem but altogether an impossibility. A million and a half acres are being benefited through its instrumentality. In San Bernardino County irrigation was commenced a century ago by the Franciscan Fathers at the San Gabriel Mission, by the digging of a ditch for the purpose of conveying water through their lands. This ancient water-course is still in active operation. A half century later a party of Mormons commenced the construction of ditches for the purpose of irrigation, and demonstrated their practical utility by the production of bountiful crops. It was soon discovered that the system was a complete safeguard against the disasters of a dry season. Fruit growers were quick to learn the immense value of this artificial method of watering the soil, and orange culture owes quite as much to the splendid system of irrigation now in operation as it does to the marvelous climate. The water is procured from artesian and other wells, from mountain streams, from artificial lakes made by damming up the water-courses on the higher slopes, and from other sources. It is conducted wherever needed by pipes, ditches, and canals. There are hundreds of miles of these main arteries, and thousands of miles of lateral and individual pipe lines branching from them. Some of the water is brought from the high Sierras, and is used not only to irrigate the soil but also to supply towns and villages with water for domestic purposes. There are also a number of subterranean water-courses, the supply from which seems to be inexhaustible. Through this system, in many valleys and along many uplands, flourishing orchards are making glad the eye and heart of man, where only a few years ago were arid stretches of dreary desolation.

Of the several methods of irrigating orange groves, the simplest and the one generally used is the furrow system, in which a number of furrows are plowed between the rows of trees, the first one being a few feet distant from the trunk, and through these the water flows until the ground is thoroughly saturated. It is necessary to keep the ground under cultivation to prevent the growth of weeds, and also that the soil may freely admit the water. The development of orange culture through the process of irrigation is a triumph of modern horticulture.

The fruit is gathered by persons standing on the ground and on ladders. As a rule, trees are rarely stripped at once; the fruit is usually gathered as it ripens. It is necessary to handle oranges with the utmost care to avoid bruising, and this makes the packing for shipment one of the fine arts of the business. The oranges are assorted by machinery, and those of the same size are packed together. So carefully and compactly is this done that there is very little risk of their becoming bruised in transmission from grower to consumer. This work gives employment to many hundreds; and, with the exception of seeing the vast orchards transformed into living beauty by their snowy blossoms or luscious fruitage, nothing is more interesting than witnessing a busy hive of humanity preparing the oranges for shipment.

There are many perplexing problems which the orange grower has to face: whether to plant early or late, to prune high or low, what fertilizer to use, what method of irrigation to follow, and how to guard against frost and heat, insects, and natural diseases of the trees. Orange culture pays, but it pays at the expense of the most careful, painstaking attention and unremitting labor. Even in sun-kissed California man's brain is needed to assist Nature in making her supremest effort.

Timely Hints and Suggestions

This Week's Illustration.

THE window shown in the cut is one recently used by John Robertson & Son, Montreal, whose window space is always arranged with an eye to the business it may bring.

Nothing elaborate was attempted in this arrangement, but the very simplicity, combined with the inherent conveniences of this window for display purposes in size and shape, was enough to give it a value. Neat symmetrical displays of this kind form an agreeable variety to the glaring attempts made by some window dressers in their efforts to outdo a competitor or attract attention.

Shown by John Robertson & Son, Montreal.

At the back of this window are four strips of white material, each of which contains a word of "Lipton's Pure Food Products," and the goods shown are supposed to consist of these lines. Enough banking is done towards the back to show up the various articles in a distinct manner. Packages in the centre are outlined with bottled goods at the sides.

Tiles in Meat Shops.

United States Consul H. W. Harris, Mannheim, Germany, says that Americans visiting Mannheim frequently comment on the attractive meat shops to be seen there. This attractiveness is secured largely by the use of ornamental tiles for floors, walls, and even ceilings and counters.

The tiles on the walls are similar to those used in bathrooms in the United States. They are generally of light shades, arranged in patterns of artistic design. The floors are also laid with tiles of different colors. These tiles, however, are unglazed and are heavier and of cheaper quality than those on the walls.

In one of the most attractive of these stores, the walls are of ivory-colored tiles, with panels of flowers and other designs. The counter, which runs along two sides of the room, is of the same ivory-colored material, ornamented in gold. It presents a rich, handsome appearance. Even the bookholders, scales and gas fixtures are tiled. The general effect of the room is suggestive, above all, of cleanliness.

A few meat and fish shops in Canada are fitted out in this way, and the effect is all that could be desired. They are easy to keep clean, attractive looking and of no expense once the tiling is installed.

THE GROWING TIME.

J. Bromley & Sons, extractors and refiners, Leeds, England, have purchased twelve acres of the "Haigh Park estate," situated about three miles south of Leeds, and will erect thereon entirely new works for the manufacture of their various specialties.

Canadian Butter in England.

T B. JACKSON, Canadian commercial agent for Leeds and Hull, Eng., writing on the subject of butter, says:

"The creameries of Canada should correspond with this office, as a large quantity of their butter could be placed in this district, and it would facilitate this trade if they would write direct and give quantities per month they are prepared to take orders from here for, together with the names of brands, if any.

"Farmers' butter—A large firm in Newcastle, doing a large business in farmers' butter from Canada, are very much dissatisfied with last year's result, owing to its irregular quality and excessive salt. They say: 'These butters are used, the best of them, for a cheap counter butter, the remainder for confectionery purposes. And they meet in competition on this market with the Siberian, a much more uniform butter in both quality and package.'

"Siberian butter.—The Siberian butter is packed in either 56-lb. boxes or in Danish casks, principally the latter, and this package suits this market much better than the little 28 or 56-lb. tubs which the Canadian farmers use. Some of the farmers put no less than from one to three pounds of salt on the top of the tub, which is quite unnecessary, and it very often gets damp and discolored. One lot especially, we bought for fresh made butter in the best butter district of Western Ontario, sent it straight to the Toronto cold storage, brought it over in cold chambers, and when it arrived it was stale and off flavor.

"Just such occurrences as the above destroy our Canadian butter trade. The farmers must exercise more care in the making, packing and salting of their butter and must use different packages, either 56-lb. boxes or 112-lb. casks, not tubs.

"The Canadian creamery butter is not uniformly as good as the Danish; it is softer, and has not the same grain. The Danish creamery butter is more like A1 farm-made butter, with a beautiful grain and excellent natural color."

The Butter Industry in Australia.

Athough the expert season for butter is still three months from its conclusion, the shipments from Australia to the United Kingdom already constitute a record. In a normal season butter is being exported in July, but this season the shipments did not start till the end of September. By the end of June next, when the shipping season closes, the exports to the United Kingdom will probably have exceeded a total of 20,000 tons. Victoria still remains the premier butter-producing state. Of the 18,000 tons exported this season to Great Britain, Victoria has contributed 10,000 or five-ninths of the total quantity. Dairy experts reckon that a total of 12,000 tons, or very near it, will be reached before the end of the season by this state.

Bacon in Glass Jars.

Glass for packing fish and meats, while not replacing tin, is coming into prominence. So far as attractiveness is concerned, the advantage lies with glass. In Canada, the use of glass jars for packing meats has been begun by the Dominion Packing Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I., the first firm, it is said, to begin their use in this country. The cost is little more than that of tin, while a glass package undoubtedly enhances the selling qualities of a commodity. The Dominion Packing Co. are putting up in 1 lb. glass jars their "Beechnut" brand of sliced bacon and sliced beef. These meats are prepared under the same formula as that of the most famous of the American packers, and are guaranteed to be equal to anything prepared on the continent. Indeed, the Dominion Packing Co. claim their product to be superior to anything put out in the United States, since Canadian bacon is better than American bacon. The grocery trade should find in this new line a first-class Summer seller.

Brantford Cheese Board.

At the recent annual meeting of the Brantford Cheese Board the following management was elected for the ensuing year: President, H. Eagle, Attercliffe; vice-president, E. S. Barber, Vanessa; secretary, Geo. Hately, Brantford. The other two members of the board elected were J. Lenn of York, and E. D. Durham of South Durham.

French Butter.

WRITING in his annual report on the trade of Cherbourg, France, Mr. Consul Loftus says: "The butter trade is perhaps one of the most important of the surrounding country, and all the butter made throughout the neighborhood is exported to the United Kingdom through Cherbourg. The butter is sent all over the south of England, and I have noticed the identical cases, just as they are sent out of the country, at Southampton, London, and the environs of London, such as Kew and Brentford, plainly showing that its quality is known and its circulation large. The butter is very well packed, and is of good quality, being sold in three grades and prices in the trade, and is dispatched nightly by the South-Western packet-boat, arriving in trains which come down to the quay side, alongside the actual boat, and being placed straight on board on arrival. The trade has, nevertheless, been feeling the effects of the competition of other butter producing countries such as Denmark, Russia, New Zealand, etc. The customs returns of the amount exported from Cherbourg to the United Kingdom during the year 1901 showed that some 15,780 tons were dispatched, whilst in 1902 the returns showed 18,890 tons, and in 1903 the export rose still more to the total of 20,236 tons, showing an increase of 1,346 tons in all, so that it may be concluded that the trade is holding its place in the market still."

Canadian Produce Company.

The Canadian Produce Co., capital $1,000,000, has been floated in London, England. The company has a strong board of Canadian directors. W. R. Nursey, managing director, sailed for Canada on May 28, to organize the purchasing department, the branch office of which will be located in Canada.

A New Cheese Box.

Considerable interest was taken in a new cheese box which covered some cheese from Perth, Ont., that arrived in Montreal Monday morning. It was a unique thing made of wood and tin, and was patented by Publow & McArthur, of Perth, Ont. The name given to it is the "Wood and Tin Ventilated Cheese Box."

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—An extended period of dullness seems to have struck the cured meat market, and the majority of dealers assert that this Spring has seen a much smaller business than last year. The continued cool weather allows the use of fresh meats longer than usual. Just as soon as warm weather comes the demand will greatly increase, as people must use bacon and hams. Lard is 1-8c weaker. The feature of the meat market is an advance in beef of 1 to 1 1-2c. This has been caused by the scarcity of cattle, and the strong export demand. Such cattle as are obtainable are being bought up for export trade. As is always the case when beef is dear and scarce, the market is very brisk. Our quotations are:

Butter—There is now excellent grass and butter is being freely offered. The greater part of it is coming in tubs, and rolls have almost disappeared. Large quantities are available, but stocks put forward by merchants are somewhat smaller than last week. The quantity in sight is not smaller, but many merchants are holding large quantities, hoping for better prices. If this is so, it is probable that they will not be satisfied, as there is no promise of higher prices as far as can be seen at present. The level is so low, however, that it is natural they would expect an advance. It is difficult to tell how the market will go. There is an excellent grass crop, and from all appearances there will be an extra large supply of butter for a considerable time to come.

Cheese—There has been a reaction on the boards from last week's slump, and cheese has been sold as high as 8 5-16c. This price is unduly high, and there is sure to be a drop before long. It is difficult to see just what is keeping new cheese around that figure, as the export price does not support it. Of course, with board prices higher, there is a stronger tone in dealers' prices. New cheese has been quoted as high as 9 1-4c, with twins at 9 3-8c, but these prices are 1-8c to 1-4c too high for the average. There are still a few old twins for sale at about 11c, but they are practically gone, and stocks of old cheese are rapidly growing less. Reports of the boards for the past week are as follows:

Montreal.

Provisions—A notable advance took place last week in live hogs, when the market rose 15c per hundred lbs. Supplies have been fairly good, for which the demand was keen from packers, sales being made at from $5.50 to $5.75 per 100 lbs. In sympathy with this, there was a stronger feeling in the market for fresh killed abattoir dressed stock, and prices went up 10c to 25c per 100 lbs., with sales at $7.50 to $7.75. The supply of live hogs was very small on Monday, and the demand remained very good, prices ruling firm at $5.50 per 100 lbs., fed and watered. The advance was also maintained in fresh killed stock. The movement of lard was also fair, and hams and bacon were quite active, with good demand. We quote:

Butter—The butter market is very quiet, though the price was considerably stronger on Monday, 500 packages selling at 17 1-4c. Traders were not very desirous of doing much business. Some quantities of Quebec creamery sold at 17 1-4c, but for townships butter a higher price would have to be paid. Spot prices, however, in these goods were nominal.

disappeared. Shippers claim that they are uncertain about what is being paid at country points. At the wharf on Monday morning, however, 5,000 boxes were offered and sold at 8c to 8 1-8c, with 8c the ruling figure. For Quebecs 8 1-8c was the range for trading between dealers. Townships ruled at 8 1-4c, and Ontarios 8 3-8c to 8 1-2c. From the Old Country the reports are still unsatisfactory, and some of the letters published in the Old Country trade papers are not very flattering to Montreal cheese dealers. One letter referred to cheese importers in London as "riggers" of the market, and used the term "coadjutors in Montreal." These two classes of dealers will know best if the cap fits them, for the contributor of the letter said, that they were to be blamed for depleting the London stocks of cheese, by using cellars and cold storage accommodations. Inquiry amongst large exporters in Montreal did not give very satisfactory information as to this action, but this letter may be used for what it is worth, inasmuch as it gave, on the authority of a big London newspaper, a word of opportune warning, which it was thought might keep the uninitiated from taking any part in doing what he called rigging the market. He claimed that only a fortnight ago the market for cheese was extremely weak, with a heavy and surplus load of 100,000 boxes, and some boxes of the best quality of goods which were to offer at round about 38s, with no buyers. Suddenly it was reported that the whole stock was cleared out, and there was not a box available. Coincidentally the Canadian markets, which had slumped to 34s, advanced. This writer claimed that certain Montreal parties were helping the Londoners in some speculation. He advised all cautious people to avoid inviting trade by depending upon such transformation, and to be indifferent to all quotations except authoritative ones, sticking in safety to the natural season price for June cheese of 38s.

Cheese and Butter Exports.

The total exports of cheese since May 1, 1904, amounted to 200,180 boxes. Of this quantity, 157,125 boxes were local, and 43,055 through shipment. For the corresponding week of 1903 the figures were 288,051 boxes, and for 1902, 244,450. For the week ending June 14, the exports were 48,682 boxes. Of this, 40,883 was local cheese and 7,799 through. The corresponding week of 1903, the total shipments were 76,072 boxes, and for 1904, 54,230 boxes. It will, therefore, be noticed that while this season's shipments were considerably less than last year, the local exports were only a little less than 2,000 boxes, which is not so discouraging as at the first outlook.

Butter—The total butter exports for the week ending June 14, amounted to 11,680 packages. Of this quantity, 10,402 packages were local export, and the balance through. For the corresponding week of 1903 the exports amounted to 9,551 packages.

Provisions—While there continues to be but a very light sale, values in barreled goods seem firmer, particularly in pork. In smoked meats there is but limited sale; prices are unchanged. Pure lard continues to be offered at extremely low prices; there are full stocks held here, and sales are not very freely made. In refined lard demand has been light, prices rule too close to pure lard. In fresh meats, this is rather a slack season. In beef, there is no change in price. Veal is held quite firm; mutton is dull, but having but little sale. It is still early for lamb, and full prices are asked. Pork is low, and there is but limited sale.

Association News.

Federation Meeting at Montreal.

A special meeting of the Federated Retailers' Association was held on Wednesday evening, June 8th, at the Monument National, Mr. J. G. Watson presiding. There was a good attendance of the various members of the different associations comprising the federation. Mr. J. A. Beaudry, the secretary, delivered an interesting speech regarding the rules to be adopted in the federation. Ald. Lapointe made a statement as to the development of the trading stamp war, which the grocers had undertaken at the city hall. He stated that a definite law would shortly be drafted and enforced, which would do away with trading stamps altogether. A long discussion took place as to the early closing movement. The majority of the delegates present were in favor of closing two nights a week. It was afterwards decided that the federation would address officially the city council, asking them to take into their consideration the question of early closing. The meeting then adjourned.

Canadian Wholesale Grocers.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, held in Montreal, June 9, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Hon. president, H. H. Lyman, Montreal; president, D. W. Roli, Winnipeg; vice-presidents, A. B. Evans, Montreal; C. A. Twiling, Hamilton; S. McDiarmid, St. John, N.B.; secretary, J. Mattinson, London; treasurer, W. S. Elliott, Toronto; executive, A. Lyman, Montreal; C. D. McHay, W. D. Elliott, Toronto; C. A. Twiling, Hamilton; J. Mattinson, London.

DATE WINE VINEGAR.

Of late years the distilling of inferior and fake vinegars has been carried on to a greater extent than ever before, owing to the fact that those diseases, to which, unfortunately, the vine is so subject, have considerably diminished the production of wine, and the true wine-vinegar has become almost unobtainable.

About 1885 a process was discovered in Belgium, and examined by the controller-general of vinegars, in Brussels, which allowed of excellent natural vinegars being obtained from wine produced by the date-palm. As a result of careful research, carried out by the most experienced men, the juice, which had been pressed from the dates, was left to ferment, and produced an excellently flavored wine, which the process of distillation, following all the rules of science, gave to the vinegar a taste hitherto unequalled.

This vinegar is of a fine, golden-yellow hue, and retains its nice, clear appearance in all climates. To a scent, which is highly agreeable to the senses, it adds a delicacy which has earned for it a preference over all others. These wines are known under the name of "Vinaigres l'Etoile" (Star Vinegars), and have been the object of the most careful examination and analyses on the part of the leading chemists, whose reports have been most eloquent. G. Bruylants, professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Louvain, and member of the Academy Royal of Medicine; Y. Vuysteke, professor of zymotechnics at the University of Louvain, and Henri Berger, professor of industrial chemistry at the University of Brussels, have all stated that every harmful germ has been destroyed in the date-vinegar, thanks to a secret process, discovered by the chemists. They say that those vinegars which have been obtained from date-wine are among the most healthful, and should be ranked amongst the best of wine-vinegars, of which, however, very few are to be found nowadays.

The results, too, have been most noticeable. The output, small at first, has very quickly assumed formidable proportions. Imports of vinegar into Belgium have become almost nil, and on the other hand, the enormous quantities of date-wine vinegar exported to almost all the countries of the European continent, India, China, Japan, Batavia, the Transvaal, etc., have very quickly made the superiority of date vinegar recognized everywhere, and large sales have followed. A purchasing agent for Canada is required, as will be noticed in the advertisement of M. Franz Goossens, jr., the export manager, in this issue of Grocer.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Major P. L. Mason, of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, left on Tuesday for two weeks' camp at Niagara.

Mr. J. B. Wright, representing G. Waltney-Bunkley Peanut Co., Smithfield, Va., was in Montreal this week.

Mr. F. E. Perry, Quebec representative of Comfort Soap, was a visitor to their Montreal branch this week. He reported business good.

Mr. Miller, manager B. T. Babbitt, New York, paid a flying visit to Montreal last Saturday, and was met in the offices of their Canadian agent, Mr. W. H. Dunn.

Mr. M. Corrigan, Lucknow, Ont., has sold his grocery business to Mr. R. Moody, also of Lucknow. Mr. Moody took possession June 11, and intends removing his confectionery business from his other store, and run both businesses in the one store.

Mr. A. H. Brittain, Montreal representative of Black Bros. & Co., Halifax, was this week in the unpleasant situation of being shipwrecked on board the steamer Canada near Sorel, P.Q. He was congratulated not only upon his escape, but for bravery in calmly aiding others.

Mr. W. M. Fielding has joined the traveling staff of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, covering the territory on the main line of the G. T. R. west of Montreal, and C. P. R. and Ottawa Valley District. Mr. Fielding was for many years with the F. F. Dalley Co., Ltd., Hamilton, and succeeds Mr. John Wark, who is taking a well-earned holiday.

Mr. C. L. Marshall, who for the past thirteen years has been identified with Warren Bros., wholesale grocers, Toronto, in the capacity of buyer and sample-room manager, has severed his connection with this firm and gone over to the Western Brokerage Co., Toronto. He is in charge of the purchasing department, which has just been started. His place with Warren Bros. has been taken by O. W. Rinker.

Two enterprising young Canadians have recently opened a new liquor agency in the Board of Trade Building, Montreal. They are: Messrs. Jas. M. Cunningham and H. J. Strain. Mr. Cunningham has made a name for himself as a liquor salesman, having been identified with the trade for a quarter of a century. Mr. Strain is also well known in the business community as a man of capability and standing. Among the principal agencies they have secured, the most notable is Birch's "Black Bottle" Scotch Whisky.

Mr. G. Gieben, of Rotterdam, Holland, managing director of the Kiederlen Distilleries in Holland, is visiting Montreal. He has been the guest of Mr. S. B. Townsend, of S. B. Townsend & Co., St. Sacrament street. He had the unpleasant experience of being one of the passengers on the R. & O. steamer Canada, which was sunk in a collision on Lake St. Peter last Sunday morning. Mr. Townsend, who is a leading wholesale wine and liquor merchant of the city, had a very narrow escape also. Both himself and Mr. Gieben were congratulated by a large number of friends on their fortunate escape.

Mr. Geo. E. Drummond, president of the Montreal Board of Trade, and of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, returned home Saturday last on the Allan ss. Bavarian. Mr. Drummond has spent three months' vacation, partly in France and Switzerland, and partly in Great Britain. He stated that Canada was on the tongue of the Old World; in fact, he used the expression, that Canada was the hope of the Old World, and the pride of the new. He complimented Lord Strathcona for his inestimable services as High Commissioner. He had much also to say about the prominence of the Chamberlain preferential issue. He believed that the policy of Mr. Chamberlain would ultimately triumph; in fact, he said that if it did not triumph at the next general election, it would only be a matter of time. Mr. Drummond is looking very well indeed, and seemed very sanguine as to the rare possibilities of Canadian trade in the Old World.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS

A GENERAL dullness is reported in freights all over the Dominion. Little chartering is taking place of steamers, and the usual colony of schooners which visited Montreal in former years is not present. However, word comes from Halifax and St. John that shortly a large number of British schooners are due at these ports, some of which are coming from New York, and others from different Atlantic ports, bringing peculiar cargoes, and looking for new cargoes for the United Kingdom. A considerable amount of lumber has been shipped to the River Plate from Canadian ports, and lumber is still being taken as cargo by some regular line steamers. The tramps have therefore been forced out this season so far. From western points the grain rates are exceedingly low, and in some places are high on other products, so that no freight is being offered. Cheese men in small towns, notably Brockville, have banded together to ask the C. P. R. and G. T. R. to Montreal, for lower freights on cheese. The rates from this point are still 2½c higher than they were last year at the same period.

HAY PROSPECTS EXCELLENT.

Gratifying reports have come from the various grass-growing sections of Ontario as to the prospects for the 1904 hay crop. A couple of weeks ago farmers were not very cheerful, but abundant rain and absence of frost have given the grass a splendid start, and at the present time the outlook is one of the best in years. The only discordant note comes from the low lying sections of Essex and Lambton, where the crop does not promise well; elsewhere the yield is expected to be enormous.

Spanish Olives

Olives are carefully sorted when being picked, packed and shipped—go through about the same process of "culling" as our home-grown fruits.

And are valued in about the same way—the culls are put in one class and sold cheaply, while the perfect fruit is classed by itself and sold at higher prices.

Your trade in this line depends on the quality you handle.

Our olives are grown in the most famous orchards in Spain, gathered at perfect maturity, carefully selected as to quality and size and imported by us directly from Seville.

We assort them ourselves and put them up in clear, gracefully shaped bottles—their appetising appearance sells them and their appetite-producing qualities bring your customers back for more.

METHODS FOR EXPANDING CANADIAN TRADE.

THE Government have been doing a useful work of late years in appointing commercial agents at the various important centres of the world's commerce, but singularly enough they have always failed to make any connection with the prime market of the world, namely, London itself.

So apparent has the neglect of this great distributing centre been, that there is an active agitation now on foot in the Manufacturers' Association, looking toward the appointment by that association itself of an agent of its own, amenable to its laws and regulations, and paid for by themselves. This is following the suggestion made in these columns some weeks ago.

We do not see why one should conflict with the other. The Government agent could never be the free, untrammelled man that the association's agent would necessarily be, and yet in many ways the Government agent could do work which the association's agent could not possibly attempt, by reason, mainly, of his official position.

That the Manufacturers' Association will no doubt proceed with their plan is undeniable, because they generally do what they set out to do, but we do hope that when they act they will see that it will be necessary that their agent shall be a representative of Canadian manufacturers in general, and not only those who may belong to the association, numerous though they are.

The main difficulty about a movement of this kind is how to finance it. The average business man will positively delight in spending money in furthering his own personal interests, but get a crowd of them together, all able to do almost anything financially, and they will become over cautious at a few dollars almost to the humorous point. The whole thing is a question of co-operation, and for a very small amount per member a first-class educating and inspiring display of Canadian manufactures could be made in London, and considerable business developed thereby.

And it must not be forgotten that the cheese man, and the butter man and the apple packer and numerous other people of this kind, are just as truly Canadian manufacturers as the producers of iron and wood and other things. Let us look at this in a broadminded way, and drop our tendency to localism and small trade. We have everything in this country to do things largely, and as we build now, so will the trade of the future expand.

THE FUTURE OF SUGAR.

TRADE in sugar has recently assumed an interesting aspect. At present the situation is extremely animated, inasmuch as sugar has stepped from a period of depression into one of activity. For this there are special reasons. One is undoubtedly the falling off of the Cuban crop for this year of about 200,000 tons, which alone will tend to invite free purchases of continental beet sugar in the Fall; in fact, orders for extensive shipments have been placed already. It is only fair to believe that by draining the European markets to cover up the deficiencies in the Cuban crop, impetus will be given to the upward tendency in the price of sugar. Then, it may be remembered that large stocks of old season's beet sugar, both raw and refined, were left over in store unsold, when the bounties were abolished. These have been disposed of by skillful manipulation. They are therefore much reduced, and thus the chance of their being an incubus on the trade, as they were last season, has been erased. There is a general feeling that the fruit crop may be heavy this year, which means that large quantities of sugar will be required for the manufacture of jams and preserves. In fact, it is a long time since the consumption of sugar has been so stimulated by such a peculiar combination of circumstances.

There is another feature of great interest, and that is, Java sugar. For several years Java sugar has not been imported to the United States, and this season promises to see a large quantity of it utilized there. Interest in the Old Country market will be aroused directly, inasmuch as Java was always a source of supply for the Old Country. Buyers in turn will be interested in this change. For instance, America will require considerable importations in order to cover the deficit in the Cuban crop. Supposing that the crop should be even less than is anticipated, there is a probability of buyers and refiners turning their attention to the West Indies. In addition, Canadian refiners feel even now that they are compelled to use West India sugar, and a large tonnage of imports is known to have been registered for Canada. This at once adds force to the strength of the whole sugar position. Local refiners in Canada are naturally interested in the strength of the statistical position of sugar. It is generally believed that sugar will still be higher, but it would be well to accept advices as to expectations with the proverbial grain of salt, especially in view of a total drop of 10c in Canadian refined within the last ten days. Great caution should be exercised in buying sugar, owing to the uncertainty of the market. Sugar is certainly a vital issue, no matter how you may look at it. The Cuban crop was estimated at 1,200,000 tons originally; the latest estimate brings it down to 1,000,000 tons. On the other hand, the consumption of sugar on the continent has increased in a most extraordinary manner. All these facts point to the actual and possible future of sugar as one of strength.

CONSOLIDATION OF MARITIME BOARDS OF TRADE.

THE Maritime Board of Trade, which will shortly enter upon its second decade, has attained a position of substantial influence fully justifying its formation. While our fellow citizens in the Atlantic provinces fully concede the paramount importance of developing our western heritage to the fullest extent, they are thoroughly alive to the urgent necessity of conserving the interests of the eastern end of the Dominion, without which the integral existence of Canada would be greatly retarded. The deliberations of this body have been carried on at its nine annual gatherings with a vim and determination that augurs a bright future for its continued progress. The resources of the Atlantic provinces are so varied as to require sustained effort year by year to develop the expansion of which they are capable.

The questions incident to this development have been threshed out with commendable activity by the officials and members of the Maritime Board, which, as stated in President Haszard's report of August, 1903, now comprises no less than 33 affiliated boards with an enrolment of over 2,000 members. Among the leading questions on its agenda paper, the fast Atlantic service has been one persistently urged at each successive meeting.

President Haszard tersely pointed out at its last discussion the anomaly of a detour of hundreds of miles in reaching Canada via the United States in comparison with nearer Canadian home ports. This humiliating recourse to distant foreign ports for ocean mail purposes will always prove a factor of consequence in causing further legislation on the part of our Newfoundland neighbors to the end of rounding out our territory by the long desired union.

While ocean transportation, shipbuilding and the harvests of the sea have absorbed requisite attention, the Board has dealt thoroughly and exhaustively with agriculture, improved stock breeding, fruit farming, mining and manufacturing, in all their branches, also steadily promoting railway development throughout the length and breadth of the sea-girt provinces. A subject which bears every indication of proving one of engrossing interest at the coming annual meeting in August next, was informally discussed at Charlottetown on a notice of motion, viz.: Legislative union of the Maritime Provinces.

Sooner or later this question, fraught with significance to the future of the Atlantic provinces is certain to come within the range of action. The advantages to be derived from a concentration of maritime effort, especially with the addition of Newfoundland and the diminution of expense by the curtailment of useless and cumbersome petty legislatures, are so manifest as to insure successful accomplishment when the proper course of action is earnestly advocated.

FAULTY COLD STORAGE.

SOME of the large exporters of butter, cheese, and other products are interested in complaints which have been made regarding certain steamships sailing from Montreal, to the effect that their cold storage plants are faulty. The discovery of this deficiency was made by certain returns having been laid before the House of Commons at the instance of Mr. E. D. Smith, of South Wentworth, Ont. The requirements demanded by the Minister of Agriculture are that butter should be carried at 20 Fahr. A little instrument called the thermograph has revealed the fact that in quite a number of cases these temperatures were exceeded on certain steamships. The temperatures reported varied from 32 degrees up to 50 degrees. One steamer was reported to have carried apples at a temperature of 66 to 45 degrees.

Such violation of the law is not only a great loss of quality to the goods themselves, but as a matter of principle it endangers the reputation of all Canadian goods of this class. Certain prominent steamship people wish to be exonerated specifically from the charge, but the charge is general. It is believed by the authorities that it will not occur again. With the condition of things so strongly in need of betterment as far as ocean trade is concerned, it has been generally deplored by shippers that such an easily remedied difficulty should have cropped up at this time.

FRUIT TERMINALS AND TRANSPORTATION.

IN last week's issue of The Grocer appeared an editorial on "Fruit Terminals and Transportation" in which exception was taken to the inadequate fruit terminals provided Toronto fruit dealers by the various railroads entering Toronto, in addition to the poor facilities provided by these same railroads for the quick transportation of perishable fruit and produce.

In the interval, we believe that the parties on whom the burden of the blame lies have been informed of the stand we took in the matter, and as a result of this thousand-and-first protest, a marked improvement in the service provided the public has already been shown. For instance, one firm reports a gain of several hours in a shipment of perishable goods from the United States. The Grocer hopes still greater things may follow, and to that end expects on its own account to look further into the conditions of fruit terminals and transportation as they exist at other important terminal points in Canada.

THE PRICE OF COAL OIL.

Because the duty on coal oil has been lowered, it does not follow that retailers should immediately reduce their price. Consumers may clamor for a reduction, but the demand for cheaper coal oil under the circumstances is unreasonable. The dealer must first secure his profits on stock purchased under the old conditions. That is his right, and the public should be led to see it in that light.

FEATURES OF THE NEW TARIFF.

THE changes immediately affecting the Canadian grocery trade in the new Fielding tariff, reference to which was made in last week's issue, are :

(1) The continuance of the surtax of 10 per cent. on all German goods.

(2) The abolition of the duty of 1¾c per gallon on British West Indian molasses.

(3) An increase in the customs' preference on china and earthenware manufactured in Great Britain of 5 per cent., making the duty 15 per cent., whereas it was formerly 20 per cent.

(4) A provision to prevent dumping of foreign goods on the Canadian market. "Whenever it shall appear to the Canadian customs' authorities that the export or actual selling price to the Canadian importer of any imported dutiable article, of a class produced in Canada, is less than the fair market value as determined according to the basis of value for duty provided in the Customs' Act in respect of imported goods subject to an ad valorem duty, such article shall, in addition to the duty otherwise established, be subject to a special duty of customs equal to the difference between such fair market value and said selling price; provided, however, that the special customs' duty shall not exceed one-half of the customs' duty otherwise established in respect of the article except that on certain articles the special customs' duty shall not exceed 15 per cent. ad valorem."

A representative of The Grocer interviewed a number of the leading Toronto wholesalers and elicited the following opinions from them on the changes in the tariff :

Col. J. I. Davidson, of the Western Brokerage Co.,

speaks favorably of the new tariff as being in the interest of the business man, although the grocery trade cannot be said to have been affected by it largely. The abolition of the duty on British West Indian molasses is perhaps the most significant item. Although the molasses question does not mean so much in Ontario as in the lower provinces of Canada, there is no question but that the removal of the duty will tend to increase the consumption of British West Indian molasses. It may become still more significant if West Indian is brought down near enough to a parity with New Orleans to supplant the latter, as seems not improbable, and certainly not impossible.

The clause which aims to effectually prevent the dumping of foreign goods on the Canadian market is also commendable. The main difficulty in the situation is to get at a proper valuation of foreign goods sent in to slump our market. The excellent system of Canadian agencies established abroad, which keep in close touch with foreign trade conditions seems, however, to offset this effectively.

Mr. Eby, of the Eby, Blain Co.,

is doubtful if the abolition of the duty on West Indian molasses will have any immediate appreciable effect on the Canadian grocery trade, since a comparatively small quantity is consumed in this market. The tendency, however, is in the right direction. Mr. Eby thinks the principle a good one which is involved in the clause imposing a surtax on foreign goods dumped in this country, thus bringing the price up to the level of the price ruling in the foreign market. At the same time, it will be very difficult to get at a proper valuation of unlisted goods, and there is no question but the seller will assess his wares at as low a valuation as possible.

Mr. McLean, of Gowans, Kent & Co.,

is of the opinion that the change in the tariff, by which the duty on china, pottery and earthenware imported from Great Britain is reduced from 20 to 15 per cent. is in the right direction, tending to discriminate against Germany, in favor of Great Britain. As a matter of fact, as high a percentage as 75 or 80 of china staples used in Canada are of British manufacture; they easily outclass German goods, and are superior to china of French manufacture. English china has a lasting quality, which in the long run is bound to count in its favor, and now that the new Fielding tariff has made importations from Great Britain easier, we may expect to see the British manufacturer supplant the German altogether.

[These interviews will be continued in next week's issue of The Grocer.]

THE LATE JACOB WILSON.

THE Grocer regrets to record in this week's issue the death of Jacob Wilson, the Toronto representative of the Indian and Ceylon Tea Co., which occurred on Monday, June 6.

Mr. Wilson was born at Coburg, Ont., in the fifties, and resided there and at Belleville up to and even after the time when he entered on his business career in Montreal, about 1869. Here he was first associated with the firm of Sinclair, Jack & Co., with whom he retained his connection until he became a partner in the firm of Tees, Costigan & Wilson, which succeeded Sinclair, Jack & Co. The business of this firm was afterwards conducted under the firm name of Tees, Wilson & Co., in the early nineties. Mr. Wilson severed his connection with this firm to become the Toronto representative of the Indian and Ceylon Tea Co., with which business he was identified up to the time of his death.

Mr. Wilson was a most estimable gentleman, and undoubtedly one of the most popular Toronto brokers on the street, his amiability and sterling character having won him a firm place in the respect and good-will of the business men of Toronto. During his career as a commercial traveler, no man on the road was more popular than "Jake" Wilson. His friends extend from Montreal to Sarnia, and as far west as Winnipeg, every one of whom sincerely regret his demise.

We Do Not Pretend To Be Gifted With Second Sight

But we do claim to have facilities to base sound conclusions upon that are denied many others.

In the matter of "SALADA" Natural Ceylon Greens, for instance, with our large, varied and constantly expanding connection, we have been able to test these against Japans in the most thorough manner, the result being a continual flow of repeat orders that puts contra-argument out of court.

If you have any Japan Tea trade left, put "SALADA" Natural Green in competition with it; we know what the result will be, but would like you to experience it also.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, June 16, 1901.

Groceries.

A DULL to fair trade has been experienced in Toronto grocery circles this week. The trade has not entirely recovered from its shock of a few days ago, when sugar dropped unexpectedly 5c per hundred lbs., and on Friday last slumped 5c further. The general impression on the street is that the drop took wholesalers completely by surprise. Retailers had been buying on the strength of the advancing market, but it is thought that the coming sugar season will soon use up stocks on hand. Canned vegetables are getting in very small compass and prices are firm. Canned fruits, especially apples, are in brisk demand. The interesting item in syrups and molasses this week is the removal of the duty of 1¾c per gallon, and it is expected the change will materially increase the quantity of West Indian molasses consumed on this market. Teas are firm and steady, and an advance of 35c per hundredweight in green Rio coffee is noted, following unfavorable crop reports. Prunes are reported as very scarce on the Toronto market.

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goods are getting into smaller compass, and it looks as if all available stocks would be required before new goods arrive on the market. Stocks of canned goods in retailers' hands are reported to be low, but it is thought that the high prices ruling in canned vegetables will be efficacious in stretching stocks over the period of scarcity. Canned vegetables, with the exception of tomatoes, are very scarce and firm in price. Certain brands of tomatoes on the market are showing a poor and insipid quality. A better demand is noticeable for canned fruits. It is reported that a lot of canned fruits are being bought up on account of a probable shortage of fruit during the coming season. Canned apples are reported to be selling particularly well, and altogether the prospects are for a good Summer trade in all lines of canned goods. Canned meats are in big demand, this being the big season of the year for sales to camps and Summer resorts. We quote the following prices :

Apples, 3's	....	0 90
" gallons	....	2 20
Asparagus	....	3 50
Beets, 2's	....	0 90
Beets, 3's	....	1 00

SUGAR

Dulness has been the prevailing note in the sugar market during the week under review, conditions being similar to those indicated in our last report. We have to record a further decline in Canadian refined of 5c per hundred lbs., effective at noon on Friday, June 10, just after The Grocer was delivered to its subscribers. This decline marks a total reaction of 10c per hundred lbs. from recent highest point, and it remains to be seen if the downward tendency has yet run its course. In New York we note a general lack of interest in the article, and refiners who recently were willing to concede almost the entire contentions of holders have within the past two weeks shown studied indifference. The reason for this is obvious in view of the weakness in Europe, where the market completely lost its buoyancy and prices fell from 9s 7½d to 9s 0¾d for 88 per cent. beet basis f. o. b. Hamburg. Since then there has been some recovery, and as we go to press the market is steady at 9s 2½d, which is equivalent to a parity of $3.94 duty paid, New York, for 96 test centrifugals. The latter are quoted nominally at $3.88 duty paid, and perhaps could be bought for 1-32 less for spot sugars. Such a transaction would, however, be in the nature of forced sales on account of the inability or unwillingness of holders to store sugars for a better market. Recent arrivals to refiners have been so heavy that they have had difficulty in caring for them, and in some instances have had to put sugar into public warehouses.

Total receipts for the week ending June 9 were 47,238 tons, of which 41,514 tons were to refiners. Meltings for the week were 39,000 tons, an increase of 9,000 tons as compared with the previous week, and of 3,000 tons as compared with the corresponding week last year. Total stock in all hands is estimated at 229,424 tons, or 98,482 tons less than last year, and we note there are only 42 central factories grinding, indicating that 29 ceased operations for the week. This is attributed to the sudden change of weather. It is believed that the factories in actual operation are working at less than half capacity, which must be very unprofitable. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,043,424 tons as compared with 3,301,976 tons last year. The decrease of stock is 258,552 tons. We note reported shipments of 1,000 tons raw beet sugar from Europe to the United States, and no doubt U. S. refiners will increase their purchases in European markets from this out, while beets and canes are about on a parity. Should such buying develop to any large extent its effect would be quickly seen in advances in beet sugar markets. This is a strong feature of the situation which should not be overlooked, especially as the cane situation is so sound statistically and as very little sugar from now on will be made in Cuba. The recent slump in Europe has been attributed in some quarters to realization by French speculators, and in others to the fear that the reduction in beet sowings may be much less than estimated.

The market for shipment from Cuba is firmer than the spot market, there having been sales of sugars in port at 2½c c. and f. for basis 96, while refiners are buyers for shipment at 2½c for basis 95, but holders are asking 2½c for the same basis. We quote the following prices :

number of concerns have disposed of their final invoices, and by the end of the current month practically the whole of the 1903 crop will have passed into second hands.

The quantity of tea which had accumulated at Dalny has, under urgent representations to the Russian Government by consignees, been dispatched from thence some weeks since, and is gradually coming to hand. A considerable portion is supposed to be damaged.

Entries for export to the United Kingdom for the second half of May were 1,160,000 lbs., as opposed to 1,645,000 lbs. the year before, and from April 1 to 31st ult. 1,643,000 lbs., and 2,452,000 lbs. for 1904 and 1903 respectively.

In Ceylons there has been a good demand, and on the whole steady prices, inferior qualities being mostly accountable for any lower quotations registered. Buyers were eager to secure common kinds, which were fully firm. Mediums passed irregularly, Pekoes from 6¾d to 7½d scarcely bringing former rates. Fine and finest sold with good competition. Many of the arrivals were less attractive in the cup. The weather in Ceylon appears to have induced heavier flushes of inferior quality teas, and the exports from Colombo are now upon a larger scale than of late. Shipments in May approached a record quantity.

In Chinas a very limited trade has been done, but the London market has now been absolutely cleared of the lower grades, as have several other large markets, by the demand from Russia. The Hankow market in the new season has opened with about 6d as the minimum price, so that it is unlikely that large shipments will find their way to London. The probability of China teas replacing Indians and Ceylons because of the lower level of prices becomes less, and the increase shown in the deliveries recorded was largely for export. During 1902 and 1903 there was some increase for home consumption, but during the early months of 1904 the board of trade returns show a decline as compared with both of these years. COFFEES.

On the strength of unfavorable crop reports from Brazil, green Rios have advanced 35c per hundredweight on the Toronto market. Business is quiet on the street as a result of the high prices quoted.

The New York coffee market opened on Monday at an advance of 5 to 10 points in response to stronger European advices and on continued light receipts at Rio and Santos. The advance reported by the Havre and Hamburg coffee markets was greater than expected, which resulted in a slightly higher market. Cable advices from Europe spoke of the present advance in the market as premature, and of the present rains in Brazil as similar to those which immediately preceded the record breaking 1901-1902 crop grown by Brazil. Brazil markets were reported as holding firm, and in most instances the firm offers received from Rio and Santos were on a higher basis. We quote the following prices:

Foreign Dried Fruits

The feature of the week in foreign dried fruits is that stocks of prunes are getting cleaned up and are beginning to be scarce on the Toronto market. Last week not a box was available. Sultanas are advancing abroad, and prices there are about a cent above a parity with the New York market. Cables from Greece quote lower prices on currants for August shipment. Country Produce.

EGGS.

The egg market is in the most unsatisfactory condition that has been experienced in years. Country picklers have been layng in large stocks of the best season eggs at prices which are 2c higher than they should be at this season of the year. Were warm weather eggs as suitable for pickling as those of the earlier season, the city dealers would simply wait until the country picklers were stocked up, and then buy at what price they pleased. As it is, however, all picklers must get a part of the best eggs. The anxiety and competition of the country buyers have kept prices up, although the last week saw a drop of a-half cent in the country. What will happen cannot be told, but the weakening that has commenced may continue. The price for this week is 15c

APPLES.

The evaporated apple market has shown signs of improvement during the past week. It is believed that stocks are getting within small compass, and as the season for green apples is over, there has been an increased demand for evaporated apples. We quote the following prices:

Evaporated apples, per lb	0 06½

Fish.

A brisk trade is reported in fresh fish during the week under review, with the market steadier as a result of price-cutting having ceased. No additional varieties are noted on the market this week. Our quotaions are as follows:

Green Fruits.

A brisk trade is reported in green fruits during the week under review. California seedlings are on the market in small quantities, and are quoted at $3 to $3.25. California Mediterranean sweets will be here in a few days, and will be quoted at $3.25 to $3.75. Considerable quantities of California navels are still to be seen on account of the season having lasted particularly late. Lemons are in big supply, and are moving only fairly. The New York market firmed 25c a box during the week on account of the warm weather prevailing there. Delaware and Maryland strawberries have held their own well, notwithstanding the appearance of home-grown berries on the market on June 14. The latter are "Michael's Early" and although fair in quality, they cannot compare with the imported berry as yet. Canadian berries are quoted at from 15 to 20c. A good week is reported in pineapples; at the present time Florida stock supplies the market largely. During the week prices on pines advanced 25 to 30c a case, but they are down again to a normal level. Pines will not be cheaper this season than they are at the present time. Gooseberries from Queenston, Ont., are noted on the market for the first time this season. We quote the following prices:

Vegetables.

Trade in vegetables has been healthy during the week under review, with an especially large sale of green stuff. On the market, potatoes are quoted higher and spoken of as scarce. Provision men hold decidedly easier prices than those ruling in the market, and are of the opinion that there are still lots of potatoes available through the country. No more shipments of Egyptian and Bermuda onions are expected, and present stocks are going very slowly. New beets and carrots are 25c easier than they were last week, and are becoming more and more plentiful from week to week. Outdoor asparagus is scarce and firmer in price. New cabbage is $1 easier, and spinach from 10 to 50c easier. New potatoes are firm. Home-grown cauliflowers grown at Scarboro', Ont., are on the market this week for the first this season. Seeds.

The abundant rains have rather interfered with the sale of millet and Hungarian during the week, and as a matter of fact, very little corn has been sold on account of the extremely late and wet season. Last week's prices continue unchanged. We quote the following prices:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

Both Manitoba and Ontario wheat are easier this week, and the market continues quiet. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 northern, No. 2 northern and No. 3 northern, are respectively 1½c easier. Red wheat and white wheat are 2c easier. We quote the following prices:

FLOUR.

Easier prices generally rule the market this week than last. An easier tendency was noted several days ago, which developed into an actual drop during the week under review, namely, 15 to 20c on Manitoba wheat patents, 10 to 15c on strong bakers, 10 to 20c on Ontario wheat patents, and 10 to 15c on straight roller. The flour trade is reported as quiet. We quote the following prices:

BREAKFAST FOODS.

The only change in breakfast foods for the week is a drop of 25c in rolled wheat. A brisk trade in breakfast foods is reported. Immediate prospects are for a continuation of the present level of prices in wheat and oat products. Our quotations are as follows:

Hides, Skins and Wool.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, June 16.

Groceries.

SUGAR is again the feature of the week. Another drop of 5c all around took place early in the week, occasioned, no doubt, by the speculative nature of the previous advances. The briskness of the market seems to have been satisfied for a time. The improbability of a heavy fruit crop tends to point to cheaper sugar, instead of dearer. Hot weather, however, has set in, and the sugar men believe it may continue. The market at present is not strong for sugar, and the speculators of New York are considered blameable for this. Syrups and molasses are devoid of interest, and considerable quantities are available at prices ranging from 21 1-2c to 23 1-2c, laid down here. Holders are getting anxious to dispose of it and, in addition to the small trouble over the erasure of the duty of 1 3-4c, there is another element of the situation which is troublesome: that is, the sale of considerable quantities according to contract, without any provision being made before the cancellation of the duty, which was made known by the budget. Tea is still holding steadily. Supplies are expected of Japan tea in large quantities, and a general easiness may prevail. There is a reported easiness in black pepper from Singapore. Siam white pepper is also reported on the decline, owing to the absence of demand. Inquiry for Cochin ginger, as reported last week, still continues, and the presence of warmer weather will no doubt stir up the Jamaica ginger trade. Canned goods of all kinds are selling freely, and evaporated apples are still holding at 7 1-2c in good demand. A splendid demand has been noticed all week for currants and other dried fruits. The reports from Greece show that sultanas are a cent higher than the quotations here. In speculating on filberts some holders were caught for an advance of 2s per bale on old crop. The market has also advanced for new crop, October, and sales have been arranged in Messina for some 4,200 bags on the new basis. Tarragona almonds are firmer all around. In green fruits the feature this week has been bananas, there having been copious arrivals. As many as eighteen cars have come in, and the price has dropped from 30c to 60c a bunch. Pineapples have also dropped in price, and as the season is what is known as "between," quietness pervades the market. A dull season has set in for fish of all descriptions, although the demand is still good for Gaspe salmon, and British Columbia salmon. Pike advanced a cent, and lobsters have increased from 10c to 12c.

SUGAR.

The drop of 5c all round in sugar, in addition to the one recorded last week, came with no surprise to the local trade. The sugar situation is dealt with elsewhere in this issue, and is certainly one that merits attention to all interested in the trade. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market in syrups and molasses is tame and featureless. It is even anticipated that little advance may take place for some time. Holders are operating in small lots, at prices considerably lower than quotations of a month ago, when some orders were placed for Barbadoes stock. Holders claim that these orders will all have to be filled at contract prices. We quote:

COFFEE.

From the sources of coffee supply, short crops are reported. This is interesting, inasmuch as June is the last month of the coffee year. At one time the speculative coffee men in New York and other large centres reported a Brazil crop of fifteen million bags. Present estimates are below that by four million bags. The supplies, however, from Rio and Santos have, on the other hand, been greater than expected, and the supply will likely be over sixteen and a-half million bags. It is, therefore, generally expected that coffee will change, if it changes at all, by receding in price, even perhaps reaching the low rates which ruled at this period last year. Columbian coffee is reported easier in price, and is said to be arriving in large quantities. From Costa Rica the latest mail advices confirm the estimate of crop shortage. We quote:

Good cucutas	0 10 0 10½
Choice "	0 11½ 0 12½
Jamaica coffee	0 10½ 0 11
Java	0 18 0 22
Mocha	0 16 0 19
Rio	0 08 0 09

TEA.

The activity during the early months of the year in tea is now being felt; in fact, for the past month the trading has been light, and the market quiet. The large dealers, however, do not believe that the tea market has lost its firmness, notwithstanding the apparent tendency to sag, which is noticed in various lines. Owing to the fact that Japan tea has not yet been injured by the war at all, and the supplies are abundant, with every ease of access and delivery, the market has been supplied freely, and those buyers who stocked up well early in the season are perhaps regretting it now. Indias and Ceylons are not selling very rapidly. Greens, too, are considered slow. The market opened higher at Hankow. We quote:

Good to medium Japans	0 18 0 24
Fine to choice Japans	0 25 0 35

CANNED GOODS.

The demand is good for all kinds of canned goods. As was expected, salmon has attracted considerable attention lately, owing to the two large Alaska combines not having made their prices known for new stock. This has not helped to increase the sale of salmon, and has puzzled buyers, inasmuch as they do not know whether to buy at the present valuation, or to wait until new prices are known. Canned meats are slightly easier, although not subject to any new quotations. Fruit men locally are strongly of the opinion that there will be a shortage in pears, peaches and also strawberries. This has not been borne out by reports from fruit growers in the West. Nevertheless, it should be borne in mind that canned fruit men are usually good authorities as to crop reports. Evaporated apples are holding a strong position, and the price is still high. We quote:

Peas	0 87½ 1 50

GILLETT'S GOODS ARE THE BEST!

RETAIL MERCHANTS—We find some wholesale houses claim they cannot get sufficient ROYAL YEAST to fill all orders, and at present this is not unlikely. At the same time this is NOT sufficient reason for their SUBSTITUTING some inferior article, and the same applies to orders you get from your customers.

SEND IT BACK—Our advice to Retail Merchants in all cases when something is substituted for ROYAL YEAST or any articles of this Company's manufacture is to send it back at expense of shippers and to advise us promptly of the facts in the case.

SUBSTITUTES WILL NOT PLEASE your Customers and this will mean trouble for you. REMEMBER FORMER EXPERIENCES WITH THEM.

ORDER DIRECT FROM US—If you cannot get ROYAL YEAST or other articles of this Company's manufacture from your wholesale house order direct from us. All orders of this kind will receive PROMPT attention.

WORKING DAY AND NIGHT—Our two temporary factories are being run day and night to keep the trade and the consumer supplied with GILLETT'S GOODS, but the demand being more enormous than before the fire makes it utterly impossible to turn out the various articles in large enough quantities at present, and this condition of affairs will exist until we get running smoothly in our new Factory.

HANDLE THE GOODS SPARINGLY in the meantime, and a little later every wholesale and retail merchant in Canada will get all they require.

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Considerable activity has been noticed in dried fruits, and the demand has been especially good for currants. Reports from Greece show that stock remaining there is firmly held. Speculators for new crop report from abroad that the market is somewhat easier. No further information has been reported regarding the measures proposed in the Greek Parliament. As these have passed their first reading, and as the bill is favored by practically all parties, there is little doubt that it will ultimately pass.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre report: Valencia Raisins—Denia mail advice reads: "Weather has been propitious up to the present, and is now favorable for the flowering of vines, which is in progress. The crop promises to exceed 25,000 tons, as compared with 23,000 in 1903, always provided conditions continue favorable." Currants—Supplies in Greece are reduced below the average level of the same period in previous years. Stock remaining in Greece is firmly held. Some frost damage to growing crop was recently reported, but the district affected was not considerable. The speculative market for new crop is cabled as being somewhat easier, without any cause being given. Sultanas—Local market continues about 1c below Smyrna quotations. Candied Peels—Jobbers have commenced to cover their Fall requirements, inasmuch as the position of the sugar market becomes stronger from day to day. First cost of peels is somewhat higher than in season of 1903, particularly as to citron. Almonds—Tarragonas are firmer, both abroad and on spot. Shelled Walnuts—Some business has been done in Bordeaux by Canadian importers, for September shelling, present low prices having been favorably received by the trade. Filberts—Speculators on the short side of Messina market have been caught for an advance of 2s per bale on old crop. Market has also advanced for new crop, October, and sales have been indented, in Messina, for some 4,200 bags on the new basis.

Bananas have glutted the local market, and have dropped to $1.25 to $1.75. This was owing to the arrival of eighteen carloads. Barreled limes are coming in freely, 1,200 to 1,600 in a barrel, and are in good demand. Canadian apples have advanced to $3 and $5. Pineapples also have been attracting attention by receding in price. The first Canadian strawberries were expected Thursday, and the price quoted is 12 to 15c. First plums were noticed on the market from Alabama, selling at $5 a crate. First apricots were offering freely at 4 1-2c. Peaches from Florida were selling at 4 1-2c for 8-basket crates. Cherries are still holding at $2.50 for box of ten lbs. We quote:

Fish.

There has been a decided easiness about the fish market, although the demand has been steadily maintained. Brook trout continues to be scarce. Gaspe salmon and British Columbia salmon have dropped to 15c and 13c, respectively. Some grades of lake trout, white fish, dore and fresh mackerel have eased off to 7 1-2c, though the standard price is quoted as 8c. Boneless cod has dropped a-half a cent, while skinless cod has advanced $5 per 100 lb. case. The dealers believe that the decline in most popular fish is caused by large numbers of fishermen catching food for themselves, and the holidays having set in. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

No change has taken place in the egg market, except that receipts fell off nearly one-half on Monday morning, dropping from over 1,000 cases on Saturday to 554. Good stock still maintains 15c. Seconds were bringing 14c to 14 1-2c per dozen.

BEANS.

The bean market is very quiet. A certain steadiness, however, characterizes it, and some sales have been made of choice primes at $1.35 to $1.40 per bushel. Primes at $1.30 per bushel. Choice lots of carload primes were sold at $1.30, and primes at $1.25 a bushel.

HONEY.

The position of honey is unchanged. White clover is quoted at 13 1-2 to 14c. Extracted white clover remains at 8 1-2 to 9c in 10 lb. tins, and 7 to 7 1-2c in 300 lbs. kegs. Buckwheat remains at 6 and 7c.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., June 14, 1904.

BUSINESS is somewhat quiet, in fact the Summer is not opening up as actively as our trade had anticipated. Markets have not been favorable to buyers, and in some lines goods held over from the Fall are showing a loss. This is particularly the case with dried fruit, and while brokers are beginning to look for Fall business, there is no snap to the trade. Business will no doubt be considerably interrupted during the coming week, because of the Ter-Centenary celebration.

Change in the molasses duty will not have so wide an effect. The chief demand in St. John is for Porto Rico, even at the wide difference in price now prevailing. There is, however, wide sympathy with the principle of endeavoring to help our West India friends. We think it possible that some influence should be brought to bear upon the Government of Jamaica to show some substantial interest. We believe, however, a right line of steamers, with sufficient subsidy, either using St. John or Halifax, and St. John alternately, would be to mutual advantage.

Oil.

Because of the change in duty, prices in both American and Canadian oil have dropped 2½c. There is quite a strong competition in this market between American and Canadian companies, which will, without doubt, greatly help to keep the prices down. This movement on the part of the Government, as we suggested, is very popular, as it has been the general opinion for years that a step of this kind should be taken. There is at this season but a fair sale. Linseed oils are still selling at the very low figures quoted earlier. The demand has somewhat fallen off. Turpentine, which for so long was held firm at high prices, continues to weaken, and is quoted a little lower. Lubricating oils have a fair demand; there is no change in price.

Dried Fruits.

This is the line having but little attention at present. In seeded raising offered, there is a wide range in quality. Prices are low. In loose muscatels and valencias sales are not large, and holders are anxious to move stock.

GROCERY CLERKS OF TORONTO.

The grocery clerks of Toronto were well represented at their regular meeting on Tuesday evening, June 14, in the Temple Building. Their picnic will be held July 1 at Jackson's Point, on Lake Simcoe. All grocery clerks should take in this trip, whether they belong to the association or not. There will be a long programme of sports, and guessing contests for which valuable prizes are given.

The members had an enjoyable time after business was transacted, by indulging in progressive euchre. Any clerk wishing to become a member of the association might communicate with M. H. Anderson, corresponding secretary, 66 Churchill avenue.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver, B. C., June 9, 1904.

THOUGH waiting for a big trade in July and August, when the special through commodity rates to Dawson by the White Pass Railway will be in force, the wholesalers here are continuing to do a very fair northern business. The ships which go north weekly are well filled with cargo, mainly provisions, and orders come in freely. The dealers in the north are to a large extent buying from hand to mouth, because of waiting for the special rates on their big consignments for next Winter's trade.

As to general prospects, they seem to be good. All reports so far to hand indicate that the clean-up on the creeks is heavy, and that the total of gold will be larger this year than last. The miners are making the best use possible of the water early in the season this year, a point on which they fell down last year, to their sorrow in many cases, as dumps were lying there all Summer waiting for water which they had to go without.

Northern coast business, in fact all coast business on the B. C. coast, is very good this year. The shipments outward by every one of the numerous freighting and passenger steamers which are engaged in trade to northern British Columbia coast points, are very heavy. The number of vessels is hardly more, engaged in trade to the Skeena, Naas, Port Simpson, Rivers Inlet, and other points well up the coast, but all are engaged and making as many trips as possible, with big cargoes each trip. The northern canning season on Naas River, Skeena River, Rivers Inlet, Lowe Inlet, and other waters, is earlier than on the Fraser, so that preparations have to be made earlier. The supplies have been pretty well all dispatched in the past few weeks.

Interest in trade with Australia has been greatly aroused here this week by the arrival of a large number of prominent Australian public and business men who are bound for St. Louis, and for England, some on pleasure and some on business as well. A few of those who have arrived are seeking for openings here for investment, and some of them may make heavy purchases in property which promises good returns.

The visitors arrived by the new steamer Manuka, built for the Union SS. Co. of New Zealand, which owns the steamers operated on the Canadian-Australian line. Mr. Chas. Holdsworth, general manager of the Union SS. Co., was among the passengers reaching this port by the magnificent new steamer. It is a fine passenger vessel, which fairly eclipses the famous Empresses, the C. P. R. white liners.

The steamer brought but a small cargo, among the items being Tasmanian apples, onions, Australian potatoes, maize, coffee, honey, cocoanuts, bananas, oil cake, flax hemp, tinned meats, hardwood lumber, skins and wool.

Mr. R. M. Palmer, freight rates commissioner for the Provincial Government, has been assured by the C. P. R. that fruit shipments will this year be handled much better than formerly. There is a prospect of heavy shipments of fruit so that better facilities mean much. The Dominion Express Co. have agreed to put on ventilated cars, which will make it much easier to market fruit in good condition in Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg than ever before.

The statement was made in a local newspaper yesterday that agents of the Japanese Government were making inquiries for placing orders of flour and wheat to be delivered at Port Arthur in six weeks. The agents, it is asserted, made assurances to possible shippers that by the time the cargoes reached Port Arthur in six weeks there would be no further danger from the Russians. The assertion was made that 10,000 tons are wanted for immediate shipment, and that part of it had already been secured in the State of Washington.

Notice to the Trade

FROM THE FIRM WHO PACK "QUAKER" BRAND OF CANNED GOODS:

We are pleased to inform the trade that after due consideration and the matter being fairly placed before them, the Canadian Canners, Limited, have seen the reasonableness of our request for them to withdraw "Quakeress" label from the market, and they have agreed to do this. In reference to labels that we promised in a previous issue of "The Grocer" to place in a short time with the wholesale trade, we regret that these cannot be ready for three weeks. In the meantime, the trade will please take our word for it that this season we have the finest lot of labels and wrappers all embossed that have ever been offered by any firm to the Canadian grocery trade. The order for these labels is in the hands of three of the leading U.S. firms---one in Baltimore, one in Rochester, and one in New York City. We regret we had to place the orders in that section, but the trade in the Dominion for embossed label work is so limited in vegetable and fruit that we find it profitable to do this. In regard to the quality of "Quaker" brand of canned goods, we do not propose to say anything in this issue, as they have now been in the market for five years, and, we believe, have spoken for themselves. In next week's issue of "The Grocer," on this same page, we will give a statement showing the condition of the growing canned goods crops. As 40 % of the entire canned vegetables packed in the Dominion are grown within a circle of ten miles from this factory, we being the hub, this will give the trade a fairly intelligent idea of the prospect for futures in this line.

BLOOMFIELD, June 13th, 1904.

quantities, the fruit being marketed in sufficient amounts to supply all demands. Last week it was a rarity to see a crate of local berries. This week the locals have shut out the Washington fruit practically. The Oregon crop is over for our market. The price quoted here for local berries is from $2.25 to $3, according to quality. The uniform crate is 24 boxes. The price is liable to go down any moment. Exceedingly fine weather has prevailed and a showery day yesterday is just what was wanted to prevent the berries drying out. The rain will bring them on again, and it has not been sufficient to spoil the fruit.

California cherries come in in very bad shape, from one reason and another. The losses each year on cherries make it a discouraging line to import. The price is quoted this week at $1.50 for the ten lb. crate, with 25c per lb. more for the cherries in 1 lb. cartons.

Next week canteloupes will arrive from California; watermelons are also to arrive and new apples and plums from California are likely to be quoted at any moment. By the Australian steamer 371 boxes of apples were received for Vancouver, and 110 boxes for Victoria. This practically represents the stock of apples in the market now, the Okanagan fruit being all cleaned up. The stock now received is said to be of particularly good quality. The price is $3.50 per box, which is nearly 10c per lb. to the trade.

Oranges are moving much quieter now, the prices being unchanged. There are very few navels now coming, the stocks being all Mediterranean sweets. Tomatoes have been dropping off in quantity, and the price is now quoted at $3.50 for the 20 lb. crate.

All vegetables are local now with the exception of cabbage, cauliflower and asparagus. Quantities of these are very light, there being so much green bunch stuff offering by local gardeners. Potatoes are still in good supply, the price being $20 for Ashcrofts and $10 to $12 for lower mainland stock. A consignment of 250 boxes of potatoes from Australia arrived this week. It is said to be more of an experimental shipment, but it comes in a bad season, as the old stock here is still fairly good and very plentiful, while new stock will be in in three weeks or so. California potatoes have not come on the market to any appreciable extent this season, the few which were handled selling at 3½c per lb.

In produce there is to be noted a strong tendency to stiffen up quotations on eastern butter. The price quoted is now 20½c to 21c. Local creamery stock is selling at 25c, and contrary to the eastern stock, it may drop still lower. A new creamery has been added to the list of shippers this week, the Cloverdale creamery, in a district south of the Fraser River, a few miles from New Westminster. Local eggs are quoted at 26½c, and eastern stocks about the same. The supplies of local stocks come in rather more freely of late. Cheese is still quoted at 12c, and not much doing. The fluttering in the eastern market has not affected prices here.

In groceries there is but little to note. Canned corn is really selling better. It is now quoted at $1.25 to $1.30, which is a little nearer the mark. Other lines remain the same. Dried peaches are scarce and dear, 11c being the quotation. Apricots are 12c and scarce too. Prunes are cheap and plentiful.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, June 14, 1904.

FOR the past week rain has fallen almost incessantly, and has been general throughout the Northwest. All vegetation is showing a decided improvement in its growth. The grain in some places is over twelve inches in height, and the lowest two inches, where the seeding was held back so long on account of the water. Trade continues very bright, and the prospects are encouraging.

Sugar—The market has declined a little and Montreal granulated is quoted at $5 in barrels and $4.90 in sacks, and yellow at $4.40. The market still quotes Wallaceburg in barrels $4.95, and sacks $4.85.

Canned Fruits—The market is firm. Pineapples are still quoted 2 lb. whole at $3.75 a case of two dozen, 1 3-4 lb. sliced at $3.75 a case of two dozen, 1 1-2 lb. sliced $7.20 a case of four dozen, and 1 3-4 grated $7.60 a case of four dozen. The strawberry crop this year will be small, and canned strawberries will be rather high.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are firm. Evaporated apples and apricots are very scarce. California 1902 stock are just about off the market, and 1903 choice are quoted at 13 1-4c to 13 1-2c a lb. New goods will not be in before about the first of July. Oregon prunes are still quoted 70 to 80 at 5 1-4c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6 1-4c, and 40 to 50 at 6 3-4c.

Green Fruits—The market is firm. Navel oranges are quoted at $3.75 a case, pineapples $5 a case, bananas, $3 to $3.50 a bunch. Strawberries $3.75 a case of 24 quart boxes. Good River strawberries, which are of a very fine quality, are quoted at $3.75; tomatoes, $4 a case; rhubarb, 2c a lb; asparagus, $1 a dozen bunches; onions, 30c a dozen; radish, 45c a dozen; new cabbage, 4c a lb., and lettuce 40c a dozen bunches. Apples are very scarce, and there are practically none to be had.

Rolled Oats—The market is firm. 60 lb. sacks are quoted at $2.25, 40 lb. sacks at $2.30, 20 lb. sacks $2.35, 8 lb. sacks $2.65 and 5 lb. sacks $2.85.

Flour—The market situation holds flour firm. No. 1 patent is quoted at $2.55.

Eggs—The market has advanced a little, and eggs are now jobbing to the trade at 18c.

B.C. Fisheries Delegation.

F. J. FULTON, provincial secretary of British Columbia, and J. P. Babcock, fisheries inspector for British Columbia, are in Ottawa, conferring with Mr. Prefontaine and his colleagues, with the object of arranging a compromise in the fisheries dispute between the Province of British Columbia and the Dominion. Both Governments claim the right to exercise supervision over deep sea fishing grounds and collect revenue therefrom. The Province of British Columbia maintains that the Dominion is now in debt several millions for moneys collected by the federal authorities, which should have gone into the provincial treasury.

The opinion is expressed that the fisheries of British Columbia can never flourish as they should while both Governments assume authority in regard to them. The present condition of the salmon fishery in British Columbia requires, moreover, the expenditure of considerable sums of money for the erection and maintenance of hatcheries for the artificial propagation of the fish, in order to repair the depletion which appears to have occurred in recent years, due, it is believed, in no small degree to the methods employed in the fishery by American fishermen and canners. British Columbians think these matters can be better attended to by the local Government than by one three thousand miles distant, and that the industry should be placed under the sole control and direction of the Provincial Government.

Canners on Fraser River Protest.

Fraser River cannerymen are renewing their application to Ottawa to prohibit the export of all salmon caught in gill nets, on the grounds that the canners on the United States side are making extensive preparations to send vessels to the boundary line this season to buy salmon from the Fraser River fishermen, to the injury of the Canadian canners, who claim that the fish should be put up on this side of the line instead of allowing what is really raw material to be exported to furnish work for people in the United States. Another reason, they maintain, is that many of the fishermen have had advances from the canners during the Winter and are indebted to them, and if the United States boats come along and offer cash for the fish, many of these men are apt to sell to the outsiders instead of bringnig their takes to the canneries.

Fishery Outlook in Cape Breton.

Up to the present the fisheries have been excellent throughout the districts of Cape Breton. The canneries have all done well. It is said lobsters have been found as plentiful as last year, which was one of the best lobster fishing years since 1890. The cod fishery has also been good, and good hauls of mackerel have also been made on the south-east coast of the island. The outlook for various branches of the fishery industry in Cape Breton this season is very encouraging.

New Fish Company.

A new fish company has been started at Selkirk, Manitoba, under the name of the Arctic Fish Company. The partners are P. B. Finning, of Winnipeg, and Chas. Linklater, of Balsam Bay.

The Canso Cold Storage Co., with a capital of $100,000, will erect a freezing plant at Canso for the purpose of supplying bait to the Nova Scotia and Gloucester fishing fleets.

GREEN FRUITS

Canadian Fruit Crop.

THE fruit crop reports received at the Fruit Division, Ottawa, from May 15 to date, do not indicate any marked changes in the general prospect. The amount of bloom is now pretty well known, except in Prince Edward Island, where the season is usually late. Growers in Ontario and Quebec are beginning to fear that the heavy rainfall will interfere with the setting of fruit, and that the abundance of bloom will go for naught. The rain also prevents spraying and provides conditions favorable to the development of fungus diseases, so that large crops of good fruit are by no means assured.

APPLES.

In western and central Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia, where the apple is largely grown, the trees have had a profusion of bloom, and early, medium and late varieties all promise a good to full crop. The prospect was never better in the famous Annapolis Valley. The "Fameuse," which is the leading market variety in eastern Ontario and Quebec, is likely to give a heavy crop. "Baldwins" and "Spies" seem to have suffered more than any other standard varieties from the severe Winter.

PEARS.

Both early and late pears have an abundance of bloom in the Ontario fruit belt, but prospects are only medium in the other pear growing districts of Ontario. Nova Scotia growers are looking forward to heavy crops of both early and late varieties, while the reports from British Columbia and Prince Edward Island are satisfactory.

PLUMS AND PEACHES.

Reports indicate a medium crop of plums in the Niagara and Essex Districts, and a light yield in the rest of Ontario, except for Japan and native varieties. Nova Scotia has excellent prospects for a full crop, while the other provinces send reports of medium yields. The majority of the growers say that peaches are a total failure, but occasional orchards will give a light crop.

OTHER FRUITS.

A medium yield is all that growers seem to anticipate in the chief grape growing sections. Strawberries appear to promise an average crop in all districts except the fruit belt of Ontario, where many plantations Winter-killed badly, and the yield will be light. Raspberries are excellent in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia, while other provinces expect an average yield. Cherries are good in the southern part of Ontario, but irregular in the remainder and in Quebec. In Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia the prospects are very good. Recent reports indicate a medium to full crop of both red and black currants in all sections of the country.

Market for Fruit Pulp.

By D. H. Ross.

Large quantities of fruit pulp are imported by Great Britain in tins from Europe, and some is procured from New Zealand, Tasmania and Australia. Small quantities have been imported from Canada, and very much more could be done, if a basis of trade could be adopted to suit the importer, without in any way affecting the status of the Canadian exporter.

A proper basis would be for a fully responsible reliable firm to be in touch with the makers, who would first obtain satisfactory information of the firm. They could then sell for the makers on commission, or become firm buyers themselves, and in the latter case they would pay only a proportion of cash against b. l., say 60 or 70 per cent., and the balance after inspection of consignment. As long as the makers want cash against b. l., they cannot expect to do either a large trade or get the full price of such a risky article as fruit pulp, as it varies so much in the quality, and also in the care bestowed in its tinning.

Fruit in Britain.

ACCORDING to the London Market Growers' Gazette of May 18, there are indications of a heavy fruit crop in Great Britain this season. J. Wood, of Swanley, for instance, stated at the recent annual meeting of the National Fruit Growers' Federation that there were thousands of tons of plums which would not pay for the picking by the growers within fifteen miles of London. It is some years since the fruit plantations presented so prosperous an appearance as they show at present. Plum blossoms have mostly fallen off, having been abundant on mature trees, and less so on young trees that made a good deal of unripened wood last season. Apple blossoms which are beginning to open are abundant, and the trees will present a glorious sight a week hence, if no frost occurs to spoil the blossom. The beauty of the cherry trees, which has been great, is now over, except among late varieties. Black currants are highly promising in plantations not badly attacked by the mite, and there is a great crop of gooseberries, where the buds were not extensively devoured by birds.

Cherries.

FEW Canadians value sufficiently highly the natural fruit grown in the northern zone. For instance, cherries are grown in Canada, which for copious, luscious flavor can hardly be surpassed. Yet the cherry that is used in mixed drinks, such as the well-known cocktail, is foreign fruit almost exclusively, viz., the Bigareaux. It is not in the slightest degree superior to either the American or Canadian cherry in color or flavor, but is notable because of the process of preparation which makes it look so attractive. Originally, the fruit is placed in fumes of burning sulphur. This bleaches the fruit and gives it an elasticity. The cherry is usually picked with the stem attached, one reason being that the unstemmed cherry is not so apt to crush in packing. However, after a sufficient sulphuring, no matter what color it may have been originally, it becomes transformed into a pale yellow, inside and out. It is then packed in a solution of salt and sulphur, and in this form is shipped to the manufacturers. When the packer is ready to use the cherry it may be after several months have elapsed, it is washed in order to remove the sulphur and salt, and then soaked with dyes. The principal dye used is aniline, which intensifies that rich red color so pleasing to the cocktail fiend, and which is thought to be characteristic of a very rare cherry indeed. The flavor of this cocktail cherry is supplemented by maraschino. To describe what maraschino is would require the knowledge of the secret method of its manufacture. However, it is an almost colorless liquid, composed of a small percentage of alcohol, and is said to be obtained from the flesh of a small wild cherry grown in Spain and along the Pyrenees. Most doctors will tell you that the flavor is obtained by the skillful decoctions made up by chemists. It is very peculiar that this article, while sold almost exclusively in France, cannot be found advertised in any of the big grocery stores of Paris, or the French cities anywhere. The wily Frenchman makes up his maraschino for export purposes only. The Canadian cherry is no doubt superior in every way to this attractive looking deep red cherry, which so captures the drinking world.

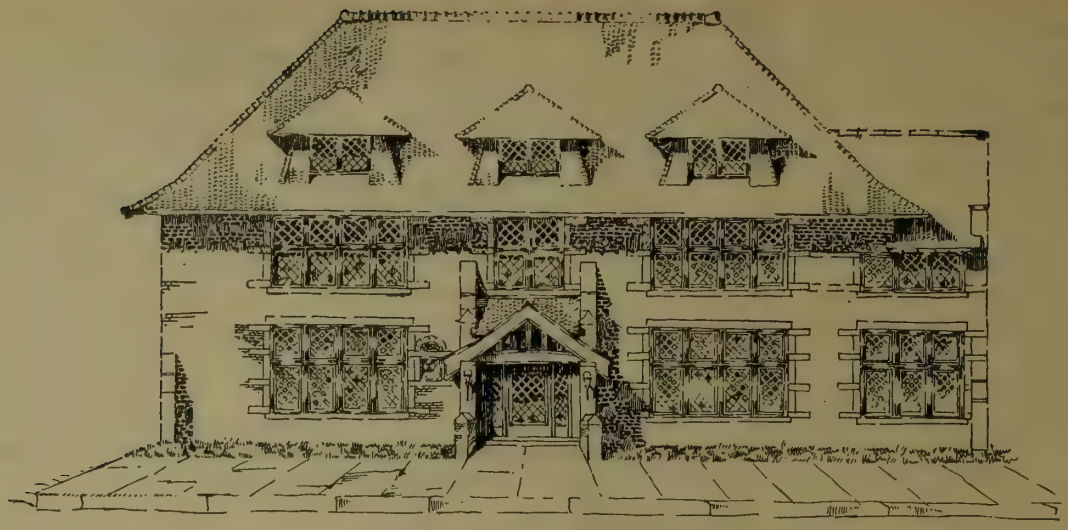
New Apple Evaporator.

There is a strong probability of an apple evaporator being erected in Stratford, during the present Summer, and to that end J. R. Finkle and H. W. Ackerman, of Bowmanville, have been prospecting there for a suitable site for an apple evaporator factory.

Notes.

One of the largest plants in Ontario for the preserving of fruits and vegetables is soon to be erected at Picton, by the Old Homestead Canning Co.



Size of building, 100 x 174 ft.

The above is a cut made from the Architect's drawings for the new building for the Pure Gold Manufacturing Company. It will be situated away up town, out of the manufacturing district and in the centre of exceedingly attractive surroundings, making for pure air and cleanly factory conditions and methods. The Pure Gold Manufacturing Company has provided for no interruption or alteration in its business methods, and customers will have their supplies forwarded as soon after receipt of order as is possible to get goods out.

The Pure Gold Manufacturing Company has to thank its many friends for continued expression of their esteem in the shape of orders, more orders, and still more orders. There are no expressions of esteem which reach any company which are more valuable than these; and may there be many more years of satisfactory business relations between the Pure Gold Company and its many friends from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Canadian Breakfast Foods in Australia.

By D. H. Ross, Melbourne, Australia.

THERE have been numerous inquiries from Canadian manufacturers of breakfast foods, etc., who are anxious to secure a new market for their products. For general information it may be stated that Victoria produces a large quantity of oats, barley, split peas, etc., which are exported to the other states, and beyond the Commonwealth.

The customs duty on oatmeal and pearl barley is one cent per lb., while the duty on split peas is sixty cents per cental. With these heavy duties, and the matter of freight and charges to be considered, it is very questionable indeed if the ordinary lines of Canadian breakfast foods can be landed in Australia at competitive prices. The term "rolled oats" is understood in Australia as "flaked oatmeal." A San Francisco wheat food has been imported in bulk for some years, and is put up in packages locally.

The principal United States breakfast food makers have their own offices in this country, and their own travelers and sub-agents in the various centres. One firm is doing an enormous trade, after spending huge amounts of money in introducing and advertising their product. It is satisfactory to know that the bulk of the Australian requirements, of this particular line, is being obtained from the Canadian branch, and it is to be regretted that every case does not advertise the fact of being "made in Canada."

Shipments aggregating over 5,000 cases of Canadian manufacture are arriving in Victoria alone, while a large trade is also being done in the other states. To successfully introduce breakfast foods requires, beyond the question of a palatable article being an essential feature, a large initial expenditure in advertising to educate the trade, and the personal supervision of an experienced salesman.

Splendid Grain Prospects in the West.

According to latest official reports of the growing crops in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, issued on June 9 by the C. P. R., the country has abundant reason for rejoicing. The weather in every district is favorable, and there has been a generous rainfall. The height of the new grain varies considerably, varying from two to twelve inches. The common height is six inches.

Grain Inspection.

THE special committee appointed to inquire into the new Act respecting grain inspection was in session in Ottawa last week and listened to evidence from the Montreal Board of Trade and Corn Exchange, the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade, the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and Board of Trade, and others.

The stand taken by the Montreal delegation, which was headed by W. I. Gear and E. F. Craig, was that grain inspection should not be under the control of the Government, but in the hands of local inspectors, the board of trade, in turn, to have control over the inspectors. The system worked well in the United States, and it would work well in Canada. Grain could be sold in Britain under Montreal inspection, Winnipeg inspection, Toronto inspection, and so on. Buyers in Europe should be placed in a position to buy with Toronto inspection, Montreal, or any other inspection. In answer to a question raised in regard to a lack of uniformity which might follow through the different boards of trade making different grades, the answer was given that although such might happen if all the boards insisted on inspection, it was unlikely that any more than Toronto and Montreal inspection would be found necessary. No interference with Montreal grain inspection was desired. In Montreal they simply wanted to be able to compete with the American grain ports for the grain trade, which they could not do unless they had the power of inspection.

T. Crane, of Montreal, on behalf of his own firm of grain exporters, contended that the inspection should be made to meet the views of the buyers. If the inspection was carried out to meet the views of the seller, the buyer would not have confidence in it. "I believe," said Mr. Crane, "that the chief inspector should be responsible to the Government, and that he should have the final say in reference to inspection. I think the inspection should be uniform both east and west. I am of opinion that the chief inspector in the west should be like the inspector in the east, not under the control of a survey board. The western inspector should have the say, and not the survey board. I think that Government inspection will give more satisfaction than inspection under the board of trade."

The Toronto deputation headed by C. B. Watts, of Toronto, objected to the new Act on the ground of standard and appeal. They wished the standards to be set by a board, the members of which should consist of five members of the Toronto Board of Trade, one from the Dominion Millers' Association, one from the Agricultural College at Guelph, and three from Quebec. The Act at present provided for the fixing of the standards by the chief inspector.

The Winnipeg delegates supported the bill as it stood. Mr. Horne, chief inspector at Winnipeg, gave an account of the inspection methods in that city, where all the grain from the west is sampled and graded en route east. Last year he and his assistants inspected 60,000 cars. He started the work in 1885, and had seen it grow to its present proportions, making his own rules and taking no one's dictation. There had been about twenty-five appeals to the survey board during 1903, but in ninety-five per cent of the cases the chief inspector's decision had been upheld.

The definite decision of the committee, which has now retired to deal finally with the measure, will not be announced until next week. A representative of The Grocer interviewed C. B. Watts, Toronto, on the probable outcome, but could elicit from him nothing further than that it was very uncertain which way things would go. Mr. Watts, however, was hopeful that when the final draft of the Grain In-

VIII.

I WANT to tell you that meals are mainly digested before we eat them, and that when breakfast is over it is necessary to maintain a mood that will arrange for the digestion of your luncheon.

This is a hard physiological fact.

¶ Every mood, pleasant or unpleasant, gets into one's food; each little jar of nerves is reflected in the stomach. This is so well understood by doctors, that they look to the stomach for symptoms of all disorders; even the oculists go there, for indigestion is often the result of eye strain—fine work, night work, overwork, or any kind calling for spectacles.

¶ "Force" has an influence on moods because it relieves the stomach of half the usual work of digestion, besides feeding the brain and the nerves.

But often "Force" will fail to accomplish its chiefest benefits if moods are not controlled.

¶ So the most profitable thing that we can do after eating "Force"—and a thing that is very easy to do after eating "Force"—is to Falling Off in American Grain Exports.

ACCORDING to the Montreal Herald grain exporters in Philadelphia are becoming alarmed at the unusually dull condition of the trade. Not for many years, it is unhesitatingly said, has business been at such a low ebb, and it is predicted that if trading does not show a decided gain in the course of a few weeks, several storage elevators will be obliged to close because of the lack of orders for their stocks. Already the large elevator at Girard Point, operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which has a total capacity of nearly 2,000,000 bushels, has been shut down indefinitely, and there is little hope of it resuming operations until the arrival of the new crops.

Various causes are assigned for prevailing conditions. One exporting house puts the blame largely on the poor crop conditions throughout the country. Only enough grain is now in sight to meet the actual requirements of the domestic trade. Trading in grain for export has been virtually at a standstill, while for several months past the largest number of bushels sent abroad could be figured in four numbers. The high prices at home also influence foreign buyers to a great extent, with the result that inquiries from European importers, upon whom American exporting firms depended almost entirely heretofore for contracts, are depleting so rapidly that at this time an order for a shipment of anything more than 1,000 bushels would be regarded as remarkable.

Britain is now receiving its supplies largely from Russia, France and Germany, while Australia, India and Argentine Republic are large contributors. Wheat, corn and oats from these countries can be sold in Liverpool, for instance, at prices from two to five cents a bushel below what American grains would bring in the same market. This has caused a material falling off in demand, with the result that American exporters are underbid at almost every turn.

Orange Meat Coupons.

Owing to the popularity of the premiums given with the 15c packages of Orange Meat, as shown by the large number of coupons being received at their Toronto office daily, the Frontenac Cereal Co. have decided to extend the time on all Orange Meat coupons to Jan. 1, 1905.

British Wheat Importations.

THE following wheat report, issued by the American consul at Nottingham, England, calls attention to several important changes during the past year in England's importations of wheat. The following figures give in hundredweights of flour and wheat the relative importations :

	1903.	1902	1901.
United States..	44,294,956	67,961,476	66 855,025
Canada	14,100,934	12,226,382	8,557,960
Russia	17,176,302	6,540,457	2,541,500
India.....	17,057,842	8,841,586	3,341,500
Argentina.....	14,120,456	4,315,165	8,080,400
Roumania .. .	3,140,727	2,362,453	512,000
Australasia....	230	4,331,379	6,820,800

His comment is : "The salient facts disclosed by the preceding table are the enormous increase of imports from Russia and the decrease of imports from the United States. The latter is explainable by the short crops there, and the absolute necessity of Great Britain's transferring a part of her orders to some other country. But the explanation of Russia's prodigious gain, compared with the British possessions, rests on a different basis and has a grave significance. Equally enormous increases are marked in other kinds of agricultural exports from Russia to the British Isles and cannot be explained away by short crops in other countries. In December, 1903, the wheat imports into Great Britain from Russia alone exceeded the total from all North America. Figures for the first months of this year are not yet available, but there is nothing except the war with Japan to indicate that wheat imports from Russia will not continue to increase. The war, unless very short, will inevitably be a check."

Australian Wheat and Flour Exports.

The wheat production of Australia in the season 1903-1904 can now be stated with tolerable accuracy, as in all the states, excepting South Australia and Tasmania, official estimates have been issued.

Accepting the trade estimates for these two states, the Commonwealth production compares thus:

	1899-1900. Bu hels.	1901-1902. Bushels.	1903-1904. Bushels.
Total.....	48,352,925	12,363,080	74,210,582

The approximate value of the crop at the seaboard is £10,150,000, and on the farms about £8,900,000. The exportable surplus of the whole Commonwealth under normal conditions would be close on 50,000,000 bushels, as seed and food requirements absorb from 22,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels per annum. The surplus still available for export is about 26,800,000.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

New Canadian Tobacco Industry.

A NEW industry is to be started in Winnipeg, Man., shortly which is no less than a cigar factory where cigars made from Canadian grown leaf will be manufactured, the controlling syndicate to be exclusively Canadians. The tobacco used will be the finest Cuban leaf from seed sown and grown in the Kelowna Valley of the Okanagan, a few miles from Vernon, B.C., where an area of 250 square miles is capable of producing 10,000,000 pounds of tobacco annually. It is said that this British Columbia product is indistinguishable in flavor and texture from the real Havana product, except to experts. Samples submitted are pronounced to be superior to any other leaf grown in North America.

The promoters of the new industry claim to have solved all the problems in connection with the growth of the article and find that the manufacture of cigars from Cuban leaf grown in Canada is capable of great extension. The greatest obstacle to be overcome was the curing process, but experts from the South soon arranged that.

The plant is raised from seed brought from Vuelta Abajo, Cuba, and the reason why such fine tobacco can be raised in Kelowna is that the climate is perfect for its growth and the soil contains the requisite mineral salts, brought down from the mountains. The valley is also splendidly sheltered by the hills and is irrigated.

The local syndicate is spending a great deal of money in developing the industry in the Okanagan, and will, of course, spend a lot more in opening a factory and head offices in Winnipeg.

There has already been a demand from American manufacturers for the Canadian article and high officials and several of the select clubs of the Dominion have expressed their desire to patronize the Winnipeg commodity. Of course, the production of Havana cigars in Canada will more or less affect the trade, as the local factory will be able to produce the domestic article free of duty and therefore at a comparatively very low figure, compared to the present Cuban prices obtaining in Winnipeg.

Tobacco Industry in Trinidad.

The following official information concerning the Trinidad tobacco industry has been received: During the last half of the year 1901 and the first half of 1902 leaf tobacco to the amount of 561,000 pounds and manufactured tobacco amounting to 69,000 pounds was imported into Trinidad. For the same periods in 1902-1903 the imports were 592,000 pounds of leaf and 77,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco. Leaf tobacco comes almost entirely from the Uuited States, the manufactured product chiefly from Great Britain and the cigars and cigarettes (on which the duty is $1.20 per pound) chiefly from the United States.

French Contract Awarded.

THE contract which the Government of France makes yearly for its tobacco factories was let June 2. The contract for Burley has been divided between G. Reusens, who was the successful bidder last year, and Wessels, Kulenkampff & Co., of Bremen. The latter firm is the successor of E. G. Toel & Co., of New York.

Mr. Reusens was awarded the contract to furnish 3,000 hogsheads of Burley, and Wessels, Kulenkampff & Co. to furnish 4,000 hogsheads of Burley and 500 hogsheads of Dark.

The Virginia tobacco will be furnished by J. J. Huisman, of Antwerp, and will require 7,500 hogsheads. Messrs. Williams & Rehling, of Richmond, are the buyers for Mr. Huisman. He filled this contract last year also.

The contract for Maryland tobacco was let June 3 to Messrs. Boudaine, Tobacco Tax Rhyme.

A firm of English tobacconists, having decided on no account to raise the price of their well-known mixture, are poetically and punningly setting forth their resolve in a Wimbledon newspaper :

The duty on tobacco's raised,
We really must not grudge it;
The price of ours is still the same,
Even Austen cannot " Budget."

New Use for Trade Paper.

A ROVING correspondent favors the Retail Grocer with the following thoroughly practical hints:

"I have found a new use for the trade paper," remarked a western retailer of cigars the other day. "I had a well-known brand of clear Havana cigars in my case, and for some reason or other I was unable to get my customers of the better class to smoke them.

"It was just another case of one of the best values in the house going a-begging because the buyers were not acquainted with it. It was such a well-known brand that every issue of the tobacco papers, almost, had something good to say about it. That was what put this new idea into my head.

"I took a small picture frame, with a glass, and taking a bright red piece of paper, I pasted in the centre of it one of the clippings from Tobacco, which spoke highly of the special brand, placed the paper in the frame, and thus had enough red paper in sight to make any one look at the frame, and then of course the clipping attracted their attention. The next thing on the programme was to pick up the frame and read the clipping. It would surprise you to see how many times the first day that clipping was read.

"I also had some demand for the cigars, but not much, and I followed this up the next day with another clipping, but with a change of the color of the background, so readers would know it was something different. This caused the same customers to again read the clipping.

"I kept this up on the same brand for a couple of weeks, and had by that time worked up enough trade on the brand to cause me to place a new order, and it is now one of my most popular brands.

"This idea looked good to me, so I have always watched the correspondence from the different points for items mentioning the different brands of cigars I handle, and clipped them out, then put them in the frame, with a change of background each time, at the same time printing on the background a note stating what paper the clipping was from, and from what city it originated.

"I have never seen a similar scheme tried, and think other dealers will find it profitable advertising, for I gave it a severe test when I moved a brand which would not move before, and made it one of my popular brands.

"If you word your own little note, which must be printed or written on the background in a neat manner, in just the right way, you will find that your customers have great respect for what the trade papers say to their readers, who are retail tobacconists.

"The ordinary smoker feels that the paper and the dealer both know a great deal more about cigars than he does, hence he pays a good deal of attention to what the paper says to the dealer."

Tobacco Manufacture in Germany.

ACCORDING to the U. S. Tobacco Journal, the use of machinery of German, French and American designs has become common in the better German factories for all processes of tobacco and cigar manufacture where machinery has been found practicable. Inquiries made would indicate a desire on the part of the cigar and tobacco manufacturer in the locality of Mannheim to avail himself of labor-saving devices as far as possible.

Ten trade journals devoted to tobacco are published in Germany, and are extensively used for advertising machinery and other appliances used by the trade.

The feeling of hostility and alarm aroused by the introduction of American and British capital, ecpecially in cigarette manufacture, in Germany has not wholly subsided. The multitude of small manufacturers in country villages and elsewhere—over 7,000 factories and 200,000 workers, of whom 160,000 are on cigars—is referred to by the press as the surest defence against any general consolidation of the tobacco business of the Empire. This feature of German manufacturing is one sure to attract the notice of a foreigner residing there, and undoubtedly is to be taken into account in any survey of manufacturing in the Empire.

Portions of Baden and that part of Bavaria known as the Rhine Pfalz form one of the largest and by far the most important tobacco region of the Empire. Baden itself leads all the German States in acreage planted in tobacco and in the importance of its cigar manufacture.

Recently published statistics for the Department of Factory Inspection for Baden show that the number of cigar factories in Baden was 728, giving employment to 33,720 workmen, or more than in any other branch of manufacturing in the Grand Duchy.

U. S. Tobacco Output in 1903.

Statistics have been issued by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., giving the acreage, production and value of tobacco in the United States in 1903. Louisiana had the smallest acreage notwithstanding the attempts made to introduce the Cuban leaf there, only ninety-one acres being planted last year. Kentucky heads the list with 338,304 acres producing 267,260,160 pounds, valued at $16,570,130. The highest yield per acre was in Vermont, 1,800 pounds, and the smallest in Alabama, 405 pounds. The highest value per pound is placed on the Florida crop, 32 cents, and the lowest on the South Carolina tobacco, 5.1 cents.

The total acreage was 1,037,735 acres, producing 815,972,425 pounds, valued at $55,514,627.

Holland-Sumatra Tobacco Maatschappij of Amsterdam.

Word has been received from Consul Brainard H. Warner, Jr., at Leipzig, Germany, that the Deli Tobacco, the Deli Plantage and the Amsterdam-Sumatra Culture Co.'s, engaged in cultivating tobacco in the Island of Sumatra, have recently been consolidated into the Holland-Sumatra Tobacco Maatschappij of Amsterdam. The new company will continue to cultivate tobacco on only the best lands it has acquired, and, by introducing modern methods in the tobacco growing, will reduce the current expenses. Mr. Brainard states that the new company will have to buy considerable quantities of agricultural implements.

Notes.

In an interview this week with Mr. Presnail, manager of Tuckett's Marguerite cigar factories, Montreal, The Grocer was informed that sales for Marguerite cigars were going up by leaps and bounds. In fact, Mr. Presnail stated that the reception in the east had more than surpassed their expectation, and he desires to express his appreciation of the support given them by the trade through The Canadian Grocer.

ONTARIO'S BUSINESS TAX

Text of the New Law.

IRRESPECTIVE of any assessment of land under this Act, in cities, towns and villages, every person occupying or using land in the municipality for the purpose of any business mentioned or described in this section shall be assessed for a sum to be called "business assessment" to be computed by reference to the assessed value of the land so occupied or used by him, as follows :

(a) Every person carrying on the business of a distiller for a sum equal to 125 per cent. of the said assessed value.

(b) Every person carrying on the business of a brewer for a sum equal to the said assessed value.

(c) Every person carrying on the business of a wholesale merchant, of an insurance company, a loan company, or a trust company, as defined by this Act, or of an express company where such land is pre-occupied or used mainly for the purposes of its business, or a land company or of a bank or a banker, or of any other financial business for a sum equal to 75 per cent. of the said assessed value.

(d) Every person carrying on the business of what is known as a departmental store or of a retail merchant dealing in more than five branches of retail trade or business in the same premises or in separate departments of premises under one roof, or in connected premises, where the assessed value of the premises exceeds $20,000, or of a manufacturer, lithographer, printer or publisher, or of a hotel or club, or the business of selling, bartering, or trafficking in fermented, spirituous or other liquors in any premises in respect of which a tavern or shop license has been granted, for a sum equal to 50 per cent. of the said assessed value.

(e) Every person practising or carrying on business as a barrister, solicitor, notary public, conveyancer, physician, surgeon, oculist, aurist, medical electrician, dentist, veterinarian, civil or mining or consulting or mechanical or electrical engineer, surveyor or architect for a sum equal to 50 per cent. of the said assessed value.

(f) Every person carrying on the business of a retail merchant, or of a photographer, or of a theatre concert hall, curling or skating rink, or other place of amusement, or of a boarding stable, or a livery or the letting of vehicles or other property for hire, or of a restaurant, eating house, or other house of public entertainment (not being premises in respect of which a tavern or shop license has been granted), or any trade or commercial business not before in this section or in clause (g) specially mentioned, for a sum equal to 25 per cent. of the said assessed value.

(g) Every person carrying on the business of a telegraph or telephone company, or of a tramway or street railway, or of the transmission of oil or water, or of steam, heat, gas or electricity for the purposes of light, heat, or power, for a sum equal to 25 per cent. of the assessed value of the land (not being a highway, road, street, lane, or public place or water), occupied by such person, exclusive of the value of any machinery, plant or appliances erected or placed upon, in, over, under or affixed to such land.

No person shall be assessed in respect of the same premises under more than one of the clauses of sub-section 1, and where any person carries on more than one of the kinds of business mentioned in that sub-section on the same premises, he shall be assessed by reference to the assessed value of the whole of the premises under that one of the said clauses in which is included the kind of business of those so carried on by him to which the highest rate of assessment is applicable.

Where the amount of the assessment of any person assessable under this section would under the foregoing provisions be less than $100, he shall be assessed for the sum of $100.

Where any person mentioned in subsection 1 occupies or uses land partly for the purpose of his business and partly for the purpose of a residence, he shall be assessed in respect of the part occupied for the purpose of his business only; but this provision shall not apply to persons assessed under clause (e) of subsection 1.

A financial or commercial business, in subsection 1 mentioned, shall not include a business carried on by operating vessel property of the following description, namely, steamboats, sailing or other vessels, tow barges or tugs; nor the business of a steam railway; nor the business of a broker or financial agent, or of a manufacturer's agent, or other agent or intermediary in the business of the sale of goods who has not the actual custody of the goods, or has the custody of samples only.

Every person liable to assessment in respect of a business under subsection 1 shall not be subject to assessment in respect of income derived from such business.

Every person assessed for business assessment shall be personally liable for the payment of the tax thereon and the same shall not constitute a charge upon the land occupied or used.

CANADIANS MUST SHARE RISKS.

THE commercial agent for the Dominion Government, stationed at Jamaica, G. E. Burke, writes the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, as follows : "Frequently I receive inquiries as to the mode of packing, etc., most suitable to this market for various food products; for instance, ham, bacon, salted beef and pork, tinned goods, butter, cheese, split peas, oats, etc., etc., accompanied with the inquiry for names of principal importers. Little practical results, however, have ever been forthcoming, from the fact that Canadian producers and manufacturers expect importers to send them direct orders, without they (the importers) having any previous knowledge of the status of the manufacturers, or the quality of the goods they are offering. The seller is always, not only expected to do the seeking, but also, in the case of a new firm to the market, be prepared to run an ordinary business risk by forwarding sample or trial shipments on consignment. It should always be remembered that the importer is perfectly satisfied with his present source of supply, and for him to be induced to divert his custom he must have some practical satisfactory knowledge of the goods he is likely to receive. The same remarks apply also to manufactured goods for the most part.

"Again, price lists and other advices seldom, if ever, quote f. o. b. at shipping ports, viz., Halifax or via New York, but always at factory or f. o. b. railway at manufacturing points. Dealers here will not even pay ordinary attention to such scant unaccustomed information. All commodities offered to the trade are quoted from the United States and Europe f. o. b., and very often c. i. f. A special trade mark or shipping brand should always be adopted."

FACTS ABOUT CEYLON

GENERALLY speaking the climate is of Indian character, and two Monsoons in the year supply water to the uplands, whence it finds its way down to the sea in streams of no importance.

Thus it is that the interior—the home of the tea estates—is made ideal for the cultivation of tea. CEYLON TEAS are unrivalled in everything that makes for a perfect tea. The Canadian Grocer should encourage the sale of the best tea.

WESTERN BOARD OF TRADE CONVENTION

The first Board of Trade Convention of the Northwest Territories, held in Calgary, Alta, June 15-16, 1904.

THE latest milestone marking the forward course of commercial development and consolidation in Western Canada is the inauguration of the first Board of Trade Convention, which took place at Calgary, Alta, on June 15-16, 1904. Fifty-seven delegates, representing the leading business men of the section bounded by Winnipeg on the east, Nelson, B.C., on the west, Edmonton on the north, and Cardston on the south, were present at the opening meeting, as well as staff representatives of the daily papers of Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and St. Paul, Minn. No more substantial testimony is necessary to the industrial significance of the convention which it is calculated will solidify for united action thousands of the leading business men of the Northwest Territories, wherever the promotion of the West is concerned, whether it be in finance, commerce or agriculture. The Grocer is indebted to the Weekly Herald, Calgary, for a full report of the first day's proceedings.

Opening Address.

In greeting the visitors and outlining the purpose of the congress, W. H. Cushing, acting in the capacity of temporary chairman, spoke as follows: Gentlemen: I esteem it a high honor, as well as a great pleasure, to extend to this large and representative gathering the hearty greetings of the Calgary Board of Trade, and to welcome you to our city.

In the month of January last year a letter was sent by the Calgary Board of Trade to as many sister organizations in the Territories as we had record of, inviting expressions of opinion as to the feasibility of holding a convention of delegates from such bodies at a central point in the West. Responses were received from many of these organizations favoring the proposal, and Calgary was suggested as a suitable place for the first convention, the next place of meeting to be decided at each convention. These, in brief, are the events that led up to the Calgary Board of Trade taking the responsibility upon itself of calling this convention.

It would be difficult, I think, I may say impossible, to estimate the value of a convention of this nature, representing as it does the business interests of a vast country with limitless possibilities and resources. We have with us representatives from Manitoba on the east and British Columbia on the west, and from all parts of the Territories, which comprise the largest part of our great Dominion.

It appears to me that such an important gathering for the purpose of discussing questions that are of vital interest to all parts of the country we represent cannot help but establish a strong bond of fellowship between the business men of all parts of this vast country and materially assist us to acquire a broader, more intelligent and more sympathetic view of the commercial and economic disabilities each section of this vast country labors under and the difficulties that confront the various branches of industry represented in our midst. Under the circumstances, the deliberations of this convention should be a potent factor in helping to build up a solid and vigorous national life. While the commercial interests of a country may not be the greatest factor in the upbuilding of a nation, it is certainly one of the greatest, and requires the best consideration of the best minds the country can produce. There are many sides to the questions involved in establishing a good, sound commercial life in a new country and I know of no better way to assist in this great work than for those who are engaged in trade and commerce to gather at stated periods for the purpose of intelligently discussing and considering ways and means to accomplish the end aimed at. With this object in view, the Calgary Board of Trade has now taken the first step towards organizing what we devoutly hope will become an annual event, second to none in importance in the West. Whatever the final outcome of this action may be, it is extremely gratifying to the board that we have met with such a hearty response from all parts of the Territories, as well as from Manitoba and British Columbia."

city tendered them the freedom of the community. He declared the occasion pregnant with the cordial spirit of the west, and predicted much substantial benefit to all the towns participating. He prefaced his remarks by alluding to the amazing industrial development of the Territories and expressing the conviction that the present activity in all business circles is a fair indication of the bright future of Western Canada.

R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, nominated Thos. Tweed, of Medicine Hat, chairman and J. W. Morris, of Edmonton, and H. W. Laird, as vice-chairmen. The motion was adopted.

Chairman Tweed suggested a committee on resolutions immediately and an adjournment until the various subjects on the programme could be informally discusssed. The convention adjourned until 2.30, while the committee at once went into session.

Resolution Committee.

The Resolution Committee held an animated session. An elaborate programme was sifted and arranged.

It was moved by Thos. O'Brien, of the Golden Board of Trade:

Resolved,—That in the opinion of this convention a duty of $2 per thousand should be imposed upon American lumber entering Canada, under such conditions and restrictions as will absolutely prevent any increase in price arising by reason of the imposition of such duty as aforesaid.

A resolution was favored introduced by D. T. Daykin, of Lacombe, that the Government stock certain lakes of the Northwest with white fish. Buffalo, Gull, Pine and other lakes in Alberta were included.

W. J. Tudge, of Wapella, urged that every man having the best interests of the country at heart should try to keep out of the convention all political questions. This was apparently the sentiment of the committee.

It was recommended by the committee that in future meetings all resolutions intended to be introduced should be in the hands of the secretary ten days before the meeting.

The subject of immigration and of closer scrutiny of undesirable classes of new citizens received the serious attention of the committee. H. C. Alexander, of Winnipeg, on behalf of the Western Canada Immigration Association, was granted permission to address the meeting on the progress of the organization.

It was the sense of the committee that a line of action should be decided on that would absolutely prevent any subject being passed upon by the convention without proper notice. To this end it was suggested that topics of prime importance should be scheduled to come up at certain hours, regardless of discussions that might be on at that time.

William Short, Mayor of Edmonton, introduced a resolution declaring that in the opinion of the convention the development of the resources of the Territories amply justifies and urgently requires the immediate and rapid construction of the projected Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific. The committee favored sending it to the convention.

The following resolution of great importance to Calgary was introduced by William Pearce, D.L.S., and favored by the committee:

"That it is highly desirable that as soon as possible a thorough investigation be made into the probability of the C.P.R. ports under present conditions being made the outlet to European markets for the grain, dairy products, cured and dead meats, for the western portion of the Northwest Territories.

"That with the completion of the Panama Canal the territory that will be economically tributary to said ports for the above mentioned shipments will be very largely extended.

"That for shipments to Asia, Australia and South Africa, those ports are the natural and cheapest outlet.

"It is therefore urged that the whole question of present and probable future traffic through these ports be closely studied.

"With that in view, it is urgent that this subject be brought forcibly to the attention of the transportation commission appointed by the Federal Government, at present investigating Canadian transportation problems, and that said commissioners be requested so far as may lie in their power, to thoroughly investigate and report on this subject.

"That a copy of this resolution be submitted to the Federal Government with a request that as far as may be possible effect be given to it."

Report on Resolutions.

Following is the report of Committees on Resolutions and Procedure, presented to the convention this afternoon:

Your Committee on Resolutions and Procedure met this morning and considered resolutions now before the convention as well as necessary rules of order. Your committee submits the attached programme, which contains the resolutions now before the convention. Your committee would recommend that no further resolutions be accepted, and also that should it be decided to arrange for any future convention that the Committee of Arrangements be requested to notify all boards of trade to the effect that no resolution can be accepted after ten days prior to the opening of such convention.

At the session on Thursday, June 16, the convention recommended the formation of good roads organizations on lines similar to the organizations in provinces of the east, to act in conjunction with the Territorial Department of Public Works. They decided to do nothing regarding the exclusion of the United States currency, and to urge on the transportation commission the great importance of improving the navigation of the Saskatchewan River. Mr. Jones, of Golden, was not present to answer to his name, and the resolution on the paper advocating a duty of $2 per thousand on American lumber coming into Canada did not come up. A resolution was passed urging upon the C.P.R. the need of annual excursion trains east during the Summer months.

In the evening the Calgary Board of Trade tendered a banquet to the visiting delegates, who attended in large numbers. The function was a brilliant one, and the entertainment provided such as to win golden opinions of the city and its people from every guest present.

PROGRESSIVE MANUFACTURING.

SOME three years ago, when the Pure Gold Company forsook the time-honored precincts of Front street for King street west, Toronto, opposite the Government House, many people thought they had made a mistake. It did not seem as if they were far wrong, because the whole of Upper Canada College Square was at that time a wilderness, and trade did not take kindly to the new district. It was, therefore, with perhaps some misgivings that those in charge of the Pure Gold Company's affairs commenced the erection of a building upon land in the centre of the City of Toronto, which had to be surveyed, so that the proper levels and exact situation might be secured. The erection of the building was hardly accomplished before many other enterprising manufacturers flocked to the district, and property which had been almost unsalable doubled in value in a single night.

Only the recent fire was necessary to show the wisdom of the Pure Gold Co.'s choice. People who had crowded themselves together in what was supposed to be the only district in which proper business conditions existed, found themselves sadly mistaken when they were swept out of existence in a few hours. A rush for available buildings followed immediately, and as the Pure Gold Company had deliberately put up a building which would be useful for almost anything else besides their own business, they found themselves with a valuable asset in great demand, and consequently experienced no difficulty in making a sale to the enterprising firm of the E. W. Gillett Co. This was a pleasure, primarily because Gillett's firm are in no sense competitors, and secondarily, because they were not desirous of obtaining possession until December, thus making it possible for the Pure Gold Company to secure another lot and erect another building. This they are proceeding to do on College street, near Spadina avenue, on a magnificent lot of 100 feet frontage by 274 feet deep. Thus the trend is ever westward. Not that the Pure Gold Company has no faith in the eastward conditions, but rather because the centre of population is where the biggest trade is going to be, and it is pretty well agreed that Spadina avenue is now about the centre of the city.

The new building will present some novel features, which will be of interest to the readers of The Canadian Grocer, and will contain the essence of the experience gathered in the course of twenty years by the Pure Gold Company, first in their Front street warehouse, remodelled to suit their requirements from time to time; secondly, in the King street warehouse, built especially to meet their ideas; and thirdly, in the new building on College street, which will combine the very best findings which the experience of the past few years could teach. First, as to external appearances. The building will present one of the handsomest fronts on College street, being of a low-lying warm red brick, two-storey and attic type, with a sloping red tiled roof and dormer windows. All of the windows will be the leaded diamond shape type, so dear to the heart of the average housewife, and the little porch will be quite a poem of architecture in itself.

Inside, of course, all will be business, and of a character distinctly different from the usual. For instance, no cellar; cellars are no use for foods which have to be watched carefully and kept high and dry and sweet. The entire first floor will be solid concrete on the ground, offering opportunities for washing down not excelled by a ship's deck. Every department will be separated by sheet steel partitions and fire doors. There will be no plaster in the building of any type. All of the plumbing and conveniences will be of the very latest pattern, and properly isolated so as to make them easily supervised and properly cleansed as required. Every machine will have a separate electric motor attached by a novel link arrangement, which makes for a rigid service and noiseless work. Heat will be supplied by the usual arangements of steam radiators, making every portion of the building comfortable, and as there will be only two storeys, the reader can easily imagine what a splendid broad view may be had over his entire portion by the foreman of each department. In the attic before mentioned will be situated a lunch room for the employes, entirely isolated and very comfortable, which will be appreciated, as have been the efforts of the Pure Gold Company in this direction in the past. Everything which experience can devise will be installed, and yet on such a different basis from the previous efforts of the company as to almost afford a startling contrast to the casual observer.

"LEGGETT'S LEADERS."

"Leggett's Leaders" is the title of a 4-page circular issued to the trade by Francis H. Leggett & Co., New York. It is printed in a good red ink on good paper, and is attractively prepared. It emphasizes under classified headings the specialties or leaders this firm are offering. The circular constitutes a first-class supplement to their trade newspaper advertising, and tells with greater fulness than is possible in the newspaper the story they have to tell the trade. Francis H. Leggett & Co. are acknowledged leaders in their line of business, and their methods of reaching out after trade are instructive.

STAPLE AS GOLD

Grocers are wise to sell more Royal Baking Powder, because in the end it yields a greater profit than the low-priced powders, many of which contain alum, which is injurious to health.

Royal Baking Powder is always worth one hundred cents on the dollar, and no grocer need hesitate to carry a large amount of it in stock.

Royal Baking Powder retains its full strength in all climates all the time.

Varying atmospheres do not lessen its leavening qualities. You have no spoiled stock.

It is absolutely pure and healthful and always sure in results.

It never fails to satisfy the consumer.

It is sold the world over and is as staple as gold.

The Cheese Situation in England.

THE following interesting letter on the cheese situation in England is taken from the last issue of The Grocers' Review :

Sir,—The stocks in the three principal centres (London, Liverpool, and Bristol) declared on the 31st May are 123,000 boxes, or about 60,000 in excess of the corresponding period of last year. The stock at the end of April this year was, roughly speaking, a quarter of a million boxes, possibly the heaviest on record for that period of the year. Some interested parties may point to this heavy diminution as indicating abnormal consumption. It ought, however, to be known that this reduction has been effected during the last seven to ten days of the month, and that consequently these cheese cannot possibly have been consumed yet. They have merely been taken from the main distributing points, and therefore do not figure in the stocks.

Notwithstanding the quantity of old cheese still in existence, the c. i. f. rates for new have in about a week been manoeuvred up 8s, to 9s. from the lowest points. I say "manoeuvred" advisedly, because there is no apparent justification for the advance. Stocks are exceptionally heavy for the time of the year. The supply of fodders is normal; pasture and climatic conditions at home and in Canada are favorable to a liberal flow of milk, and consequently a large make of grass goods. Another thing that ought to be remembered is that butter-making this season offers no relief, the price of that commodity presenting no inducement.

A few weeks ago, the market, like Jairus' daughter, was sick nigh unto death, so much so that some oppressed salesman had taken to composing doggerel on his plight, possibly while waiting for the buyers who would not come. But, behold, all is suddenly changed, and one searches in vain for the fairy wand. One cannot blame the farmer or the factoryman for endeavoring to obtain the highest price for his produce, but buyers throughout the country would do well to decline to be made the victims of inside operation and professional rigging of the market. The season just finished has meant financial loss to many, and disaster to a few. One would expect that it would serve as a salutary lesson and deter many from being taken in by rumors and following artificial advances. To a certain extent retailers have the remedy in their own hands. Let them buy only for their immediate wants, and the price of new will decline to its natural, and therefore safer, level. If speculate they must, then is the time and not now, unless June cheese be offered to them at several shillings below to-day's ruling rates.—Yours etc.,

Canadian Export Trade.

THE official returns for the eleven months ending May 31 show Canada's aggregate foreign trade to be $407,165,145, an increase of $5,091,248 over the same period of the year previous.

The imports for the eleven months were $220,750,180, and the exports, of domestic produce only, $174,291,791. In 1903 the imports were $202,705,294, and the exports of domestic products $189,375,624.

The decrease in the exports is mainly in animals and their produce, and agricultural products. The United States exports of animals and their produce have also diminished. In April last the decline from the United States was upwards of $18,000,000, compared with the same month of 1903, while for May the falling off was $15,000,000. The drop in Canadian agricultural exports was in cheese, butter and bacon. The price of these commodities has fallen off greatly, and it would appear that shippers are holding back from export in the hope of obtaining higher prices. The average price for butter during the last fiscal year was 20c a lb. and for cheese 11c a lb. Last month butter exported sold at 17 1-2c, and cheese at 8 1-2c. The average price of bacon last year was 11c. Last May it was 9 1-2c.

Dairy Farms Closing.

THE statement of the Dominion live stock commissioner that, owing to scarcity of labor, dairy farms are being put out of business, has been confirmed by C. C. James, Ontario Deputy Minister of Agriculture. Mr. James says that few people are aware of the seriousness of the problem facing the farmers of Ontario to-day. Already considerable difficulty is being experienced in persuading arrivals from the Old Country to take positions with the farmers, in view of the promise of steady employment in Toronto for months to come.

Mr. James also points out that a significant change has been going on in regard to the dairy industry of Ontario during the last few years. In the western district of Ontario dairy farming is on the decrease, while in the eastern districts it is increasing. The western men, unable to secure the necessary farm help, have gone into the business of feeding stock, and the cheese factories have consequently been getting less milk than formerly.

In 1897 there were 820 cheese factories east of Toronto, producing 85,943,000 lbs. of cheese, while in 1902 there were 885 factories, producing 107,100,000 lbs., an increase of 65 factories and of 21,000,000 lbs. in output. West of Toronto there were in 1897, 343 factories, with an output of 51,420,000 lbs., while in 1902 there were only 242 factories, with an output of 39,700,000 lbs., a decrease of 191 in the number of factories and a falling off of 11,700,000 lbs. in the output.

In the five counties, Oxford, Middlesex, Perth, Elgin and Norfolk, the cheese centre of the west, there has been a falling off of seventeen in the number of factories and of 1,537,000 lbs. in the output, while in the eighteen other counties there are eighty-four fewer factories and the production is less by 10,200,000 lbs.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—Quite a brisk local trade is reported for the week in smoked meats and lard, but the foreign demand has fallen off. Exporters have accordingly turned their attention to the home trade, and competition has resulted in a drop in prices. Long bacon is off a quarter of a cent, and lard, while not much cheaper, is weaker. The export trade in fresh meats is still large, but the effects of the first week's business in this line has worn off a little, and prices are somewhat easier. The most remarkable change is in spring lamb, which has come down a cent and a half. Business is active. We quote this week:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$0 07½	$0 08
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Butter—The butter being received now is almost all from good grass, and excellent in quality. Very few large rolls are offered. Prices have hardened a little. The export demand is poor. The productions of other countries and colonies have been and are so large as to lessen the sales of Canadian make on the English market. Australia and New Zealand have shipped record quantities. The outlook is not encouraging, so dealers say, and nothing but much smaller receipts will make it so. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 17
" prints	0 14	0 16

Cheese—There is little improvement in the matter of cheese, the entire foundation of the market being the English demand. Last year English buyers were so badly bitten that they are too careful this year for the good of our exporters. They cannot stand buying at a high price and selling at a low one, any more than anyone else, and thousands of dollars were lost in last year's business. Orders are being received from England, but they are at such a level as to render their filling an impossibility. There is very little old cheese left. Board prices have been steadily dropping since the beginning of last week, when they were 8 5-16 at the highest. As low as 7 7-8 was bid on Friday. Without a larger opening abroad, prices will have to drop. Factories do not seem to be inclined to accept below 8c, but from all appearances they will be forced to do so. The board reports are as follows:

Provisions—Provisions were active today, when there arrived as many as 1,968 packages of tinned meats and 86 boxes of ham and bacon. The market has not changed for fresh killed abattoir stock in hogs, although there was a much easier tone to the market itself. Considerable trading was done in dressed hogs at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt. Hams and bacon were in good demand, and, as is usually the case, the activity will no doubt increase with the warm weather. Lard held its own all the week, but pork was decidedly quiet. We quote:

Butter—Last Saturday there was a slight advance in the butter market, and firmness set in all round. This, of course, started at country points, and soon spread to the city. At the wharf yesterday morning there were 300 packages sold at from 17 and 17 1-2 to 18c. The latter figure ruled for one lot only. These prices are an advance of a quarter and a half to the pound, when compared with prices of a week ago.

Cheese—Little improvement marks the cheese situation. As many as 7,000 boxes of cheese were sold at the wharf at from 7 3-4 to 7 7-8c per lb., showing a decline of a quarter of a cent since a week ago. The market generally was very quiet, with Ontarios quoted at 8 3-8.

The Exports of Cheese and Butter.

There is quite a noticeable firmness in barreled pork, but it has done little to increase business. Beef also tends rather higher. In pork there is a wide range of quality offered. Situation in pure lard is very unsatisfactory. Dealers are holding quite large stocks, and manufacturers quote even lower prices than ever. The consumptive demand is not large. Hams and rolls have a fair sale, trade being done up by local packers. In fresh meats market shows no change, except that lamb is more freely offered. In western beef live stock is now being imported. Pork is low, and not much wanted. Mutton is very dull. Veal is rather light supply, and prices are held firm.

NEW YORK FIRM ENTERTAINS.

ON Thursday, June 16, 1904, the New York grocery firm of Francis Leggett & Co., entertained the grocers of New England and New Jersey to a luncheon and tour of inspection of their extensive premises in King street, and later in the day to a sail round New York harbor. This marks the third of a series of receptions tendered to the buyers and friends of Francis Leggett & Co. within the past few months.

After a sumptuous repast had been partaken of, every article of which bore the firm's label, the vice-president and secretary, J. C. Juhring, entertained the guests with an informal talk on "The Commercial Advantages of New York City." The entire party then inspected the factories, where they saw the processes of preparing food products in actual operation.

The value of such gatherings in promoting good-will between wholesaler and retailer can scarcely be overestimated, and Francis H. Leggett & Co. are to be highly complimented on the enterprise they have shown.

NAPOLI MACARONI.

It is just eight months ago since the Napoli Macaroni Co. began business. In this time the company has made a good name for itself and its goods, due largely to the tireless energy of its manager, W. C. Morris. Mr. Morris has had a hard fight to overcome a natural prejudice in favor of the imported article, but his efforts are being rewarded beyond his most sanguine hopes. His factory is a model of what such a factory ought to be. The very attractive passage which the Napoli Macaroni Co. uses for its goods, together with the big difference between its prices and those of imported stock constitute a big argument in favor of the domestic-made article.

FISH

The Fish Trade of Halifax.

IT can be safely asserted that nowhere on the Atlantic coast is the fish business so thoroughly prosecuted and understood as in Halifax. In no other market is there to be found such a varied assortment of superior dry, pickled and shell fish. We may go further in saying that there is probably no other place on the continent where the fish business is more thoroughly and successfully conducted as in the city of Halifax. There are a number of important concerns engaged in this line, embracing most adequately every branch. Here we find some of the largest, best arranged and most complete plants of the kind in the country. The premises of A. Wilson & Son covers a ground area of 225 x 365 feet, upon which have been constructed seven two-storey buildings, embracing cold storage warehouses, wholesale and retail departments, etc.

The extent of the export trade is surprisingly large. It embraces nearly every foreign country, the West Indies securing the larger quantity. There are several first-class firms engaged almost exclusively in this trade, while there are very few wholesale grocers who do not handle at times some lines of fish. A. N. Whitman, W. and C. H. Mitchell, Geo. E. Boak & Co., R. I. Hart, and James Fraser are among the larger firms engaged in this trade on an extensive scale. The United States, more than the Upper Provinces, receives their closest attention in this line thus far.

Black Bros. & Co., with a thorough and most complete establishment at La Have, are easily foremost in the prepared fish trade. Their boneless brands, "Halifax," "Acadia," and "Bluenose" are too well known and appreciated to need further eoniums.

The trade in general complain of the impracticability of doing any extensive trade in fresh fish with the Upper Provinces. A good many who have shipped car lots on consignment report unsatisfactory results. It is to be hoped these may be minimized, as a connection is both desirable and profitable on both sides. The advanced methods of storage insure absolute safety to the retailer in buying from his jobber.

It is to be desired that the wholesale and retail trade of the Upper Provinces will get in touch with the fish dealers of Halifax, as well as the trade in general throughout the Maritime Provinces.

Scalefish Wanted.

Latest market reports from the island of Trinidad say that scalefish is in demand there. Good split herring are also salable, but other descriptions of pickled fish are neglected.

It MUST be a good tea that retains the grocer's faith and favor year in and year out for many years. So good is of Perkins, Ince & Co., doesn't think the recent tariff changes are sufficient to affect the grocery trade appreciably. Of course, the clause which aims to prevent dumping cannot help but meet with the approbation of the trade generally as being a movement in the right direction. Even so, however, it will affect dry goods men far more than grocers. Such comparatively small quantities of syrups and molasses are used on this market that the removal of the duty on British West Indian molasses is not an important item, especially when the duty is so small. The Government have undoubtedly been endeavoring to improve trade relations between Canada and the West Indies, and its latest move tends at least in the right direction.

FEATURES OF THE NEW TARIFF.

THE GROCER continues in this week's issue the publication of interviews with leading Toronto wholesalers on the recent changes in the tariff.

Mr. W. Ince,

Mr. J. S. McMahon, of McMahon, Broadfield & Co., wholesale china and glass merchants, is inclined to think the recent changes in the tariff will not have any appreciable influence in so far as the increase in the preference on china and crockery manufactured in Great Britain is concerned. The price to the manufacturer remains unchanged, as well as that on package freight and insurance, all of which are very considerable items, the only change being a reduction in the duty of 5 per cent. This means that the retail dealer will pay perhaps one-half per cent. less for English staples than heretofore. Owing to the possibility of the lines of British china to which the new preference extends being restricted as a result of ambiguity in the reading of the clause referring to them in the new tariff regulations, it is not unlikely that even the small reduction of one-half per cent. may be further reduced. The only condition under which the change in the tariff will be noticeable is that the preference applies to all china, crockery, etc., manufactured in Great Britain.

Mr. McMahon is of the opinion that the 5 per cent. increase in the preference on English china is nothing more than a little "hip-handle" to offset the increased duty on English woolens.

Mr. H. P. Eckardt, of H. P. Eckardt & Co.; Mr. F. Sloan, of John Sloan & Co. and others are unanimous in their endorsation of the new Fielding tariff as far as the grocery trade is concerned, and expressed similar views to the preceding.

Mr Robert Christie, of Christie,

Brown & Co., Toronto, declines to express an opinion on the new tariff regulations in respect to the probable result of the removal of the duty on West Indian molasses.

In reply to the question, "Will West Indian molasses ever take the place of New Orleans in the manufacture of biscuits and confectionery?" he says the whole thing simmers down to this—you must have a good grade of either in any case; one manufacturer likes New Orleans, another prefers West Indian; a certain kind of biscuit requires New Orleans, another West Indian, a general statement which isn't worth much, but which is as much as you will get from a manufacturer if you ask him straight as to the respective merits of New Orleans and West Indian molasses. Any more detailed information he keeps for his own benefit.

Mr. E. W. Klotz,

manufacturers' agent, Toronto, says the new tariff will undoubtedly tend to increase importations of china, etc., from Great Britain, and to a certain extent to reduce importations of German goods to Canada, although for years now the bulk of Canadian trade in staples has been supplied by British manufacturers. Where the change will be most noticeable will be in fancy lines, in which the Germans have always had the lead. Although English manufacturers have been successful in their art goods, German novelties at the present time have the preference in Canada, in spite of the inimical surtax of 10 per cent. which added to the regular duty of 30 per cent. makes the duty on German goods equivalent to 40 per cent. Englishmen have still to learn the art of manufacturing cheap novelties which will bear comparison with the German article. Any actual increased consumption of English staples in Canada will not be so appreciable as a probable increase of sales of English novelties in Canada as soon as the English manufacturer can successfully compete with his German kinsman.

Mr. Wallace Anderson, of the Acadia Sugar Refinery, is interested particularly in the continuance of the German surtax on raw beet sugar, and submits the following statistics, which go to show that as a matter of fact it has had the effect of enormously increasing trade between Canada and the West Indies.

The total entries for home consumption in the Dominion for the first nine months of the present fiscal year were 251,549,586 lbs., of which 17,386,593 lbs. were of sugars above 16 Dutch standards, and included refined sugars. The balance, 234,163,793 lbs., was raw sugar not above 16 Dutch standard, and of the latter 165,344,561 lbs. were from the British West Indies and British Guiana, or say 66 per cent., as compared with 34,544,558 lbs. from the British West Indies and British Guiana for the previous fiscal year, or about 12 1-3 per cent. of the total, which was 280,314,425 lbs. To show the relative distribution of British Guiana sugars for the present season's production, shipments up to May 18 last were as follows: To the United Kingdom, 3,039 tons; to the United States, 4,390 tons, and to Canada, 18,185 tons. For the corresponding period of 1903 the figures were: To the United Kingdom, 1,691 tons; to the United States, 27,244 tons, and to Canada 5,045 tons, showing an increase to Canada of about 350 per cent. The price of raw sugar at the present time is about 1-4c per lb. higher than that of a year ago, although this rise is easily accounted for by the difference in existing market conditions.

COLLECTING BAD DEBTS.

THE retail grocers' associations in Canada are generally adopting a plan for collecting bad debts that is said to have worked well at Hamilton, Ont. The first step is a request from the grocer for payment, with a hint that if not paid the account will be handed over to the association and all its members made acquainted with the fact. The next step is a letter from the secretary of the association that the account has been handed over, and that if not paid by a certain date the matter will be reported to the members, after which the debtor would be unable to get further credit. If the foregoing is ineffective, suit is threatened. Should the debtor still neglect payment, a letter is written to his employer stating that all legitimate means have been taken to collect the debt, and as a last resort the matter is reported to him in the hope that he will use his influence to effect a settlement. This plan is said to work well, especially when the association has a large membership and includes the principal grocers of the community.

The grocers of Hamilton, Ont., have signed a petition providing for a weekly half-holiday on Wednesday afternoons, during June, July and August.

FRUIT TERMINALS IN MONTREAL.

THE fruit terminals of Montreal are perhaps better than in most places, but there is still room for improvement. The railway companies have tried their best to please the wholesale fruit men of Montreal, and yet kicks continue to come. Recent interviews with several prominent Montreal wholesalers were productive of an expression of pity for the fruit men in Toronto, in which city the fruit terminals are far from being as good as they are in Montreal. Nevertheless, the attitude shown by the Montreal men is that they are half afraid to put their names on record as kickers, while in general they would be very glad to have The Grocer to refer to some of their alleged grievances a year ago which, however, have not shown themselves so far this season.

To begin with, the fruit men in Montreal have excellent shed accommodation, and first-class siding facilities. Most of the fruit is brought in over the Grand Trunk Railway. A large shed is used at the extreme west end of the G. T. R. yards, convenient to the fruit auction rooms. Immense doors are used in this shed, which permit of large numbers of cars being unloaded at once, and every accommodation is afforded for prompt piling of boxes and crates of fruit or vegetables, so as to allow them to be easily sorted, and readily distributed. The chief complaint is on the score of delivery; for instance, a trial was made recently of attaching banana cars from New York and southern points to a well-known regular passenger train from Rouse's Point to Montreal. This was done once, and was highly successful, and it is generally believed by the wholesale trade that if railroads would attach fruit cars to their passenger trains for, say, three days a week, the freights are of sufficient excess to pay better than all the passengers they could possibly carry. This would afford a six o'clock delivery of cars to the fruit shed, and would facilitate the interests of the buyer and the seller, at the same time creating a big aggregate profit for all concerned. The importation of fruit is not the most serious problem, however. The handling of Western Canadian fruit is the greatest problem. It comes in larger quantities, and hence is sometimes difficult to locate. In Montreal, the chief difficulty is not want of siding, but too much siding. Many a fruit man would give one whole car if he could find where the rest are, on a hot Summer's day. He calls up the freight department, and finds that his fruit has arrived. He has his bill, and is frequently told that the fruit will be on hand in a short time. He supposes that short time may mean an hour, and makes arrangements for his fruit to be delivered at the shed by, say eight o'clock in the morning, a generous allowance for shunting and all possible delays. To his amazement, the fruit does not turn up till four in the afternoon. He not only loses the value in the shrinkage of the fruit itself, but in all probability a ready buyer, to whom he had promised the goods at a certain time. The stock becomes immediately second grade, and has to be sold at a sacrifice. There are several large suburbs of Montreal where immense railway yards are used for shunting purposes. The chief of these are Point St. Charles and St. Henri. It is disconcerting, to say the least, to a fruit dealer to find that his car of fruit has been packed off at a siding at Point St. Charles, when he has expected it at the fruit sheds at an early hour in the morning. Delivery is the whole problem he has to fight.

A movement is on foot in Montreal to induce the Grand Trunk to resume their special fruit trains, which were put on three years ago. Railroad companies claimed in their former attempt that it did not pay, but fruit men claim that if a special train can be put on for a newspaper, for cheese and butter, or other products, surely the fruit interests ought to be considered, especially as their freight rates are higher than those paid by any other shippers. Last season, owing to the big strike at the Montreal wharf, fruit shippers were in the hands of the railway companies. This season everything has gone harmonious so far, and the fruit men are not anxious to borrow any trouble, feeling that by intelligently standing up for their rights, the railway companies will treat them generously, and everything will turn out satisfactorily.

AN AMBIGUOUS TARIFF CLAUSE.

THE fastidious tradesman, with a liberal share of political prejudice, has at last found something "agin the Government," namely, a clause in the revised tariff regulations which may be variously interpreted.

Item 185 in the new tariff resolution fixes the duty on "tableware of china, porcelain or other clay" of British manufacture imported into Canada at 15 per cent. ad valorem. This means that certain English china, porcelain, etc., is to be given an additional preference of 5 per cent.

As a matter of fact, the customs authorities in Toronto and Montreal have interpreted the "tableware of china," etc., quite differently. In Toronto, the whole of china, porcelain, crockery, etc., manufactured in Great Britain is given the benefit of the additional preference. In Montreal the customs authorities are exacting the original duty of 20 per cent. on such articles of British manufacture as toilet sets, china novelties, flower pots, etc., while they interpret the clause in the new tariff regulations literally, and allow the additional preference to "tableware of china" only.

Those directly interested in Toronto and Montreal have written to the Department at Ottawa on the subject, but have received in reply only the useless information that it is perfectly clear what is meant by "tableware of china," and that they must exercise their own judgment. Meanwhile dealers in Montreal feel that a uniform tariff should apply without discrimination in favor of any particular port of entry. One Toronto dealer thinks there is no possible sense in discriminating between tableware and toiletware; that the Government authorities never intended but that the new tariff should include all china of British manufacture, and that the ambiguity of the term "tableware of china" is nothing more or less than an oversight. Montreal china and crockery dealers feel that the interpretation of the new regulation, according to the customs authorities there, is going to involve a lot of labor and unnecessary inconvenience, in separating tableware, crockery, toiletware, novelties, etc., and are striving to have an interpretaton placed on the fatal clause which will be inclusive instead of exclusive.

The general impression seems to be that the last stage of a tariff which requires to be interpreted before it can be understood is not much better than the first, and that the wording of the clause in question ought to be freed from possible misinterpretation if the trade is to know where it's at.

THE OBJECTIONABLE SELLING CLAUSE.

ONE of the avowed objects the canned goods packers had in consolidating their interests was the obtaining of a more uniform and better quality of goods. This object they are obtaining. The quality of their goods is, on the whole, more uniform and better than they were as a rule previous to the formation of the present joint stock company.

The company now control from 90 to 95 per cent. of the output in Canada. They will be wise if they persist in this policy and desist employing methods which are arbitrary and in the main unbusinesslike. We have particular reference to the selling clause which declares that no rebate will be given at the end of the stipulated term unless the wholesalers confine themselves to their product. This, as we have pointed out in previous issues, is a most arbitrary and unjust stipulation. No business man should be compelled to confine his purchases to any one manufacturer or group of manufacturers. It is not only unbusinesslike, but is morally wrong, and in the end must lead to the defeat of the very objects which the canners have in view.

Throughout this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific there is already a very strong antipathy to the output of the factories in the consolidation, and where it is at all possible, purchases are being made from independent companies. These independent companies are more numerous than they were a year ago, and as long as the present arbitrary selling terms of the big corporation are maintained, so will the inducements to start up independent factories multiply.

As we have repeatedly said before, we have for some years favored the consolidation of the leading canned goods factories, but in advocating this we never for one moment anticipated that the consummation of the idea would lead to the employment of arbitrary methods designed to destroy competition and to preserve the trade to a corporate interest.

The packers composing the Consolidated Company are strong enough, and have sufficient experience to turn out goods of quality which, without the employment of arbitrary measures, are qualified to build up not only a larger trade in the home market, but in Great Britain and foreign markets as well.

It is to be hoped the Canners' Consolidated will at once withdraw the clause in their selling terms which is causing so much dissatisfaction among the trade.

WESTERN BOARD OF TRADE CONVENTION.

THE latest stage in the flood-tide of western commercial and industrial development is market by the inauguration of a board of trade convention of the Northwest Territories, which held its initial meeting in Calgary, Alta., on June 15-16.

Over a year ago the Calgary Board of Trade sent a letter to the various boards of trade in the Territories, inviting expressions of opinion as to the feasibility of holding a convention of delegates from such bodies at a central point in the west. The proposal met with general approbation, and as a direct result Calgary was suggested as a suitable place for the first convention. The Calgary Board of Trade immediately took upon itself the responsibility of calling the convention, which has just closed with a large attendance of representative business men from all sections of the Territories as far east as Winnipeg, and as far west as Nelson, B. C.

What far-reaching influences this gathering may have is difficult to determine. In the first place, however, it augurs for a stronger bond of sympathy and fellowship between western business men, in whose hands lies so largely the shaping of the future of western Canada. At the same time it is a simple and most efficient means of unifying and solidifying the individual commercial interests of the west into a general aggressive national policy.

The sentimental and commercial aspects of such a convention are equally significant factors, and it may almost be taken for granted that once the right atmosphere has been created by representative business men actually engaged in trade and commerce coming together at frequent intervals to discuss financial, agricultural and industrial problems with which they are actually confronted, the road is a short and direct one to the firm establishment of a sound commercial national life.

The present activity in western business circles is a matter over which every Canadian should be proud, and the Western Board of Trade Convention, although a big stride in the right direction, may be taken only as an indication of the bright future in store for western Canada.

RAILWAY COMMISSION MEETS.

THE Federal Railway Commission, in session this week in Toronto for the purpose of listening to complaints and making readjustments in freight charges and claims against the various railways in this section of the country, will meet with the approval of all who recognize the necessity of a safeguard in the way of Government supervision of enterprises which enjoy the distinction of being practical monopolies. The trade of a country is very largely in the hands of the railways which pass through it, and on different occasions in the past it has been evident that Canadian railways have taken advantage of their position to further their own interests at the expense of the interests of the public.

One of the chief items considered was the complaint of several manufacturers, on the ground of unjust discrimination in freight rates. For instance, the freght rate from Wallaceburg, Ont., to Winnipeg is 65c, while that from Hamburg, Germany, to Winnipeg is only 72c. From Detroit to Toronto, a distance of 228 miles, the rate is 13c, but from Wallaceburg to Toronto, a distance of 199 miles, it is 18c. This grievance is one of long standing, and it is hoped the railway commission will be able to do something towards the removal of a manifest injustice to trade in Canada. It is anomalous, to say the least, that the cost of shipping goods from Canada to England and back to Manitoba should differ very little from that of shipping direct to the West.

Another important matter was the complaint of fruit growers of the Niagara peninsula that excessive freight rates were being charged on their export products, whereas the increased earnings of the railways would warrant a material reduction in rates; also that the railway companies were not providing prompt service nor proper equipment in the way of refrigerator cars. It was also held that the fruit men were being neglected by the railroads, in order that American grain might be rushed through. As an alternative, shipping by express had been resorted to, but this ate up all the profits. The fruit men were entirely at the mercy of the carriers in regard to promptness in transportation and delivery. Shipments were frequently ruined by delay, and in addition the markets were demoralized by the dumping of partially spoiled fruit. Delays of from four to twelve days in shipments to the Northwest Territories had been recorded, and it was only necessary to suggest the experiences of the fruit dealers with the railroads during the past eight months. In one case a carload of apples was shipped from Grimsby on November 30 to catch a steamer at St. John, N.B., on December 3. It did not arrive until January 3, and was frozen. The direct loss to the shippers was $800, but owing to the non-arrival of the shipment in England a $3,000 contract had to be cancelled.

Fruit men feel that it would be too expensive to carry such a case to the courts, or to enter suit, and hope to see the railway commission take upon itself the adjustment of all such difficulties, especially since difficulty has been experienced in getting the railway companies to adjust claims of damage.

A HAPPY EVENT AT LINDSAY.

ON Tuesday last, at Lindsay, Mr. W. T. Robson, president of the Canadian Club of New York, was married to Miss Sylvester, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Sylvester, of that town. Mr. Robson has had a most successful career, and one deserving the emulation of every young Canadian business man. He is a native of Lindsay, where he obtained a thorough grounding in the dry goods, grocery and hardware trade in his father's store. During this time he began to write business articles for The Canadian Grocer and other trade journals, which attracted the attention of the publishers of the MacLean trade papers. Mr. Robson was offered, and accepted, an advantageous position with the MacLean Publishing Co., in Toronto. He was later moved to the Montreal office; from whence he was sent to New York about two years ago to take charge of the office there.

Mr. Robson, besides his success in the business world, has been prominent in social circles. As president of the Canadian Club of New York, he is at the head of an important organization, with a membership numbering three or four hundred. In the club are enrolled the names of two United States senators, and several multi-millionaires, besides other Canadians prominent in the life of New York City. The Grocer extends to Mr. Robson its heartiest congratulations.

TEA EXHIBIT AT ST. LOUIS.

THE East India Building at the St. Louis Exhibition opened its doors to the public without ceremonies on Saturday morning, May 4.

The building is designed after the celebrated mosque of Itmadul-Dowlah at Agra. It consists externally of a series of seven arches on the three sides; the centre arch in each facade being loftier and forming the entrances to the building. The arches are fitted with Venetian doors, which admit of the building being thrown open on all sides, and being converted into a colonnade.

Internally, there is a central square court, surrounded by a series of arches smaller than those on the exterior of the building. In the centre of this court a Hindoo temple has been erected, made of teak wood, exquisitely carved from the base to the extreme top, which is thirty-seven feet above the floor. This temple was made expressly for exhibition in St. Louis, and took two years to complete. The panels depict scenes from Hindoo mythology, all boldly carved in relief. The rest of the structure is covered with intricate designs of scrolls, conventional flower patterns, palm trees, etc., so that there is not a square inch which remains undecorated.

Overhanging the court there is a balcony, from which springs another series of arches, which carries the roof. This balcony, with its corridor, is lighted from the sides by oriel windows, and the whole building is full of light from the clere story over the court, which is practically all glass.

The building has been erected under the auspices of the Government of India, to contain exhibits of Indian products, mainly India tea, a very important industry of that country, which now produces over 200,000,000 lbs. annually, and Indian art manufactures, including carved furniture, draperies, handprints, brass, copper, silver, enamel and repousse work.

MARRIAGE OF TORONTO BROKER.

Word has reached Toronto of an interesting event which occurred in London, Eng., on June 21, 1904, namely, the marriage of Miss Massey, of Westminster, S.W., to Mr. W. G. A. Lambe, one of the leading grocery brokers of Toronto. The Grocer has much pleasure in extending to Mr. and Mrs. Lambe its heartiest congratulations.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, June 23, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery trade during the week under review has been dull to fair, the depressing effect of the recent drop in sugar not having worn itself out as yet. One wholesaler expresses himself on the situation as follows: "People are sick on sugar, and whereas usually at this time of the year there is a big sugar season, this year there is not much to record, except sorting up, the volume of trade being small, the early fruit season late, and in all probability likely to be comparatively poor. There is a tendency, however, to firmness, and one New York refiner has already advanced prices. Canned goods continue firm, especially corn and peas, with an active market for canned fruits, and unfavorable surmises regarding the volume of the coming tomato crop. Canned meats are moving readily, and canned fish are active, especially lobsters. Syrups and molasses and teas are quiet and firm. Coffees, both mild grades and Rios, have advanced, unfavorable reports having been received from primary markets regarding the coming crop. Rice, tapioca and spices continue firm and steady, and California dried fruits exhibit an upward tendency.

CANNED GOODS.

A seasonable trade in canned goods is reported for the week under review, especially in canned fruits, meats and fish. Corn continues very scarce and is entirely out of first hands. In some quarters it is already surmised that the late season and unfavorable weather portends a small tomato crop. Fish, especially salmon, are getting the full advance since the prices for the coming season's pack were announced. Only a small proportion of the salmon packers are packing this year, and fishermen are getting the high price of 35c per fish. This refers, of course, only to Fraser River salmon. Some shipments of new lobsters arriving on the Toronto market recently were caught up very quickly. Owing to the anticipated short pack of fruit, which will inevitably follow a small fruit crop, canned strawberries are said to have been changing hands. We quote the following prices:

SUGAR

There is little change to note in the demand for sugar, the market dragging on from day to day. The recent decline has created a distrust, and its effect upon the demand has been very prejudicial. A further reason for this is the lateness of the season, with the small fruit crop only beginning to arrive on the market, namely, domestic strawberries, which are coming in comparatively limited quaitities. We have, however, to note an improvement in outside markets, and the impression prevails that the decline in Europe has run its course. American refiners are believed to have been heavy buyers of beets and other non-privileged sugars, to the extent of fully 50,000 tons. The reason for this is not far to seek, in view of the rapid cessation of operations in Cuba, where there are now only twelve central factories working as compared with forty-two on the previous week, and a maximum of 171 at the height of the season.

The deficiency in stocks in the United States and Cuba together is 264,454 tons, as compared with the same time last year, and present indications are that the statistical position will get worse instead of better during the coming weeks, when the season of largest consumption is on in the United States. When American refiners can no longer be sure of supplies from Cuba they will have to further anticipate their requirements by still heavier purchases of sugars which pay full duty, such as beets and Javas.

Spot quotations for centrifugals remain now at 3.84c duty paid, on which basis there have been some small transactions, principally in Porte Ricos and San Domingos, totalling about 10,000 bags. The market in sugar for shipment from Cuba has assumed a stronger phase, and is reported to be advancing with large sales, on basis of 2 19-32c, c and f, New York, which is equivalent to 3.94c duty paid, or about 1-16 below recent highest point. There is a strong undertone, and with the impression prevailing that we have seen the lowest prices for the present season, the market favors sellers. Beet sugar, after declining to 9s 3-4d, basis f.o.b. Hamburg, has advanced to 9s 1 1-2d for June, and 9s 2 1-4d for July.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for the week ending June 15 were 23,293 tons, or nearly 24,000 tons less than the previous week, and 10,000 tons less than for the corresponding week last year. Meltings decreased for the week 2,000 tons, and are estimated at 37,000 tons, as compared with 36,000 tons for the same week last year. Total stock in all hands on June 15 was estimated at 215,717 tons, of which nearly 110,000 tons were in refiners' hands. Combined stock of Europe and America at latest uneven dates was 2,337,717 tons, as against 3,037,398 tons at the corresponding time last year, the decrease being 303,681 tons. Cables from Cuba report that a very severe storm on Tuesday of last week interrupted telegraphic communications, and it is presumed that it may have caused some damage in the cane fields.

Willett & Gray, in their weekly circular of June 16, write: "We do not change our opinion that the course of prices throughout the present campaign will be upward, with occasional reactions such as are now prevailing.

There is no change to note in either American or Canadian refined, and we quote locally as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup and molasses market has been quiet for the week, and business on the street is also reported as being slack. Wholesalers report considerable stocks of West Indian molasses purchased under the new tariff regulations as being on the way. It is not expected that large quantities of West Indian stock will be brought into the local market as yet, however, as the price continues to rule pretty high, and be-

Notice to the Trade

FROM THE BLOOMFIELD PACKING CO.
PACKERS OF QUAKER CANNED GOODS.

We are making a specialty of string beans. We believe that with care and the proper attention given to this line the trade can be largely increased to the advantage of the retailer, consumer, and packer. We are packing stringless beans not string beans. Every merchant knows the difficulty in the past in getting a bean free from strings; they also know how objectionable this is to the consumer and how detrimental it is to the trade. This is all the more pity as there is no finer vegetable put inside of a can when it is packed properly and the quality of the raw material is all right. To bring this vegetable to its proper position we have added sifting and bean grading machinery to the plant. In doing this the object is to sift out all the large beans with strings in them and throw them out. After doing this we have three lines—stringless refugee, select refugee, and petite haricots. These latter will be found quite as small, a much better flavor and at half the price of the small French beans put up in glass. The stringless refugee and the select refugee are both fine stock and can be sold at the same price as the ordinary goods usually sold by other packers.

Foreign Dried Fruits

There has been a good demand for foreign dried fruits during the week under review, which may be traced largely to the shortage in the home berry crop. California fruits have firmed considerably. Prunes are still in demand and comparatively scarce, owing to the fact that the trade consider this a poor time of year to stock large quantities of prunes.

A heavy crop of peaches is expected in Georgia, and good crops promise in Maryland and Delaware. The crop is estimated to be 300 carloads short of last year, while there is no old stock on hand. As there were 300 cars carried over a year ago, the supply for the coming season would thus be 600 cars short. This being the case, should the demand continue it is held to be probable that prices will go higher.

The apricot crop is not short. In fact, according to some estimates it will exceed that of last season by 200 cars. The prune crop is expected to equal that of last year. With a carryover of about 600 carloads and with the prospect of a light export demand because of large European crops, it is thought that prices will not likely advance. The supply of small sizes on the California crop will be light.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs continue quite heavy with prices a trifle easier. Fifteen cents is still quoted, but the outlook is better for a lower level. The "shrink" is heavier, which means that more bad eggs are being received. The price is far too high for extensive buying, and dealers are holding themselves aloof from too extensive purchases. It is hoped that a week or two will see a drop of at least two cents.

APPLES.

A fair trade in evaporated apples is reported, especially in the northern country, where there is always a brisk demand at this season. We quote the following prices :

Fish.

Trade in fish is steadily improving, sales for the week under review having been brisk. Lake trout are ½c firmer, and will in all probability go to 9c; the advance is owing to the scarcity of supplies on the market. The demand is now principally for white fish and trout. Green Fruits.

Trade in green fruits during the past week has been satisfactory in the extreme. Fruit dealers report a lively trade in oranges, but say the market is beginning to show a tendency in the direction of dulness owing to the fresh fruit market opening so briskly. The general move of the fruit and commission men from their down-town offices to the fruit market took place on Wednesday. Henceforth, until the Summer fruit season is over, the bulk of the local trade will be directed from the market, only country shipments and trade in staple lines being conducted from the regular fruit warehouses. Owing to the lateness of the season the move is considerably later than usual. California navels are nearly out of the market, also valencias, and the market is being supplied at present with mediterranean sweets and California late valencias. Lemons are in good supply and the market is easier if anything. Trade in pines is good, with Havanas nearly out of the market, and supplies of Floridas taking their place.

Home-grown cherries are on the market for the first time this week, and are quoted at $1.25 a basket. A seasonable trade on a small scale has also been done in California cherries. Florida tomatoes are out of the market, and in their place Mississippi and Texas stock supply the trade. The season for imported strawberries is over, and home-grown berries are beginning to arrive on the market freely. Latest quotations are down to 10 and 11c, with fruit of excellent quality coming from the Niagara Peninsula and surrounding country. Up to this week arrivals of Canadian berries have been rather slow, but on Tuesday the receipts were fully 600 crates, and Wednesday they were 1,000 crates. It is expected that next Tuesday, June 28, will be a big strawberry day. Cantaloupes from California have appeared on the market. The season is a little early for them, although California peaches are on the market and are selling at $2.50 per crate. Water-

Vegetables.

A seasonable demand for vegetables of all kinds is reported for the week, especially new vegetables, the majority of old roots, with the exception of potatoes, being out of the market. Potatoes continue unchanged in price with the market tending easier. It would take very little to knock the bottom out of the old potato market if new potatoes should begin to arrive freely and consumers decide to use them to any extent. In view of this grocers throughout the country having supplies of old stock are recommended to dispose of them. New carrots and beets are 25 to 50c easier in price, with supplies of the latter coming more freely. Artichokes, turnips and leeks are out of the market. New Potatoes are easier in price than last week, also green cabbage. Green peppers are on the market and are quoted at 75c per basket. We quote the following prices :

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market continues quiet, with prices tending easier. Manitoba No. 1 hard is 1c easier. Northern Nos. 1 and 2 are each 1 1-2c easier, and No. 3 from 1-2 to 1c easier. Red and white wheat are 1c easier, respectively.

According to Bradstreet's, stocks of grain available in the United States and Canada on June 11, 1904, were 26,878,000 bushels of wheat, 11,115,000 of corn, 7,755,000 bushels of oats, 2,494,000 bushels of barley, and 1,011,000 bushels of rye, as against 29,495,000 bushels of wheat, 8,722,000 bushels of corn, 6,672,000 bushels of oats, 810,000 bushels of barley, and 1,049,000 bushels of rye, on June 13, 1903.

The quantity of wheat (including flour as wheat) exported from United States and Canadian ports for the week ending June 16 is 2,044,251 bushels, as against 3,617,415 bushels for the corresponding week of 1903.

The world's wheat shipments for the week ending June 20, 1904, are as follows: United States and Canada, 2,044,000 bushels; Argentina, 776,000 bushels; Russia, 2,752,000 bushels; India, 2,400,000 bushels; Australia, 2,400,000 bushels, a total of 10,372,000 bushels, as against 7,596,000 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Wheat on passage decreased 1,520,000 bushels, and corn increased 880,000 bushels. The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association estimates area under crop in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories as 3,420,411 acres wheat, last year 3,123,623, increase 9 1-2 per cent. Oats 1,205,960 acres, last year 1,101,333 acres, increase 9 1-2 per cent. Barley 392,569 acres, last year 381,125 acres, increase 3 per cent. Flax 46,540 acres, last year 64,636 acres, decrease 28 per cent. Condition of growing crops first-class.

Russian Minister of Agriculture reports June 15, the conditions of winter wheat as below an average. In parts southwest (an important growing district), northwest, and central regions are unsatisfactory to bad. In southwest and north Caucasus (both important growers); elsewhere satisfactory.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, June 23, 1904.

Groceries.

WITH a French holiday intervening on Friday this week, a certain amount of quietness will mark the business transactions of the time. There is a lull in the sugar market just now, and even lower prices are expected. From abroad it is learned that the speculative beet market is unsettled, and the demand from the trade has been affected. The refiners' requirements of raw sugar have also been affected, and a quiet tone has marked sugar everywhere. The action of the French Government in abolishing the excise duties on sugar used for brewing and cattle feeding has materially increased the demand for sugar in that country. Sugar is in good demand all round. Sago remains unchanged in value, and is quiet. Rice will drop 15c in Quebec after July 1; that is, B and CC. Flake tapioca is fairly steady, with an occasional reduction in certain parcels. Common grade of pearl tapioca has been selling at a slight reduction, and arrowroot has been selling fairly, with little demand. Black pepper is exceedingly flat. Singapore white pepper is reported to have declined, but for fine qualities prices have been well maintained. Pimento shows some decline. Rough washed Cochin ginger has fallen off considerably; the low values of the cut variety are said to have attracted buyers. Certainly there is no probability of the price being maintained at its present low standard. Cloves are quiet and nutmegs steady. Canary seed took a jump in New York last week, but it has not been materially changed here. There has been a much better inquiry for it lately, principally from those who are wide awake, and are anticipating a short crop in Turkey. The market certainly has an upward tendency, and seed will most likely be dear. Teas of all kinds are steady, with good demand for the freely arriving Japans. The quality of Ceylons has shown some signs of falling off. Indian tea has shown a steadiness that was surprising all last week, and in fact, for the present month Chicago has been looking to this market for Formosa Oolongs and Sow Mee Hysons several inquiries having been received by the trade. Common grades were most in demand, but the notable feature was the remarkable value shown by grades just above common, which to-day are as cheap relatively as the common grades are dear. Coffee is still interesting and as June draws to a close, the season's coffee comes to an end too. Canned goods of all descriptions are very strong, especially corn, which cannot be had under $1.20. A solid position is being held by all lines, and tomatoes have never wavered from their strength of a month ago. The dried apple or evaporated apple corner is still having its effect at 7 1-2c. Green fruits of all kinds are quiet.

SUGAR.

Sugar is not so much in every commercial thought as it was two weeks ago, and the tone is tame and featureless. The demand is still good, and the market strong. No change has taken place up to date. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is every probability of a much stronger market for molasses. The reason given is, that although the price has sagged very materially, wholesalers are not by any means well supplied, and those who have been fortunate enough to make contracts for delivery of Barbadoes at a good rate will no doubt hold it for a higher price when they can do so without any fear of losing. The spot price is 25c, but cables from the island state there has been an advance of a cent, and further, that all the crop is about in, and the price is 13c. The season is nearly over at the islands, and there is not much molasses for sale. A better position is anticipated for molasses of all kinds. We quote:

COFFEE.

Things are looking better for the coffee men. According to the latest reports the visible supply for the world has decreased only 6,000 tons, which is considered by the trade very satisfactory, inasmuch as all the deliveries have been rported small for May and the early part of June. The importations of certain blends of coffee are ceasing, and the receipts from Rio and Santos seem to be falling off in comparison with other years. A slight advance has been reported from abroad, although no quotable change has been noted here. Colombian has sold more freely and rates have stiffened. An improved business has been done in Mochas, and firmness is reported owing to the alleged shortness in the present crop. We quote:

TEA.

New high priced teas of various descriptions are coming in nicely and very freely. Japans have held their own from the start, and the news from abroad is most encouraging, both for buyers and consumers. The demand for low priced blacks still continues, and higher prices may be looked for. The demand for finer grades of Indian tea is less active; prices have not changed much, as the quantity offering is in very limited compass. In fact, it is generally believed that it is likely to remain so until liberal imports are made of the new crop. The poor liquoring sorts of medium teas have been disposed of to suit buyers, owing to the fact that the quantity offering has been almost equal to the inquiry. Ceylon tea maintains a slight irregularity in price, owing to some of the quality being of an indifferent character. Chicago seems to be in the market for Formosa Oolongs and Sow Mee and Kee Muns, as inquiries have been received by the trade here during the past few days. We quote:

CANNED GOODS

A steady trade has been carried on all the week, and prices are firm, with an inclination to higher prices for some articles. For instance, corn is away up, not a can being available, except at $1.20. Some packers have already issued their prices for California fruit, and an advance is noticeable. The inquiry, therefore, has been strong for spot goods. A glance ahead would suggest to grocers that they should keep generous supplies, for the next three months are fine for the consumption of these goods. Thus with new season's pack at a premium, no mistake will be made in having a substantial stock of the old. Cohoe salmon is getting very scarce, and is available only at a high price, as high as $4 per case obtaining here. Cod liver oil s much easier, ranging from $2 to $2.25 a gallon, Newfoundland non-freezing process. In sardines it is reported that fishing has commenced off the west coast of France, but it is far too early to give an estimate of the pack. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The market for dried fruits is more or less unsettled, and fluctuations have taken place in different varieties of currants. It is generally known that at this time of year there are a few bargains about as big dealers are anxious to clear out old stocks and prepare books and boards for the new shipments. The reports of the growing crop are quite satisfactory, and an abundant yield is expected. Firmness marks the Sultana market, and holders appear to be warranted in asking the high prices. Smyrna and Greek sultanas are reported to be nearly exhausted, and there has been an excellent demand right along. Valencia raisins have eased in price slightly, owing to the desire of merchants to clear their holdings in readiness for new fruit. The demand for evaporated fruits is still good, and there has been a good movement in apricots. New crops are reported short.

Watt, Scott & Goodacre report: Outside of some orders for September shipment of shelled walnuts, and prompt shipment of currants, the import trade is nil at the moment, for either prompt or futures.

Notwithstanding the low price made for California's, it is possible we may see Bosnia and French prunes again in our market. A large European crop is promised, and low freight with "French tariff" duty may bring them in. In California, it is expected that the Pacific will be about the same as in 1903, from which there are carried over about 600 cars. We quote:

Green Fruits.

Quietness marks the green fruit market all over. New arrivals of Canadian strawberries have set the market moving a little, and prices ruled at from 12 to 14c per box. The first cargo of California fruit is expected about Saturday or Monday, including about 700 crates of apricots, 200 crates of peaches, 150 crates of plums. The orange and banana markets are steady, but inclined to easiness owing to the numerous arrivals. The country demand has not been any too good for green fruits, yet the rates have kept up remarkably well, considering all things. From Spain it is learned that there are still considerable quantities for shipment, and possibly supplies may be had from that quarter up to August. We quote:

Fish.

The change in the fast day this week from Friday, a great Catholic French holiday, to Wednesday, will greatly lessen the consumption of fish in Montreal and district. Special dispensation has been given for holiday seekers to fast on Wednesday and to enjoy Friday as the feast of St. Jean Baptiste. The popular fish, such as trout, whitefish, dore and mackerel, have dropped a cent and a-half in some grades. The demand for Gaspe salmon keeps good, and brook trout maintains a strong position at 18c. Black bass is selling freely at 8 and 9c a lb., and lobsters at 10c. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The receipts of eggs were large on Monday, being 971 cases, as against 432 on Saturday. Generally the receipts are the very opposite of this, but the warm weather occasioned the difference and the tone has been pointing to a weak market, with a possible decline. Business was very tame for the first two days of the week, and the standard price ruled at 14 1-4c and 14 1-2c.

Beans, honey and maple products are quiet and unchanged in price.

POTATOES.

Potatoes were slow, and the demand did not improve all the week. Sound stock in car lots at 65 to 70c per bag, ex-track.

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

No signs of improvement were noted in the flour market, and the prices of last week still hold. The demand has been fair. We quote:

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, June 18, 1904.

THE turn over for the past week, taking in all kinds of business, has been satisfactory. All markets remain steady, and the jobbers report trade in general bright, with the prospects encouraging.

Sugar—The market remains firm. Montreal granulated is quoted at $5.05 in barrels and $1.95 in sacks. Yellows at $4.45. Wallaceburg holds the price good at $4.95 in barrels, and $4.85 in sacks.

Canned Vegetables—The market is now firm and corn is still quoted at the advance price of $1.75 per case.

Canned Fruits—The market continues firm. Pineapples, 2 lb. whole, are quoted at $3.75 per case of 2 doz.; 1¾ lb. sliced $3.75 per case of 2 doz.; 1½ lb. sliced $7.20 per case of 4 doz.; and 1¾ lb. grated $7.60 per case of 4 doz.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits — The market remains firm, but all lines of evaporated fruits are very scarce, especially California apricots. 1902 stock is about off the market, and 1903 choice is offering at 13¼c to 13½c. Oregon prunes continue to bring good prices, 70 to 80 at 5½c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6½c, and 40 to 50 at 6¾c.

Rolled Oats—Prices are firm. The market quotes 80 lb. sacks at $2.25, 40 lb. at $2.30, 20 lb. at $2.35, 8 lb. at $2.65, 6 lb. at $2.85.

Cornmeal—The market is steady with prices firm, and cornmeal is quoted at $1.75 per sack and 90c per ½ sack.

Flour—The market is firm, and quotes No. 1 patent at $2.45, No. 2 at $2.30, and No. 3 at $1.80.

Tapioca—The market still quotes tapioca at ½c advance, and prices hold good at 3¾c per lb.

Green Fruits—The market is somewhat firmer. Late valencia oranges are quoted at $4.50 per case, and sweets at $3.50 to $4 per case. Pineapples, $5 per case. Bananas, $3 to $3.50 per bunch. Strawberries, $3.25 per case of 24 quart boxes. Hood River strawberries, $3.25 per case. Tomatoes, $3 per case. Rhubarb, 2c per lb. Onions, 30c per doz. Radishes, 45c per doz. Cucumbers, $1 per doz. New cabbage, 4c per lb. Lettuce, 40c per doz. Asparagus is off the market; apples are very scarce and there are practically none to be had.

Eggs—The market quotes a little higher and they are jobbing to the trade at 20c.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., June, 1904.

BUSINESS in all lines has been retarded by the backward season. It is now the middle of June, and we have not had what could be called a real warm day

In markets there have been but few changes of importance. Perhaps that of chief interest is the firmer feeling in cheese. This of late years is a very important industry in these lower provinces. We have each year pointed out the disadvantage our factories are put to through lack of system in selling their output, but there is as yet no sign of improvement.

Brokers visiting the wholesale grocers are now busy pushing Fall lines, particularly fruits and canned goods. Owing to present conditions there is little competition in canned goods, and orders are given at open prices, particularly in Canadian vegetables and fruits. Owing to the rather dull market dealers are not inclined to place dried fruit orders very early this year, and there will be very little business indeed placed at open figures, our buyers preferring to wait until markets settle.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt there continues to be rather light demand. Our dealers are holding ample stocks. Prices remain unchanged. The principal demand at present is for cheese and butter salt, and there is little used outside of the Canadian. In box salt, both English salt boxed here and Canadian salt is being sold. The latter has very much the larger sale. Those, however, who are packing English salt report a much larger demand this year than previously. Dealers carry a light stock of rock salt. In the days of wooden ships this was a large business.

Canned Goods.

There is a steady sale for vegetables and fruits at even prices. In new, some outside canners have quoted prices; the very large quantity of goods sold, however, will be from the Consolidated Canners' Association. The pack of strawberries, it is said, will be light, and prices rule quite high. The prices of salmon for later shipment daily expected, it is thought will rule well above last year's figures. Canned meats hold firm at Fall prices, and are having quite a large sale. Our wholesalers handle little outside of Canadian goods. In oysters, firm prices rule, and higher prices are expected. In domestic fish the market is quite bare, although new haddies are now being received. In sardines arrangements are being made for a large pack. It is impossible, of course, to foresee what run of fish there will be, for the immense number of people coming into western Canada, a very increased demand is expected for these goods. Western buyers should take more interest in our domestic packed clams, which are special value. Lobsters are high and scarce. Dealers are inclined to shade prices on gallon apples, owing to rather light sales, and the prospect of full pack this season.

Green Fruits.

In bananas high prices are the order of the day, and, while large quantities are handled, dealers are finding it difficult to supply demand. In oranges some nice valencias are still offered; prices are higher. In California's stock being received shows considerable waste, but quality is good, and there is a steady sale. The Sorrentos received are but fair quality. Strawberries are more plentiful this week, and prices are lower. Tomatoes keep quite scarce and high. Rhubarb is low, and sells well. Lemons are low; there is a good sale at this season and quite large stocks are held. In fact our dealers rather overstocked early in the season. Pines are freely sold at rather lower prices.

Fish.

Season for gaspereau and shad is about done. While the former were quite a large catch, in the latter the catch was practically a failure. Pickled shad of late years have become a luxury. As yet catch of salmon has been small, owing, however, to receipts from other points prices are a little lower. In dried fish rather lower prices rule. There is but fair business reported. Pickled and smoked herring are very scarce.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

While we have no changes to report in price, flour, particularly Ontario, is quite firm. While oats are comparatively low, oatmeal is high; it has but a limited sale, and it is thought the price is out of proportion. Owing to the number of breakfast foods offered, some factories find it necessary to keep travelers through the province that their special food will not be overlooked; this creates an increased sale, and, of course, affects the sale of oatmeal. Cornmeal is firm. Beans are dull, even at the present low price. In barley there is a light sale. Split peas hold at full figures and move slowly.

NATURAL FOOD CO 'S NEW PRICE LIST.

On and after July 1, 1904, the following prices will rule in the products of the Natural Food Co.: Shredded whole wheat biscuit, per case containing 50 cartons, $5.25; one-half case, containing 25 cartons, $2.75; one dozen, $1.32. Triscuit, per case, containing 30 cartons, $3. One per cent. ten days, net cash thirty days.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. Kerns, of the Burlington Canning Co., Burlington, Ont., reports that domestic strawberries are ripening very fast, and that his company will begin to operate on Monday next, June 27, at the latest.

Ald. N. Lapointe, the prominent west end grocer, Montreal, is making a trip through the Niagara fruit district this week. Mr. Lapointe is a heavy buyer of fruit, and annually visits the different sections to thoroughly post himself on the fruit situation and make shipping connections with the best growers and packers.

Mr. J. H. Maiden, Montreal, has been appointed agent for the Province of Quebec for the Diamond Crystal Salt Co., St. Clair, Mich. Mr. Maiden has also been appointed agent for Simson Bros. Co., Ltd., Halifax, Sovereign lime juice, and for the convenience of the trade will carry stock for prompt delivery orders.

A WELL-EARNED HOLIDAY.

MR. Wm. Dobie, general manager and treasurer of E. W. Gillett Co., Toronto, was a caller at the Montreal office of The Canadian Grocer this week. Mr. Dobie, who was accompanied by Mrs. Dobie, is taking a well-earned vacation, his trip comprising a tour through Lakes Champlain and George, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, and home via New York and Hudson River.

A PROMINENT CUBAN VISITOR.

A KEEN, wide-awake and wealthy business man was at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, last week, in the person of Senor Arturo de Gomez, from Santa Cara, Cuba. He is a sugar and tobacco planter of considerable importance, and is concerned in the flotation of new companies, the object of which would be to further induce capital to invest money in Cuban sugar and tobacco. Senor de Gomez will visit Montreal on his return from Europe. He has succeeded in interesting Montrealers in Cuban sugar and tobacco.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Special correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Vancouver, B. C., June 17, 1904.

THE steamer Princess May reached this port yesterday afternoon from Skagway. She brought with her a number of passengers who had come up the Yukon River from Dawson by steamer, the navigation of the northern waters being entirely open to Dawson now. Advices received indicate that there is a feeling of confidence in the north. Activity in cleaning up the work of the Winter is the chief subject of interest in the northern country at the present time. Some business men from Dawson arrived to purchase supplies for their next Winter's trade. They will interview the wholesale merchants of Vancouver and Victoria.

Outgoing shipments north have dropped in the last week. Immediate wants have been supplied in nearly all lines, and shipments will not begin to be heavy until the through commodity rates are in force in July and August. Then it is anticipated there will be a rush of goods north by every available means of transportation.

Discussing the new tariff of freight rates in force in the Kootenays, Mr. H. E. Macdonell, general freight agent of the C. P. R. for the Kootenays, is reported as saying:

"The new tariffs give practically the same rates to Nelson and Rossland as the previous tariffs. To points beyond Nelson, in the Slocan, Boundary, and elsewhere, there is an arbitrary payable above Nelson rates. The wholesale distributing rates are higher than these arbitraries and apply only to shipments made by wholesalers to traders at the various stations in the district. The local rates out of Nelson on ordinary business are about the same as hitherto, as only a very few have been changed to meet the altered conditions.

"In the Crow's Nest Territory there is a 25 per cent. reduction in favor of Nelson wholesalers. This reduction prevails as far east as the summit of the Rocky Mountains, which is the provincial boundary line. I am certain," said Mr. Macdonell, "that the rates will be satisfactory to all concerned. That they will redound to the benefit of Nelson and give the wholesale business of the city a secure and stable footing, goes without saying. No one is more pleased than I am at the outcome of a well-sustained agitation that has resulted so favorably to Nelson."

The rapid growth of the customs of this province is an evidence of the increase in volume of trade here. For the eleven months of the current fiscal year the total of customs' duties collected was $1,405,200. For the whole of last fiscal year the revenue was $1,389,927. The revenue for the eleven months of the current year, therefore, exceeded the revenue for the whole of the previous fiscal year. As there was still a month to run, the estimate for which was $62,000, making the total year's returns estimated at $1,167,200, which gives an

A shipment of 33 tons of Indian corn imported from Australia was seized under instructions of the Department of Agriculture, Provincial Fruit Inspector Cunningham making the seizure. The corn was found to be badly infested with weevil, and as there is no evidence of such a pest existing in the Dominion it wac decided to prevent the possibility of its introduction. There is but one sure way to kill it, and that is to treat it with bisulphide of carbon, which would destroy the usefulness of the grain as a food. It is rather unfortunate, as the Australians are really most enterprising in sending forward samples and trial shipments of goods. A gentleman who recently wrote a firm in Sydney to send him quotations on lines which he thought he could handle here with advantage, was horrified to see come by express several large packages, one or two of them being more than one man could budge, let alone carry. It turned out that the biggest box contained samples of hardwood, other boxes were full of cases of honey, butter, pickles, and so on all the way through. When he came to pay freight and clear the goods through customs it cost him over $100.

The Pugsley-Dingman Co., of Toronto, have decided to establish a branch of their soap works in British Columbia, and have chosen Vancouver as the base of their operations. Mr. Wm. Foreman, a former Vancouverite, is expected here any day to take the first steps toward opening the new place.

Mr. G. L. Campbell, well known to the wholesale and retail trade in Vancouver and other coast cities, has opened up in the wholesale produce line in the city, having taken a very convenient warehouse on Abbott street. Mr. Campbell will make a specialty of handling local fruit and dairy produce. He is well connected in the trade, having for some years been city salesman for the J. Y. Griffin Co., Limited, and previous to that with the Parsons Produce Co. Mr. Campbell is also looking to establishing a connection among the merchants and butter makers of the Northwest, to receive their consignments of goods to be sold under their personal instructions.

This week the activity in local fruit is altogether unprecedented. There were received in one day no less than 700 boxes of strawberries on one train. These berries were received from the growers in the districts between Vancouver and Mission, and from places south of Mission and the Fraser River. The arrival of such an immense quantity on this market right after last Saturday, when the market had been bare, caused some trouble. The retail dealers imagined that it was dangerous to handle them at quoted prices, and stood out, fearing to get caught in a big slump.

The jobbers offered the berries away down to $1.25 and even less per case, and still they did not move very readily. Yesterday the price stiffened up to $1.50 on the average, the rise being caused by threatening weather. There is also the feeling that there will not be such large quantities marketed all at once again. As one dealer said, "There is always bound to be one big glut of berries in the season. This time it came as the local berries made their appearance. It is over now, and there is no fear that the price will be as low again."

There are some, however, who think that there are still likely to be very large quantities of berries to market. The fruit came in all of a sudden, but the season for the local crop is early yet. There is plenty of time for a large crop yet to be marketed. Victoria berries have been shipped over to this market also, which would indicate that the Vancouver Island growers have a good crop too.

In California fruits there are apricots, the first peaches, the first canteloupes, and cherries still arriving. There are no plums this week yet, and the arrival of new California apples is apparently delayed. The only apples on the market are the Tasmanian and Australian apples imported by the last steamer. This fruit is very choice, and is packed

Prices of oranges have gone up, as the navels are about out, and the St. Michaels, which have come in very rapidly, are likely to be out soon too. The prices of lemons are also very firm. Bananas are somewhat lower. Prices are as follows: Alexander, clingstone peaches, $2.25; apricots, $2; canteloupes, $2 per doz., $6 per crate; tomatoes, $3.25 per 20 lb. crate; cherries, $1.50 to $1.85; oranges, navels, $3.75, St. Michaels, $3.75, Mediterranean sweets, $3 to $3.25; bananas, $2.75 to $3.25; apples, Australian, $3.50 per box.

In vegetables the market is so dominated by local fresh stock that importations of California green vegetables have dropped down. Asparagus is being brought in from Washington at $2 to $2.25 per crate of ten lbs. California cabbage is quoted at 3½c per lb.; onions, 2c per lb.; new California potatoes, 3c per lb; cauliflower is very scarce.

The very large quantities of local fresh butter, now being marketed in this city from the Fraser Valley are having the effect of making slow work of sales of imported butter. The stocks of eastern Ontario butter are about cleaned up. Only three or four cars came forward this Spring altogether, and they sold well. About one car more would have gone all right, but dealers were nervous of ordering more, and now it is too late. There will be stocks ready from Manitoba and the Northwest as soon as wanted. It is very likely, however, that the amount brought forward will be very light until the shipments for Fall stocks to the Yukon begin. Prices quoted now are 25c for local creamery, 20c to 21c for eastern Canadian. Eggs are quoted 27c for local fresh, in a jobbing way, and 25c for eastern eggs. Manitoba is paying as high as 18c for eggs in a jobbing way, and consuming all that are produced, so that there is not likely to be much stock brought from there this season. There are some stocks on the way from the east now. Cheese is lightly stocked; prices are low, and little moving. There is no stock of cheese from Manitoba yet. Another car of eastern is expected for distribution among the trade here.

DEATH OF A BUSINESS MAN.

Death came suddenly Saturday last to Mr. F. Radcliffe Howard at his family residence, 102 Stanley street, Montreal. Mr. Howard was a partner in the firm of A. H. Brittain & Co. of the Board of Trade Building, and had many friends in social and business circles. The firm represented Black Bros. & Co., of Halifax, and had worked up a first-rate business by dint of energy and ability. It was three years ago that Mr. Howard contracted typhoid fever, and since then he has been far from well. A severe attack of pneumonio last week was too much for his failing health, and he succumbed. The funeral took place Monday afternoon, and was largely attended.

Biscuits And Confectionery

An Expanding Business.

WHEN a manufacturing concern is forced by pressure of business to enlarge its plant, it is a sure sign of its prosperity and success. The Mooney Biscuit and Candy Co., of Stratford, are compelled to add another oven, of the largest capacity obtainable, and similar to those they already have in operation, to overtake the increased business in their biscuit section.

The success of this company is deserved. In the first place, they have left nothing undone necessary to the turning out of a strictly first-class article. Coupled with this, there has been an aggressiveness in going after the trade that could have only one result, namely, larger sales. In particular, the company have been featuring their "Perfection Cream" Sodas, with much good to themselves. Every member of the staff, from the president down to the humblest member, believes that no sodas are equal to "Perfection"—surely a good belief, and if any ought to know, it is they who are engaged in biscuit manufacture.

In other lines of biscuits, plain and fancy, and in chocolates and confectionery, generally, the business of the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., has had, to use the language of Mr. W. J. Mooney, the manager, a phenomenal growth—all of which is complimentary to the manufacturer and to the public, which shows its appreciation of goods of quality by increased consumption of the same.

Chocolate Combine.

Two of the largest Swiss milk chocolate houses, known as Peter's and Kohler's, have resolved to join forces. The shareholders of each concern have unanimously agreed to the amalgamation. The new company will be known as the Societe General Suisse de Chocolat, and will have a capital of 2,500,000 francs, divided into 25,000 shares of 100 francs. Each house will continue to trade under its own name as heretofore.

Chocolate Note.

The Canadian Swiss Trading Co., Montreal, agents in Canada for Klaus Improved Swiss Milk Chocolates, advise that in order to impress their brands on the minds of the consumers, purchasers of Klaus' chocolates will receive with every box a number of very handsome brooches. These brooches are of oxydized metal, and very artistic in design. A certain number of these handsome brooches are packed in each box for distribution to purchasers of Klaus' chocolates. If more than the number of brooches usually packed in a box are desired, same can be obtained at the rate of 15c apiece, which price is very much under cost.

A. Kelly, of Sarnia, Ont., will shortly remove his confectionery and fruit business to the premises formerly occupied by the post-office, which he is having thoroughly remodelled.

TRADING STAMPS.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER:

Sir,—I have noticed in The Grocer many references to the use and abuse of trading stamps. It appears to me that some people make a great ado about nothing. We are being taught by our trade paper education to use various methods of attracting trade. If trading stamps prove an attraction not only to trade, but an inducement to pay cash, and such has been the writer's experience, why should special legislation be invoked to prohibit their use? If there is anything fraudulent about their use, it is a simple matter for any person injured thereby to have recourse to our laws, and punish the offenders. If, on the other hand, as appears most probable, the merchants who do not use them have suffered thereby, surely their proper course is to use the same or similar methods to attract or hold their trade. If trading stamps are issued indiscriminately for cash or credit purchases, then their usefulness is practically done, but as a means of inducing customers to pay cash I have found them invaluable. If my competitor adopts a scheme that draws away my trade, I am going to resort to some similar method, and not run to the Government for special legislation and protection.

GREEN FRUITS

Apple Trade of Great Britain.

THE Glasgow Herald, of June 7, remarks on the apple trade of Great Britain as follows: "Competition between apple shippers in the British market has been unusually keen lately, and it seems possible that in future years British colonial growers will maintain the premier position and control the late apple trade in the United Kingdom. At the present time apples are arriving from the United States, Canada, Tasmania, and Australia. We find, after a careful estimate, that during the past week 50,000 bushels were consigned from these four sources. Never before have such large imports been put upon our markets at the like period. In addition, the stocks on hand cannot be less than 200,000 bushels, so that a quarter of a million bushels of apples are available to carry on the supplies. This year the apple season may continue until the new home grown fruit is ready.

WEEK'S IMPORTS.

"In dissecting the shipments we find results to be as follows:—Of the total 50,000 bushels for the week, 30,000 came from Tasmania, 6,000 from Australia, 12,000 from Canada, and 2,000 from America. Our colonial apple shippers thus take a good lead; that this lead is due to superiority in the quality of their product is evident. The Americans could just as easily have sent us 50,000 bushels as 2,000, for they have the fruit on hand in cold storage. This season the colonial growers have marketed some specially fine specimens of apples. If they will but thin out their crops, aim at the production of mammoth and evenly graded fruits, they can depend upon forcing up values by 15 or even 25 per cent. at a very low estimate. According to our direct advice, if the season is favorable the June imports will be larger still next year.

POPULAR VARIETIES.

"Strange to say, the yellow skinned apples are now making the highest prices; the Wellington, although a culinary variety, realizing as much as 12s. 6d. a bushel wholesale. The New York pippin is always highly appreciated by trade buyers, for it is one of the best ever sold in our markets. It is worth 12s. a bushel. Cox's orange pippin makes a similar price on account of its flavor. In fact, it is worth 25 per cent. more than the Colonial Ribston pippin. A striking feature of the trade is the sale of the bulk of the sixteen varieties of apples imported from Australasia at better prices than are being made for the famous Californian Newtown pippins. Such sorts as Cleopatra, Cox's orange pippin, Wellington, scarlet pearmain, and Adam's pearmain, are exactly 25 per cent. higher priced than Newtown pippins from the Pajaro Valley. This is the more remarkable as the American apples are packed in better style than are the Australasians. If colonial apple shippers were more careful in the preparation and packing of the fruit they send us, none of the samples which come to hand in good salable condition would be sold under 10s. a case first hand and in quality.

"Before the first fruits came to hand during the late Spring months we predicted that the best samples would command 20s. or more per bushel. They actually sold as high as 22s. 6d. and 25s. That they are now valued at 8s. and 12s. a case is not due exclusively to the advanced season. The quality and grade of the first arrivals have not been maintained. As the result, though the demand is brisk and the fruit still popular, lower prices naturally prevail.

DIRECT APPLE BOATS.

"Towards the close of the season a quantity of Australasian apples came to hand in wet condition, showing that the transportation of this fruit from Australasia has not been brought to that state of perfection noticeable in the transport of apples from America. Although countless boxes of apples are sent into our markets from Canada, New York and California, seldom does one come across a box of bad fruit. The failure of some of the Australasian shipments shows that the introduction of direct or specially built fruit boats is badly needed. Even if engaged exclusively in the traffic, they would always be in demand throughout the year. Our colonial apple fields are assuming such enormous proportions that special fruit shipping firms would find their exploitation attended with ample profit."

W. R. Smith of Winnipeg has opened a fruit store in Portage la Prairie.

Fruit, Flower and Honey Show.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made for the Ontario Fruit, Flower and Honey Show it is proposed to hold in Toronto during the second week in November. It will be the biggest show of the kind ever held in Canada. The various associations interested include the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, the Ontario Bee Keepers' Association, the Toronto Horticultural Society, the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association, and the Toronto Electoral District Society.

The prize list is already in circulation. The fruit growers will expend over $1,000 in their part of the show. Money has been reserved to provide for the collection of representative exhibits of fruit from all the counties in the province. The fruit will be kept in cold storage.

A series of big meetings will be held at the time of the show. The Fruit Growers' Association will hold its annual convention, as will also the Bee Keepers' Association. There will also be a meeting of delegates from all the Horticultural Societies in the province, as a result of which it is expected that a Provincial Horticultural Association will be formed.

California Deciduous Fruit Season Opens.

The first car of California fruit to come to Toronto this season arrived and was sold Friday last, June 17. The car was shipped from Vacaville County, and contained over a thousand packages, consisting chiefly of apricots and plums, with a few peaches and cherries. That the car traveled across the continent and arrived on schedule time, and in perfect condition, speaks volumes for the management and care exercised in picking, packing and shipping, as well as for the keeping qualities of the fruit, to say nothing of its prompt handling by the railroads.

California is enjoying a bountiful crop this year,—not too big, but enough to go round,—and it is the aim of fruit growers there to place their fruit in houses where it has heretofore been known only as a great luxury. In several of the cities across the border this fruit is not only being used as a fresh table fruit, but owing to its lusciousness of flavor, fine appearance and keeping qualities, is being canned and preserved for Winter use. It is thought by placing it before the public in sufficient quantities, at reasonable prices, that the same will be accomplished here in Canada. The season may be said to have fairly started, and regular arrivals may be looked for from now on.

Australian Export of Fruit.

By D. H. Ross.

THE final returns for the present season are not yet completed, but the following figures can be taken as approximately correct. The extent of the export of apples from Australia to the United Kingdom and Europe, April 18, comprises:

	Cases.
From Hobart	413,505
From Melbourne	40,998
From Adelaide	47,795
Total	502,298

The increase over last year is about 170,000 cases, without considering the exports to South Africa.

Tasmania, as usual, heads the list, and shipments will continue to be made from Hobart for some time yet. By the Miowera, sailing from Sydney recently, a trial shipment of about forty cases of Victorian assorted apples and pears was forwarded to Vancouver. Local growers will be guided by the result of this initial shipment as to the varieties to forward next season. Tasmania has hitherto made all the shipments of Australian apples to British Columbia. It is not likely that there will be more shipments to Canada this year. In October or November next, Melbourne fruit importers hope to receive shipments of apples from Western Canada, as the local market will be quite bare of supplies then.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Pure Seed Bill.

THE bill for the inspection and sale of seeds, which is now before the House at Ottawa, enacts that no person shall sell or offer, expose, or have in his possession for sale, for the purpose of seeding, any seeds of cereals, grasses, clovers or forage plants containing any seeds of the following weeds: Wild mustard or charlock, tumbling mustard, hares ear mustard, ball mustard, field pennycress, or stinkweed, wild oats, bindweed, perennial sowthistle, great ragweed, purple cockle, orange hawkweed, or paint brush, ergot of rye, unless each receptacle containing such seeds, or a label securely attached thereto, is marked in a plain and indelible manner (a) with the initials of the Christian names and the full surname and address of the wholesale or retail seller; (b) with the name of the kind or kinds or seed; (c) with the common name or names of the aforenamed weeds, the seeds of which are present in the seed sold or offered, exposed or had in possession for sale.

No person shall sell or offer, expose or have in his possession for sale any seeds of timothy, red clover, alsike, or any mixture containing the said seeds, in any receptacle, upon which is marked "No. 1," or any other designation which represents such seeds as of first quality, unless they are free from the seeds of weeds named above, and are also free from the seeds of white cockle, night flowering catchfly, false flax, Canada thistle, oxeye, daisy, curled dock, blue weed, chicory, and contain out of every one hundred seeds not less than ninety-nine seeds of the kind or kinds represented, or seeds of other useful and harmless grasses and clovers, of which ninety-nine seeds ninety seeds must be germinable.

No person shall sell or offer, expose or have in his possession for sale for the purpose of seeding in Canada any seed of timothy, alsike or red clover, or any mixture containing the said seeds, if the seeds of the weeds named above are present in a greater proportion than three to one thousand of the seed sold or offered, exposed or held in possession for sale.

An inspector is to be clothed with power to take any necessary samples for inspection, and the samples are to be sent to an official seed analyst. Infringement of the Act is punishable by a fine of from $1 to $5 for the first offence, and from $5 to $25 for subsequent offences, together with the costs for each package offered for sale, and in default of payment imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month.

In case of obstructing an inspector in the performace of his duties, a penalty is provided of from $25 to $500 and costs, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months.

The Governor-in-Council may make regulations determining the maximum proportion of seeds of the weeds named above that may be tolerated in any seeds which shall within the meaning of the Act be considered as free from the seeds of the said weeds.

The bill is designed for the purpose of protecting the farmer from loss too frequently sustained by him by reason of inferior seed being placed on the market. Canadian farmers are unanimous in their demand for stringent legislation, but seedsmen have protested against the measure being made too drastic, and certain modifications have been made to meet their views. According to latest reports, the bill is not being favorably received by the Government, and it is not improbable that it may go over for another session like last year's bill, of which the present is a modification.

Wheat Crop of 1904.

THE Statist, London, Eng., in a recent issue, reports the wheat crop outlook for 1904 in the various wheat-producing countries as follows:

United Kingdom—The area sown is expected to be the smallest on record, viz., about 1,400,000, against 1,620,000 acres last year. The probability, therefore, is that next season the United Kingdom will require more foreign wheat than in any previous season.

Argentina—Argentina has already exported, since January, 1.40 per cent. more wheat than in the corresponding period last year, and there is no longer any doubt that the last crop was a very large one.

United States—Winter wheat: Average condition 15 per cent. worse than last year, on an acreage to be reaped, probably 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 acres less than last year. Spring wheat sowing is rather in arrear, but there is plenty of time for a full if not an increased acreage.

Russia—An unfavorable seed time in the autumn has caused a much smaller area to be sown than last year, and the weather conditions during the winter having been unfavorable, on the whole the present condition is generally poor, although the weather is now much more favorable. Spring sowings are in arrear and on the whole the prospect is for a much smaller crop in Russia than was reaped last year.

Italy—The prospects are good, but not so favorable as at this period last year.

Australia—Recent cables give the crop in New South Wales at 27,200,000 bushels, against 1,600,000 bushels last year; and in South Australia at 13,200,000 bushels, against 6,360,000 bushels last year. The total yield in the south of Australia is estimated at 80,000,000 bushels, against 19,840,000 bushels last year, so that the sulplus for export will be about 44,000,000 bushels, which is more than double the quantity exported in any previous year.

India—The Indian Empire has, it is now tolerably certain, a record crop this year, estimated at about 320,000,000 bushels, against 294,000,000 bushels last year, when the crop allowed of an export of about 48,000,000 bushels.

France—There has been a great improvement in the crop prospects here, but the area sown is smaller than last year Last year's crop is proving to be larger than had been expected, little or no foreign wheat being wanted. The value of home-grown wheat in France is, in fact, 4s to 5s (97c to $1.21) per quarter below an importing point.

Austria-Hungary—Prospects are quite favorable in these countries.

"I wish to goodness we could simplify our Cereal trade and get down to one or two good lines."

So said the other day a sensible grocer. His view is echoed by all grocers.

Of the "one or two good lines"

was one he approved of. He went on to say that wheat and oats in some form or other would always be called for--wheat of course would outsell oats in the hot months.

In a wheat preparation SWISS FOOD excelled all others, and it had demonstrated by many years history its ability to endure against every form of attack and competition.

Roumania—The crop conditions are favorable on the whole, but not so promising as at this time last year.

Germany—The official report for April 15 made the condition of wheat eight points better than last year, and also states that only four-tenths of 1 per cent. of the area sown has had to be replowed, while last year about 14 per cent. was winter killed.

The Canadian wheat outlook is not included, as more recent reports are available from local sources.

Scarcity of Flour.

Numerous reports from Ontario points indicate a growing scarcity of flour, and The Grocer has reliable authority for the statement that a leading Ontario milling industry will shut down one of its most important branches directly the latter has used up present supplies of wheat The reason for the shortage of flour is undoubtedy traceable to a scarcity of wheat. Ontario farmers are holding grain for higher prices, and will in all probability be disappointed. As a consequence of their unwillingness to sell, however, comparatively little wheat is being delivered for milling. A report from Palmerston says that wheat deliveries have ceased almost entirely in that section. Grain reports from Liverpool will doubtless serve as a timely warning to would-be holders, in so far as prices current on the Liverpool market are on a level with those ruling at Ontario country points.

Grain Inspection.

IN a recent editorial, the Manitoba Free Press took occasion to criticise the stand taken by the Toronto and Montreal grain authorities on the new Grain Inspection Bill. The criticism is partly correct and partly not; in so far as it credits Toronto grain men with a desire to allow grain-mixing east of Winnipeg, it is incorrect. As a matter of fact, the present regulation ruling in the west with regard to the prohibition of re-inspection of grain east of Fort William was warmly advocated in the first place by Toronto men, and, moreover, the amendments to the new Grain Inspection Bill proposed by the grain section of Toronto Board of Trade, by which the selection of grain standards is handed over to a board of survey, having supervision of the grain inspectors, corresponds exactly to the system of grain inspection practised in Manitoba. Criticism, is correct in so far as it refers to complaints preferred against Montreal grain certificates by English millers. It is just this individual inspecton that Toronto grain dealers take exception to, and the Free Press is mistaken in classing both Toronto and Montreal as being opposed to grain inspection as it exists in Manitoba at the present time.

New Elevator at Fort William.

Work on the new Empire elevator at Fort William is progressing rapidly, and the concrete work on the structure will in all probability be started this week. The Empire Elevator Co.'s elevator will be completed in time to handle this year's crop. It will have a working-house capacity of 500,000 bushels, and a tile tank storage of 1,250,000 bushels. Its machinery will be capable of unloading 150 cars of grain in ten hours and two 500 foot vessels will be able to tie up at the elevator's wharf and be loaded at the rate of 60,000 bushels an hour.

Seed Growers Organize.

The Macdonald-Robertson Seed Growers' Association of Canada held a convention in Ottawa last week with the object of widening the sphere of influence of the society and giving it a national character similar to that of the Canadian National Live Stock Association. The profit to the individual and the benefit to the country to be gained by the exercise of care in the growth of grain and seed, and trained intelligence in selection of stock for perpetuation. were strongly emphasized as well as the advantage of having a national association and of working together for mutual good by disseminating the results of individual experience. It was decided to form a society under the name of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, to carry on its work under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. It will be remembered that the Macdonald-Robertson Seed Growers' Association arose out of the competitors for the prizes, aggregating $10,000, that were given by Sir William Macdonald for seeds and grain grown in the years 1900, 1901 and 1902. These competitions were conducted under the supervision of Professor Robertson, hence the name of the original association.

Grain Area of Northwest.

Official reports dated June 16 estimate the area under crop in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories as follows: Wheat (1903), 3,123,633; (1904), 3,420,411 acres; increase, 9 1-2 per cent.; oats (1903), 1,101,333, (1904), 1,205,960 acres; increase, 9 1-2 per cent.; barley (1903), 381,135, (1904), 392,569; increase, 3 per cent.; flax (1903), 64,639, (1904), 46,540; decrease, 28 per cent.

It is reported on reliable authority that the rolling mills at Belleville will commence work on June 27.

And the longer your ad runs in THE CANADIAN GROCER the more force it acquires and the harder it hits..

In these days of keen competition it is usually necessary to hit hard to make an impression.

Which means that you must often keep your ad running a long time before it "hits" some readers.

Every ad that appears in these columns has the force of all previous ads behind it—and with each consecutive insertion YOUR ad hits harder.

The first time your ad appears it does not do as much good as the second time—and the second time it is not so effective as the third time.

WALL PAPER.

JAPANESE DESIGNS.

OWING to the recognized beauties and the great possibilities in the Japanese style of decorative art, and the fact that the war has brought things Japanese into renewed favor, Japanese ideas in wall paper might well be followed out.

There was a time, several years ago, when Japanese art was popular. The Mikado was the favorite opera, and homes were filled with things Japanese. This fad died out, and conditions are now favorable for reviving this popularity along more practical lines.

There is a life-giving quality in both Japanese and Chinese art, to which decorative artists have frequently turned for inspiration, and to nothing can this art be more profitably applied than in the designing of wall paper.

PANELS IN WALL PAPER.

WOOD panelling is known to everyone, as well as panelling in stucco work, and with it in everyone's mind is connected the idea of great expense. There is, however, another method of obtaining quite a similar effect at a cost beyond the reach of few. The use of wall paper and moulding in this way is developing rapidly, and as soon as its possibilities are more widely known it will be more generally adopted.

It is in his attention to specialties, in his evident efforts to get what is new and what is best, that a merchant's reputation is built up in his town. He might go on, year after year, laying in nothing but rolls and borders of paper for the ordinary uses, and his business would never grow very large. But let him keep in touch with all the latest ideas and novel effects, and his townspeople will get into the habit of coming to him for the best goods, as well as the cheapest.

In the cut shown is given a good idea of how effective this panel treatment can be, and how simply it is worked out. For the walls there are three papers, called the "style," the portion outside the panels; the "panel," and the "border." At the top of one is a fourth paper, which is intended for the ceiling. Around the panels is a small neat moulding, which carries out accurately the panel idea.

The border is of a special kind, with the edge shaped to the pattern. This is printed in ordinary strips of border with straight edge, and afterwards cut to the pattern.

A Plug Tobacco Factory.

"'LECTRICITY'S done 'way wid de mu-el, en so fuh ez I kin see machinery's gwine do 'way wid de nigger," was the sagacious remark of a son of Ham as he disapprovingly contemplated the recently perfected "stemming machine" his boss was experimenting with in his tobacco factory.

All sorts of short cuts of labor are being fashioned in machinery, and Southern negroes are constantly having many a fat job wrested from them by the introduction of some labor-saving device. It is for this reason that a visit to a Richmond (Va.) tobacco factory, which has not yet succumbed to the fascinations of such devices, and whose pay-roll of hundreds of "hands" is not small, may prove of interest.

The investigation of a "plug" tobacco factory begins on the outside, not on account of any peculiarity in the architecture of the building itself, but because of the delicious odor of "seasoning" which pervades the atmosphere around it and assails the nostrils for several blocks before the building has been reached. It is an indescribable mixture of orris, licorice, strawberries and tobacco, mingled in delicate proportions by every warm south wind that blows from the river.

Entering a huge freight elevator they begin operations on the top floor, to which a sliding door gives access. The room first entered resounds with the hum of voices and the low clink-clink of machinery. At the upper end the tobacco is heaped in great brown piles over the floor, and at each pile sit a dozen or two picturesque looking negro men and women engaged in sorting the leaves into smaller heaps. "We use these bright yellow leaves ('brights,' we call them) as wrappers for the plugs," says the Boss, "and it is the kind of tobacco exclusively used in cigarette factories. The light mahogany goes into the highest priced plugs and the darkest brown into the inferior grades, the cheap plug, such as, I am sure, old Uncle Jonas there has in his pocket."

"Uncle Jonas," a grizzled old darkey of befo-de-wah type, pulls out the questionable brand and looks at it affectionately. "Dis good 'nuff fuh me," he says, grinning lavishly as he held it up for inspection.

"How long have you been working here?" is asked.

"Wall, say, nineteen yeah, off'n on."

"What do you mean by off and on? Don't they give you a steady job?"

"Oh, yas, sah; 'taint dat. 'Off' ginrully means gettin' drunk er gettin' ma'ied. Dey is two things ha'd tuh resis,' marster, en one is likely tuh 'cur ez t'other. My wife is down now wid de final-come-en-git-us," he adds, wagging his head from side to side.

"What does he mean?" the visitors ask.

"Spinal meningitis," explains the "boss" briefly. "Jonas is an old reprobate."

We make our way to the further end of the room, where, in enormous vats, the sweet smelling seasoning of licorice and other ingredients was simmering. "We buy our licorice by the ton," said the "boss," pointing to the huge lumps near the vat. "It is melted here and carried through pipes to little sprayers, which you see over-hanging those big copper, cylinders. Then, as you notice, the tobacco is tossed into the cylinders, which slowly revolve till each leaf is thoroughly saturated with the seasoning, and it is then tossed out and falls through these chutes to the next floor, where we will follow and see what becomes of it."

On the next floor women feeding the leaf tobacco to revolving dryers, half as long and wide as the roof from which it emerges soft and pliable, to be seized by the stemmers, who deprive it of its backbone. These stemmers wear small nickel thimbles over their thumbs, which enable them to seize the end of the stem and peel it quickly from the leaf. They are paid by the pound, and the deftest workers among them average from 75c. to $1 per day.

"What do you smell now?" asked the "boss," as we descend to the next floor.

"Peaches," remark the visitors, with a luxurious sniff, "and ——" "Stop, stop!" he cries, laughing, "or you will guess all our secrets. You probably do not know that the recipes for the different brands of tobacco are invaluable, and that some of the most famous suits ever decided in Southern courts have been those relating to tobacco recipes. No housekeeper of the olden time ever hoarded the hand-me-down recipes of her great-grandmother as religiously as we do ours for the different brands of tobacco. Why, it means our trade, our reputation, everything; so cover up that diagnosing nose of yours and come along.

This room is by far the most interesting yet visited. The temperature, which has risen steadily as we descended, is now stifling to unaccustomed nostrils, and the combination of steam and animal heat is anything but pleasant; though, as the "boss" explained, it is often the only kind of heat those poor people ever know, even in the bitterest weather.

The room is fitted with row after row of high, narrow tables, on each of which stands a small pair of scales, and before each a negro man or woman moulds into shape the embryo "plug," weighing it in the scales and lopping off bits till it is the regulation size. Then wrapping it in the bright yellow leaf which gives such a delicious mellow tone to the "soldiers and sailors' friend."

The shapes thus modelled are piled on wheeling tables and trundled by lightly clad pickaninnies to the great hydraulic presses where they are pressed into the shape commonly known as "the plug."

The moulders stand or sit on high stools before their tables, and there is not a sad face among them, a vital proof of the adage, "The law of happiness lies in labor."

We stop before the table of a tall dignified looking negro who is working with great swiftness and dexterity, and the "boss" informs us that "this is Adams, the leader of John Jasper's old choir. I want you to hear him sing."

In a few moments the word is passed around, and Adams, after many apologies for "de frawg in his th'oat," lifts up one of the best barytone voices we have in Virginia.

De doctors all has 'sputed long
On dis pretense en dat,
But on one thing dey all agree,
Dat larfter makes us fat.

Then the chorus — imagine it—of a hundred and fifty voices, male and female, all of that peculiar soft, mellow timber to be found only in the voice of the Southern negro, the voice cultivated on "'possum and 'taters" in the Winter and "mush-milliums and watermilliums" in Summer, and sweetened with the seasoning of the very plugs they were now moulding and wrapping and weighing:

Den larf—Ha, ha!
Once mo'—He, he!
Fur larfin' makes us fat.
Now a merry, merry rhyme,
Wid de larfter all in time,
For larfin', larfin' makes us fat—
Ha! Ha! Ha!

The very walls vibrate to the staccato,

Now the merry, merry rhyme,
Wid de larfter all in time, and the rafters ring to the sonorous.

Ha! Ha! Ha!

"Dat's de larfin' song," exclaimed Adams with much dignity. "We will now give you 'Ma'chin' th'ough Georgy,' and follow it wid one uv Brer Jasper's favrit 'vival hymns."

"Listen to that bass voice over there," remarks the "boss," as the full tones swell exultingly and carry the air, while the chorus is "marching on." "They always work better when they sing. Time seems to come natural to them, and their fingers move with the rhythm."

Willingly would we have listened to the whole repertory of the "sweet singers in Israel," but that a feeling of lightheadedness hurries us from its enchantment to the fresher atmosphere of the labelling, boxing and shipping departments, where thousands of neat 50-lb. boxes are being prepared for their various journeys to Gibraltar, Calcutta, Australia, Cuba—strange as it may seem—and the African interior.—Western Tobacco Journal.

Anti-Cigarette Bill.

The anti-cigarette bill has passed its second reading in the House of Commons, Ottawa. There has been a disposition in Parliament to treat the thing as a joke. It is very far from a joke, however, to interfere with a branch of trade and the liberty of men who choose to use tobacco to do so in whatever form they like. The bill not only propose to destroy a trade and to curtail the liberty of the subject, but if it is passed it will establish a precedent which meddling and ill-informed people will advance as an argument for further invasions. Not a word that was said in Parliament by the promoter of the bill justified its passage. It has received no support outside of Parliament to indicate that there is even a mistaken general sentiment in its favor. It is not creditable to Parliament that it has been allowed to progress so far. It should be dealt with when next it comes up in a manner that will discourage all advocates of such meddlesome legislation, of which the country is getting far too much.—Montreal Gazette.

Syrian Tobacco.

IN a report from the German consul at Beyroute, that official says: Syria grows various kinds of tobacco. Peculiar to it is the so-called Aburiha, a kind containing saltpetre and burning with a black ash, which grows in the neighborhood of Latakia and comes into the market exclusively from there. In normal years about 4,000 bales of 100 kg. are shipped to Great Britain, which is the only European customer. In 1902 the crop was a particularly large one; 6,509 bales were shipped and 2,000 bales remained unsold at the port to which they had been sent on account of their inferior or mixed quality. Lately the Ottoman Tobacco Regie Co. in Constantinople, which lays claims to the sole right of buying the raw tobacco (but up to now unsuccessfully with regard to Syria), is said to have secured the English deliveries in the place of private dealers. Other kinds of tobacco are cultivated, principally round Damascus, in the Bekaa, Yebel, Saida, and also in the Lebanon. A Beyroute firm is exporting Yebel tobacco from Beyroute at the price of 3.50 to 4.10 marks for 1 kg. f. o. b. Altogether 1,151 dz. of Syrian tobacco was exported from Beyroute in 1902.

Cigarette By-Law Quashed.

An order has been made quashing the by-law to prohibit the sale of cigarettes in Owen Sound, Ont., on the ground that it is too wide, not being limited to retail sales.

English Importations of Cigarettes.

The importation of cigarettes into England for the month of April, 1904, and for four months compared with the two previous years, was as follows:

For April, 1904, 493 lbs.; 1903, 19,892 lbs.; 1902, 28,015 lbs. For four months of 1904, 3,180 lbs.; 1903, 56,141 lbs.; 1902, 44,980 lbs.

TRADE AND COMMERCE ILLUSTRATED

NO. 1—TEA HOUSE OF T. H. ESTABROOKS, ST. JOHN, N.B.

THE success of the tea trade of T. H. Estabrooks, of St. John, N. B., is remarkable. Mr. Estabrooks began business on his own account in May, 1894, with one clerk, in a small store on Dock street, St. John. For the first five or six years the trade in tea occupied only a portion of his attention. To-day he has one of the finest tea warehouses in Canada, employs over seventy persons, has sixteen travelers on the road, has branch houses in Toronto and Winnipeg, and his "Red Rose" tea is sold from Newfoundland to Vancouver. From the moment when he first devoted his whole attention to the tea business, importing, blending and packing teas, the growth of his trade has been phenomenal.

Tea warehouse of T. H. Estabrooks, corner of Mill and North streets and Drury Lane, St. John, N.B.

New Warehouse.

As already stated, his new warehouse into which he moved a few months ago, is one of the finest in Canada. It is a five-storey brick building, with basement, fronting 114 feet on Mill street and 110 feet on Drury Lane, while one end fronts on North street. The average width of the building between Mill street and Drury Lane is about 70 feet. The location is on one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, and near the Intercolonial Railway station.

Designed and built especially for the tea trade, the building, from top floor to basement, affords every facility that experience and forethought could suggest, for the clean, economical, thorough and rapid handling of teas, from the original package through the various processes of testing, blending, packing, labelling, and preparing for shipment to customers all over Canada.

From the standpoint of fire risk, the building is the best constructed in St. John. Each floor is separate. There are no openings between them except such as are protected by automatic fire-proof appliances. It would therefore take a fire several hours to work through from one floor to another. The staircases and elevator are in brick shafts, with fire-proof doors.

The view from the roof of the building, looking out over city and harbor, is a magnificent one.

The Offices.

The offices, which are entered from the corner of Mill and North streets, are about 50 feet square, with plate glass windows on three sides, making them exceptionally bright and cheerful. They are very handsomely fitted up in quartered oak, the divisions being of quartered oak and plate glass, and the furniture made to correspond. Facing the entrance is the cashier and salesman's desk and counter.

To the right of the entrance is the large sample room, with two plate glass windows fronting North street. Around the fittings of this room are metal sample cases, containing about 1,200 large sample tins. The lower part of the tasting table, which is next to the windows, and is 18 feet long, is a cabinet of drawers in which samples of teas blended each day are kept for future reference.

Opening from the sample room is the private office of Mr. Estabrooks. Seated at his desk, he has an unobstructed view of the whole of the offices, and of the shipping room in the rear. His desk is also fitted with electric calls to all other desks in the offices.

In the back portion of the large room are the general offices, where the ledger keepers and clerks are at work. A private telephone system connects the offices with all parts of the building. They are, moreover, provided with very handsome electric light fixtures.

A large vault adjoins the office, and there is in addition a coat room and lavatory.

A Million Pounds.

All teas as they arrive are taken in the original packages to the fifth floor of the building, so that they may be handled only once, passing from floor to floor downward again to the shipping room on the ground floor. This fifth floor has a very high ceiling, so that tea can be piled eight chests high. The great room has a capacity of 10,000 chests, or about a million lbs. of tea.

It may as well be noted just here that in January and February, 1904, Mr. Estabrooks imported no less than 885,586 lbs. of tea, so that his huge building is none too large.

On this fifth floor is the milling and sifting machine, which is operated by an electric motor. At one operation it cuts the large leaves to a uniform size, and sifts out the dust and broken tea. It has a capacity of 100 lbs. in every eight minutes.

Near it are two hoppers, leading to the great blenders on the floor below. These hoppers are fitted with automatic, fire-proof shutters in the bottom, so that when the tea is dumped in the operator has a chance to examine it before it goes to the blender. It is very interesting to watch the operation of these hoppers.

The Blending Floor.

On the fourth floor are the two blenders, of 2,000 and 800 lbs. capacity respectively. They are also operated by an electric motor. Teas come down from the hoppers on the fifth floor into these blenders, and when the blending process is completed they are poured out into metal chests and emptied again into hoppers holding 2,000 lbs. each. These connect with electric automatic weighing machines on the next floor below.

The bulk teas, however, are packed beside the blenders, on the fourth floor. They are put up in metal chests of 100 to 120 lbs. each; metal half chests of 50 to 60 lbs. each; and tins and caddies of 3, 5, 10 and 20 lbs. each, as well as in other sizes. These are lacquered and labelled, and present the very attractive appearance so familiar to those who handle them throughout the country. "Nothing can be done too well" is the motto; and the greatest attention is given to the smallest details. To this rule Mr. Estabrooks attributes a large measure of his success.

A very noticeable feature throughout the building is the care and cleanliness rigidly enforced.

On the fourth floor are also stored some of the empty packages and bulk teas that are packed ready to go out. While "Red Rose" tea has a prominent place everywhere in the building, there are a large number of brands, many of them standard, and some special ones put up for important firms in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and the Northwest, as well as Newfoundland.

Seven Packing Machines.

On the third floor are seven packing machines, together with the electric and automatic weighing machines. The latter, which seems almost human in its operation, has a capacity of 16 packages per minute. An important fact is that the weight must be absolutely correct. There is never such a thing as a complaint that "Red Rose" tea is short weight.

Some of the packing machines are of a new type, not used by any other Canadian firm, and are a great improvement on the older style. Each machine has a capacity of about 4,000 packages per day. Packages of all sizes, 2 oz., ¼ lb., ½ lb., and 1 lb., can be put up by simply adjusting the machines. The packages from the machines are placed on trays holding 50 each, and are sent by an iron chute, which has an automatic, self-closing attachment, to the floor below.

The new packing machines are operated by a separate electric motor.

The great bulk of the third floor, outside the packing room, is used for storing stock. Indian and Ceylon teas are used very largely, and the stock embraces a great variety of these, in all grades of blacks and greens. The greens are used largely in Quebec, Ontario and farther west, and are fast displacing Japans. A large stock of Japan is carried, however, as well as Chinas and Oolongs.

On this third floor also is a room for the convenience of the men. It has lavatory, gas stove, table and chairs. Here the men may heat their lunch and smoke—the only place in the building where smoking is permitted.

Labelling Floor.

The package teas, when they pass from the third floor by an iron chute, go to the labelling room on the second floor, and after being labelled are stored on racks to dry. The labelling is done by girls seated each at a separate table beside an endless belt running from the gumming machine. The labelling of the packages is done very quickly, and they are carried on trays out of reach of each other by means of a new contrivance of rollers. The girls are able to sit very comfortably at their work, and have on the same floor a cloak room, etc., as well as a room for their private use.

When labelled, the packages are placed on racks to dry. To give an idea of the capacity of these racks, which occupy most of the area of this floor, it may be stated that 200,000 lbs. of package teas can be stored there.

Shipping.

When the packages are dry enough they are taken from the racks to give place to others, and packed in cases of various sizes for shipment. They then go down the elevator to the receiving and shipping floor, in rear of the offices, which has two large doors opening on Drury Lane. The quantity of tea shipped out every week is enormous.

It will be seen from this description that everything in the process of preparing the teas for shipment works downward, ensuring the greatest economy, and that in every detail the work is marked by cleanliness, care, and the best that experience has suggested for effective work.

With regard to the heating of the building, the warehouse generally has steam heat, and there is a separate hot water plant for the offices. The greatest care is taken in looking after the comfort of all employes, as the best guarantee of the faithful performance of their duties. The establishment is a credit to the city, and to the business acumen and tireless industry of its proprietor.
